Written Especially for the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

AMERICAN heiresses who elected to take their money across the water to European husbands and American wives who choose to reside abroad have been joined with American Ambassadors as a target of criticism in their own country for so many years that most of us are not old enough to remember when it began.

The war was not one week old before the Ambassadors had amply demonstrated that they were Americans of the old-fashioned pattern, patriotic, resourceful, generous, able in a few hours to shake off the habits of wealthy leisure and, for the sake of their compatriots in distress, setting to work with such long hours as no "section hand" would accept from his "boss."

The war is two months old and as the wounded soldiers are being taken from the battlefield to the hospital, the American women of Europe are helping to receive and care for them; in their own palatial residences converted into convalescent homes, in the hospitals which they have equipped to meet the urgent demand; dressed as Red Cross nurses instead of in ball costume, not afraid to scrub floors and wash soiled linen, ministering to the sick with the self-effacing devotion characteristic of the highest womanhood. Those whose husbands and sons are fighting with the colors are accepting the burdens laid upon their hearts with a courage and fortitude worthy of the descendants of the noble American wives and mothers of 1776 and 1860.

In Great Britain, France, Germany, Austria-Hungary and Russia, the solemnity of sacrifice and tragedy has wiped out superficial standards. Character which is rooted and grounded in exalted abnegation can alone stand the test. American womanhood transplanted to European soil, put to the proof in the melting pot of war, has been freed of its dross in the fierce fire.

Work of American Women in Paris.

PARIS, which of all the European capitals so particularly belongs to Americans, whether the bond be one of matrimony or merely residence, has been the especial object of their solicitude in her hour of bitter trial. The American hospital at Neuilly, a few miles from the city, which was established in 1906 by the co-operation of resident Americans with Ambassador Henry White, and which soon acquired the reputation of being one of the best hospitals on the Continent, was immediately placed at the disposal of the French Government after war was declared.

But its limited capacity of 35 beds was far from enough to measure the American gift and the American Ambulance Committee has obtained from the Government the use of the new Pasteur High School at Neuilly. There they have 1000 beds for the use of the wounded soldiers, where they are treated by American physicians under the guidance of Dr. Joseph A. Blake of New York, Dr. Charles Poland, a former army surgeon, and Dr. George B. Hayes. A party of six young surgeons left New York a week ago as volunteers in answer to the call sent out by Dr. Blake, among them Dr. Richard Derby, whose wife, the former Ethel Roosevelt, left behind her 6-months-old baby son to accompany her husband and act as a nurse. Fifteen surgeons, Americans living in Paris, and 20 more as an emergency squad, were ready when the hospital received its first consignment of 50 wounded soldiers, Sept. 9. This group included fair-skinned Britishers and dark-hued Turcos from Madagascar, Tunis and Algiers. The committee's own motor ambulances brought them from the battlefields near Meaux, receiving for treatment only the more serious cases, since there are few hospitals where they could obtain equally scientific treatment.

Gen[illegible]allieni, the commandant of Paris, accomp[illegible]d by Minister of Justice Briand, paid an unex[illegible]d visit to the soldiers a few days after their [illegible]al at Neuilly.

Th[illegible]nial labor of the establishment, which mon[illegible]not buy these days anywhere in Paris, wa[illegible] done at the hospital by elegent Americ[illegible] whose names have been heretofore as[illegible] with nothing but luxury, and who are [illegible]mong the famous hostesses of Parisian so[illegible] Mrs. Herman Harjes, Mrs. Munro and M[illegible] K. Vanderbilt were washing dishes in the k[illegible] having reported every morning at 8 o[illegible] for such duties. Other women possessed o[illegible]ions, had likewise declined to desert their b[illegible]d Paris in her hour of distress, but were [illegible]e hospital to do anything that was needed, cleaning floors, down on their knees with [illegible]r sleeves rolled up like any other scrubwomen, [illegible]he dressing of ghastly wounds as assistants to [illegible] regularly trained nurses whose wages they [illegible]ve guaranteed.

Anna Gould's Palace a Hospital.

T[illegible] much-discussed pink palace of the former Anna Gould, in the Bois de Boulogne, which is said to have cost some three or [illegible]illions, and where, as the Duchess of Tal[illegible], she has been a happy wife and mother for a few recent years, has in it today nothing too good for the French soldiers when they shall need it as a refuge. Her motor cars, driven by the Duke himself, ply between Paris and Bordeaux, or between Paris and the battlefields, carrying important messages.

War had hardly been declared before the Duchess of Talleyrand had opened a workshop a few squares from her home in the Rue de la Pompe, to give employment for the women whose masculine supporters had gone to the war, but who could not give sufficient proof of the legal or stable nature of the relation to qualify as recipients of state aid. How numerous is this unhappy class of women in Paris under ordinary peaceful conditions, only the long residents of the pleasure-loving capital knows; and of all the women left behind, their position is the most desperate. In the whole of Paris, Anna Gould, with her American broad-minded helpfulness, seems to be the only benefactor to them. They receive three meals a day and are paid for the sewing which they are doing for the Red Cross. The Duchess has cancelled a promised visit to New York to remain in Paris to work.

The Duke of Talleyrand is a subject of France, but his little son, 5 years old, the Prince of Sagan, is a subject of the Kaiser and under the legal control of Kaiser's assistant master of ceremonies, Count von Kanetz. The appointment was made three years ago by the Berlin Court, when Talleyrand formally renounced his rights to the German estate of his extravagant father, the Duchy of Sagan, in Prussia, thus freeing it from its heavy mortgages and giving it to the son intact. The house and gardens are among the most magnificent in Europe and it is understood that the Kaiser will have the use of the whole estate if he needs it for a hospital. Mercy and pity can give alike from the same hands to the soldiers on both sides who are wounded in the defense of their country.

Enrolled as Volunteer Helpers.

MRS. PETER COOPER HEWITT has filled her mansion in the Boise de Boulogne with sewing women, making shirts and rolling bandages for the Red Cross.

Mrs. Vanderbilt has given her town house in the neighborhood and her chateau in the country for the same purpose, while Mrs. Edith Wharton is keeping sewing girls employed at a little shop near the Bon Marche.

Mrs. James Hazen Hyde, formerly Miss Martha Leishman and more recently the Countess Lewis Contaut-Biron, is working as hard in France for the soldiers of the republic as her sister, the Duchess of Croy, before her marriage Miss Nancy Leishman, is working for the soldiers of the Kaiser in Germany.

Miss Anne Morgan, Miss Elizabeth Marbury and Miss Elsie de Wolf left Versailles after their villa was razed by order of the commandant of Paris, who needed the site for his artillery, and these ardent friends of France established a hospital and saw it in working order before they departed.

Mrs. W. E. Corey, the Mabelle Gilman of other days, has long ago placed her husband's splendid country place, the Chateau Villegnes, near Paris, at the disposal of France. Its 225 acres lie between the outer and inner ring of forts and it is not likely to escape the attention of the Germans, should they penetrate that far. The fame of its lavish hospitality has been spread further than the Fatherland by the Russian Grand Dukes who have been its frequent guests.

The Duke of Richelieu, who married Miss Eleanor Wise of Baltimore a year or so ago and gave her an enviable position among the aristocracy of Europe, has been called to serve under the French colors along with the Marquis of Ganey, the husband of the former Miss Ridgeway of New York, who, with their three sons, are all in the ranks, fighting side by side with workingmen. The Marquise de Bretiel, who was Miss Garner and the most sought-after woman in Parisian society last year, when she acted as guardian and hostess of the Prince of Wales, has given to her adopted country her two young sons, near to the age of the Prince and who were his companions in Paris, but now are in the ranks of the common soldier, marching and fighting with nobody's sons.

Prince Michel Murat, the husband of Helen MacDonald Stallo, is a trained cavalry officer and has an important command, but the Duke la Rochefoucauld, Maggie Mitchell's husband, whose title was ancient and famous centuries before Murat's was in existence, is not too proud today, at 51, to serve his country in the ranks.

Duchess of Marlborough Busy.

THE Duchess of Marlborough, who was Consuelo Vanderbilt, has been the moving spirit in London in organizing American assistance for the British soldiers. Her London home, Sunderland House, has been the center of activities which have brought about a magnificent hospital gift to Lord Kitchener, including the donation of the use of her country home near Torquay for the wounded men placed under the care of the American Red Cross.

But in Budapest the Countess Lazlo Szechenyi, who was Gladys Vanderbilt, her cousin, is doing more for the Hungarian soldiers, by fate of war the sworn enemies of the British, than any other woman in Hungary. Her palace in the Andrassy boulevard, one of the most splendid in Budapest, which she remodeled regardless of expense a few years ago, was turned into a barracks during the period of mobilization and 650 men were quartered beneath its roof. It is now a Red Cross hospital. The Countess and the former Miss Daly, the wife of the Hungarian Count Sigray, are Red Cross nurses there, working tirelessly, going to the railroad station to meet the soldiers as they pass through the city to the front, carrying baskets of food to hand to them in the trains and cheering them up with inspiring words.

Both Count Szechenyi and Count Sigray joined their regiments at the outbreak of war, arriving in Hungary from the United States just in time. Sigray is reported among those captured by the Russians and is said to be in the Russian military prison in Odessa. It is not long since he was at Newport, a guest of honor at the dinner parties.

In Vienna, Mrs. Penfield, the wife of the American Ambassador, is devoting her time industriously to the Red Cross, with Madame Dumba, the wife of the Austro-Hungarian Ambassador in Washington. Madame Dumba is a Russian, belonging to the famous family of Lieven, which is closely related to that of the present Russian Ambassador in London, Count Benckendorff, one of the diplomatic officers whom Austria blames for the war. Countess Ferdinand Colloerdo-Mansfield, who was Nora Iselin of New York, also is enlisted in the Red Cross, having arrived in Vienna with her husband, who was Secretary of Embassy in Paris, where he is, of course, no longer allowed. He is acting as confidential adviser to the Foreign Secretary, Count Berchtold, in Vienna.

The Duchess of Vizeu, the American Anita Stewart, whose husband is a son of the pretender to the throne of Portugal, though an Austrian subject, has supported him in his desire to enlist under the flag of the Emperor Francis Joseph. He is 36, but he is fighting no less bravely than his father, who is 61. The two wives, one an American of honorable democratic birth, and the other a proud Princess by descent, are waiting together for news of their husbands, not knowing what sorrow the morrow may bring to either or both of them.

Caring for the German Wounded.

THE Duke of Croy and his sovereign, the German Kaiser, are friends again, and the Duke is serving as a Lieutenant in Gards du Corps, believed to be among the regiments in France commanded by the Crown Prince at Verdun, while the Duchess of Croy, Nancy Leishman that was, is at the disposal of the Kaiserin to serve in any capacity which the Red Cross may direct. The Duke's castles and estates in Germany have been opened to receive the wounded soldiers, and his Hungarian chateau, at Karapancsa, where his father died, has been offered to his uncle, the Archduke Frederick, the commander in chief of the Austro-Hungarian army, for the use of his men as a hospital.

At Munich the Countess Bernstorff, the American wife of the German Ambassador to the United States (formerly a Miss Luckemeyer of New York), is giving all her time to the Red Cross, while the former Muriel White, Ambassador Henry White's only daughter, who married Count Herman Seherr-Thoss, is prepared to respond to the call of the Kaiserin, who is in charge of all Red Cross relief work.

Count Herman is a reserve officer, like the Duke of Croy, in the Gard du Corps, the crack regiment of the German army. Count Herman is in France, with the regiment. It was in Paris that he and Muriel White were married a few short years ago, and where they had a host of friends among the families whose men are enrolled under the French colors. The castle in upper Silicia at Dobrau, which is the ancestral home of the Counts of Scherr-Thoss, and where Muriel White makes her home, is, like all the important estates throughout the empire, open to receive and care for as many wounded soldiers as the Kaiser may send.

The great American patriot and statesman, John Jay, has six grandsons in the Germany army, sons of the daughter who became the wife of the German diplomat and soldier, Gen. von Schwienitz, when John Jay was American Minister in Vienna. The Prince de Lynar, one of the most important young military men of Germany, is also the son of an American mother, Miss Amelia Parsons of Columbus, O. The Countess von Lynden, formerly Miss Loring Andrews of New York, has given her second son, who bears his American grandfather's name, to the navy of Admiral von Tirpitz. Young Count Loring von Lynden had already distinguished himself before the war began as an officer, serious-minded and hard-working in his profession, and it will not be surprising if the opportunities of war lead him to fame.

The Countess Johannes von Sierstorff (Mi Mary Knowlton of Brooklyn), who is said to ha spent $50,000 to entertain the Kaiser for one d shooting three years ago, at her husband's e in Silesia, has placed that castle at the Kais disposal for the Red Cross, establishing her

Historian Ferrero Justifies the Turks' Revolt Against Conditions Imposed Upon Them by Powers

Noted Italian Historian, Writing for the Post-Dispatch, Declares That New Ottoman Regime Must Begin When Peace Is Made, and That Warring Nations Must Reward Dependent Races That Have Aided Them

> GUGLIELMO FERRERO.

SO there is another surprise! And this comes to us from the East. Turkey also has taken advantage of the European cataclysm. It has taken advantage of it to abolish the capitulations—fiscal and judicial privileges conceded for centuries to Europeans in the Ottoman Empire—thus accomplishing in one day a veritable revolution in the Mussulman dominions.

Is it then true that all the old world is tottering before our eyes, and that, at every moment, some privilege encrusted on the social order is breaking off and falling, thrown down by the earthquake of war?

I have no great love for Turkey or for the way in which she has been governed in recent years. I must, however, recognize that her revolt against the capitulations is justified.

The idea that gave birth to the capitulations—placing Europeans living in the Turkish Empire beyond the Musselman laws and the Ottoman judges—was just and reasonable in origin, considering the difference between our legal code and that of the Mussulman. But in its application the idea has degenerated. The capitulations had become one of the most unjust and baleful privileges that Europeans in the Ottoman Empire have arrogated.

Radical Civil Reforms Necessary.

TO abolish the capitulations as Turkey would like, is not possible. The abolition will have to be accomplished by radical civil and judicial reforms, which Europe will be able to impose on the Ottoman Empire when peace is made.

But the capitulations, as they were until a few days ago, will not be revived, if Turkey has the good sense to be content with this, which however, is a great victory over Europe, and if she does not mix up, through greed of territory, in the European war.

She could not have chosen the moment more happily, for it is not at all probable that any one among the European Powers wishes at the present time to compel Turkey, by force, to desist from her purpose.

The two Teutonic empires who would like her as an ally, as well as the powers of the Triple Entente who want her to remain neutral, are not sufficiently interested to provoke her in this matter. And if the capitulations are abolished for six months, it will not be possible, when the war is over, to re-establish them as they were. It will be necessary to establish a new and more just regime. Another fragment of old Europe will have vanished forever!

Sees Better Things for Poland.

SINGULAR contradiction of human affairs. In the minds of the people and of the state that let it loose, this war ought to have been the noisiest triumph of force that the world ever had seen. Yet, although one would be rash to try to foresee the end of the cataclysm, of one thing we may be certain: That more or less all the people of Europe, Asia and Africa, who are today oppressed by the domination of this or that great European power, will profit by it, if not by reacquiring all their liberty, at least by making the yoke more easy.

I have spoken of the promises that Austria, Russia and Germany have made to the Poles. It is not altogether certain that the victor will remember them all, but at least he cannot forget them all. However goes the war—except in the event of Germany triumphing alone over all her enemies—Poland will live better in the new peace than in the old.

England and France have had much recourse to their colonies in Asia and Africa for supplies and men. Indians, Algerians, Tunisians, Sinegalese, are already fighting or will soon be fighting in France against the German Empire. When the war is over, England and France will have to recompense their colonies with autonomy, liberty and gentler rule, for the assistance furnished and the blood that has been spilt.

"Empires Wearing Themselves Out."

THE Mohammedan world is agitated at this moment. It is asking if the day has not arrived for profiting by the tremendous struggle that divides the Christian world into two camps, in order to shake the yoke of Christian dominion. It is improbable that the day of rescue has yet arrived, but it is certain that the regime under which Musselmans are held by Europeans will be softened after the war.

The Austrian Empire is trying today to woo Slavs and Italians, Czechs and Hungarians, because it needs them all. If the empire shall be destroyed in the war, all these oppressed peoples will reacquire their liberty in some form. If the empire shall be victorious, it will have to treat them with more kindness after the war in compensation for the enormous sacrifices of blood and gold that have been made by every race.

The phenomenon may at first sight seem strange: but it is almost a law of the history of the old world, from the French Revolution, that the great empires of Europe are wearing themselves out in the struggles they engage in, to the profit of oppressed peoples, of minor nationalities, of weaker states.

Belgium and Holland have been able to grow and increase in strength between the rivals France and England. Italy was able to free herself from foreign dominion and reconstitute her unity, thanks to the antagonism between Austria and France that the First Empire left as a legacy to the Second.

"Brighter Days Dawn for the Unhappy."

GREECE, Servia, Bulgaria and Roumania have been founded, enlarged and strengthened, in the midst of the military, diplomatic and economic struggles between Turkey, Austria, Russia, England and Germany.

Therefore, it is to be believed that brighter days are dawning for the unhappier peoples of Europe. Ever since the French Revolution, all the wars between the great states of Europe have benefited minor and weaker states; so there is no doubt that this vast war also will produce the same effect.

And it will produce it in larger measure than those that have gone before, because the number of great powers engaged in it is greater, and greater is the determination with which all are striving to weaken each other.

It was by chance that the initial occasion of this war of giants was supplied by a little people, the Servians, that is trying to found a vigorous vital State. Nor is this case an exception to a general law of life. Always and everywhere the small flourish on the discords and fights of the great; so, like a balance, eternally turns the wheel of fortune, lifting up those who were below, casting down those who were exalted.

Many Injustices to Be Abolished.

THESE considerations may somewhat temper the bitterness and the grief that every sensitive heart is experiencing in so savage a struggle. A tempest of iron and fire is devastating Europe, but when this shall cease many injustices will be mitigated or abolished, many privileges cancelled or destroyed.

Even if Turkey, in abolishing the capitulations aimed at nothing but taking a scandalous and disastrous privilege from her midst, she will have succeeded in finding in this crisis some compensation for the many misfortunes that have befallen her in recent years.

And the strengthening of so many that were weak will urge the world on to another step toward that stable equilibrium of a sincere and enduring peace, that so many philosophers and facts have been dreaming, for so long.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

The Power to Make War.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Please accept thanks for the "White Papers." Is it not a pity and shame on the part of all concerned and having power to avert the calamity, that such a source of misery and death to so many innocent unblamable victims, whose fate is "not to make reply, but only to do and die," should be in the hands of a few practically absolute monarchs, as though they were but helpless pieces on a chess board, with only the painful exceptions that they have living bodies and souls but with no more volition in the premises, than if they were manikins without blood relationship to human souls and living bodies?

C. H. HUGHES.

Where Is the Sword?

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Will Dr. Bartholdt please indicate where the sword presented to Washington by Frederick may now be seen? All Americans as well as Germans are interested in the story. AMERIGO.

A Suggestion for the Police.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

For the last two years the tough element of young men have made a practice of parading the streets on Veiled Prophet night, hitting women and girls on the body with doubled newspapers. Couldn't something be done to stop this? We do not object to reasonable fun, but this is far beyond decency. FAY NORRIS.

Overworked Police.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

If your tenant has no garbage can, you are haled into the police court. If your ashpit is full you are called into police court. If your stop-box top is broken, where the city turns off the water you are called into police court. The police are so busy downtown signaling the autos and cars to go ahead that pedestrians can't cross the street. And if you have a house vacant 48 hours all the lead pipe is immediately cut out and nobody is ever caught or prosecuted for the job.

The police have no time to capture criminals; they are too busy doing other things.

THE TRAGEDY OF THE HARVEST.

Fitzpatrick's cartoon on this page directs attention to an overlooked but a somber and a significant figure in modern American life—the harvest hand.

He is not today, as he was in happier times, the son of the neighboring farmer, nor the "hired man" working the year around upon the place, nor the vigorous youth from the nearby town, earning "college money" in the gathering of the grain. He is today one of an army of "occasional laborers" who wander up and down the land in search of temporary employment; men mostly without fixed habitations or families or friendly ties other than those formed along the road; citizens disfranchised by their poverty and homelessness and so turned away from the old American ideal toward new social doctrines which alarm the conservative and seem alien to our institutions.

It is from the ranks of these men that the so-called "industrial armies," which alternately terrify and are scourged by town and village authorities, are recruited. It is they who are sowing across the continent, in the farthest grain fields as well as in the most crowded city factories, the imported practice of "sabotage"—doing injury to the employer's property to force him to pay wages satisfactory to the workers. For example, threshing machines have been blown up in wheat fields all over the farther Northwest this year. Men discharged because they struck for $3 a day are found to have hidden handfuls of parlor matches inside the sheaves. When these are fed into the machine, the matches ignite, the dust explodes and the machine is wrecked.

Hot with wrath, local authorities deputize regiments of constables and they drive the offenders on—to the next community. Political agitators camp with them, preach revolutionary doctrines, affright the timid natives with their strong talk, are arrested, jailed, raise the cry of "free speech suppressed"; shots are fired, heads broken, violence banishes reason—and nobody troubles to look beneath the surface and inquire what it all means, how it has come to pass and what can be done to put an end to it fairly.

Early this summer the cry went up from the wheat-growing states of the West for harvest hands. State Labor Commissioners said 100,000 men would be needed. Word went East, to the cities where many were idle, that here was employment for them, at $3 a day, on wheat farms stretching north from Oklahoma to the Canadian border. Nobody troubled to calculate with exactness just how many men were needed in each state, and when. It happened that too many came—too many workers for the jobs. Farmers who were willing to pay $3 a day when it looked as if they couldn't get men enough, were unwilling to pay more than $1.50 or $2 a day on a glutted labor market.

These men had come, thousands of them, long distances; many riding the brakebeams under the freight cars, hungry, thirsty, ragged, semi-outcasts, eager to earn their bread by the hardest labor. Is it surprising that they very often rejected offers of less than the $3 a day they were led to expect? That, seeing the landowners assured of high prices for enormous crops, they resented being bought like cattle by the rule of supply and demand?

So the hundred thousand came—twice as many as the farms could use—and the superfluous ones found themselves regarded not as friends who had rallied to the rescue of the country's crops, nor even as human beings entitled to a chance to earn their bread, but, in too many communities, as "dirty tramps," "professional panhandlers," "a social menace," wild men deserving nothing better than to be driven, with gun and club, on to the next community.

The nation has made a beginning of measures intended to end this brutally ignorant, wasteful, anti-social method of providing men for the harvest. It has ordered labor agencies established in 21 leading industrial centers. The states should co-operate, by making thorough, intelligent studies of their labor supply and labor need; by putting crooked private employment agencies out of business and assuming rigid control of that business themselves; by guiding men where they are wanted and away from where they are not needed.

PEACE DAY.

Men of all creeds and of no creed can at least share in the spirit of President Wilson's proclamation designating today for peace prayers.

Those who do not believe in the efficacy of prayer must believe in the efficacy of thought. The concentration of the minds of 90,000,000 of people on peace linked with ardent desire for peace is a moral force the power of which cannot be measured.

Let every man today think and desire peace and enthrone good will in his own heart.

COTTON SITUATION CLARIFYING.

The South now knows that the Federal Government will neither enact a law restricting next year's cotton planting, nor valorize this year's surplus.

The South now knows the cotton states' legislatures will not, because some of them by reason of constitutional inhibitions cannot, enact uniform laws restricting next year's cotton acreage.

The South knows restriction of 1915 acreage, to not more than 50 or 60 per cent of 1914 acreage, is absolutely necessary to hold the price of the 1914 crop up to an average of eight or nine cents and to prevent a completer smash of prices by another big crop next year.

Therefore the South, through the co-operative action of cotton associations, farmers' unions, farm landlords, bankers and merchants, will do its best to cut next year's cotton acreage without the aid of legislative action.

Southern opinion generally, in all classes, is that the cotton growers ought to, and will, market the first third of their crop as soon as it is gathered and baled, within the next thirty days, selling at current prices to get money with which to pay part of their debts at store and bank.

Most growers, lacking capital or credit with which to hold, will sell the second third of their crop during November and early December. They may or may not get a price for it equal to current prices. If the European war ends within 30 days, permitting resumption of European cotton mills, the price should go a shade higher than present quotations. If it doesn't, prices may decline a cent or two per pound. Whatever the price, most of the growers will sell, because they will have no alternative.

The minority financially competent to hold the last third of the crop will do so, as long as may be necessary to get a fair price for it. The knowledge that that final third will be held off the market, a year or longer if need be, should and probably will prevent the spinners from counting too confidently upon cheaper cotton around the year's end.

THE BUSCH HOTEL PLAN.

Nothing but imperative necessity to guard the city's plans for the parkway improvement from Twelfth street to Grand from serious impairment should induce the municipal government to reject the proposal of August A. Busch to erect and equip a costly monumental hotel building at the east end of the parkway.

St. Louis wants a hotel of the highest class in architecture, equipment and management. We want the beautiful building. We want the investment of several millions. We particularly need in these times of depression the inauguration of a great building enterprise of this kind. We particularly want the monumental building as an example of the kind of building which should be erected contiguous to parkways, parks and public squares.

There is another reason in support of the project. Mr. Busch sustains his father's subscription of $50,000 to a new opera house to be built at the Grand avenue entrance to the parkway. Impliedly he pledges his efforts and potent influence to the completion of that much-needed project.

Mr. Busch's letter to the Board of Public Works is eminently fair. He offers to build the hotel, if it is approved by the board, on plans in harmony with the parkway plans. If the hotel project interferes with the city's plans he will abandon it and sell the land to the city at cost. Of course, the Busch property will have to bear a heavy share of the parkway tax.

Mr. Busch's generous intent and attitude toward St. Louis in this matter deserves recognition and appreciation.

President Kinsey of the Board of Public Improvements takes the view that a building of the kind planned by Mr. Busch will enhance, instead of detracting from, the beauty and value of the parkway. Mayor Kiel shares Mr. Kinsey's opinion which seems to be sound.

We believe this view will be generally accepted by experts and the public. There should be no unnecessary delay in arriving at a final decision and acting upon it.

The Board of Supervisors, by a vote of 12 to 6, has just rejected a proposal to cut rates, at the risk of turning a surplus into a deficit.

THE OUTRAGE AT ALBANY.

Justice Chester of the Supreme Court for Albany County rejects the motion of Mr. Roosevelt's lawyers for a change of venue in the $50,000 libel suit brought against him by Boss William Barnes.

Judge Chester is manifestly one of those "men on the bench" who "believe that they, not the people, fix the standards of social and industrial justice." Albany is Boss Barnes' home town, but this member of a reactionary, machine-controlled judiciary pretends that a case in which Mr. Roosevelt will be the defendant can be given a fair trial there. It was to guard against precisely such outrages as this that "My Charter of Democracy" was framed at Columbus and elaborated during the campaign of 1912.

Temporarily no recourse exists, but rural Tory Judges who show so clearly that they do not understand and sympathize with popular needs bring nearer the Bull Moose millenium that will right all judicial wrongs. Decisions on change of venue motions must be included among the judicial decisions made subject to review in a referendum of the justice-loving voters.

POLITICAL PESSIMISTS.

An interesting phenomenon of the moment is the very large number of Texas statesmen who are now in concert, or coincidentally, declaring the nominating primary system is a failure, and that Texas must go back to the convention system.

This uprising would be of more serious portent than it is were it not a fact that most of the men engaged in it were recent victims of the primary system.

UNCLE SAM'S WOMAN ATTORNEY.

Certainly that woman's "sphere" about which we hear so much receives more than a negligible enlargement in the appointment of Mrs. Annette Adams as Assistant District Attorney at San Francisco.

The public offices women have heretofore been permitted to fill are confined largely to certain county and municipal offices of special character and a few places on state boards. Aside from an occasional postmastership their opportunities in the Federal jurisdiction are restricted to subordinate positions of a clerical nature. In the official list of hundreds of bureau chiefs at Washington the only name clearly recognizable as that of a woman is Julia C. Lathrop of the Children's Welfare Bureau of the Labor Department. Even the Bureau of Education has but two women as division chiefs.

Mrs. Adams' appointment is a fitting recognition of the women voters of California. In all parts of the country women practitioners at the bar are daily showing adequacy to practical requirements and exemplifying high professional standards. The course of recent legislation has rather tended to increase the number of feminine offenders against the Federal law. A woman in the District Attorney's office will have an advantage in dealing with them. We may be confident that Mrs. Adams will be a worthy representative of Uncle Sam, upholding his dignity and showing a conscientious regard for the quality of his justice.

THE HOMERIC SERIES.

WHEN Homer smote his blooming lyre
The wars were not so very bad,
And therefore worthy to inspire
The latent genius that he had.
To fight was little but a fad
Among brave men in those old days,
And almost anyone was glad
To help perpetuate the craze.
They didn't hurt each other much when Homer sang his stirring lays.

A MAN who kept behind his shield
Ran little risk of getting hurt,
And great heroics were revealed,
As Homer ventures to assert.
The least of soldiers then was girt
With courage, facing but a spear,
And one could well afford to flirt
With death nor having much to fear.
The self same heroes went to war and fought and bled year after year.

THE Muse forsook the field of war
When men began to shoot to kill,
And watched the battle from afar
And sorrowing upon a hill.
She felt no more the olden thrill
In feats of arms that could inspire
Her poesy to charm us still
At evening before the fire.
They dished that business long ago—long after Homer smote his lyre.

We are very much afraid that war is going to make our otherwise strenuous game of football look like a big pillow fight among schoolboys for a while.

If the submarine keeps up its fell work, Neptune is going to have a lot of old iron on his hands with which to make tridents.

"I'm natu'lly sensitive," says Pevely Sadders, "and I've been so gene'lly criticised fer my terbacker habit that I've nearly made up my mind to quit chawin' in public after the war. Fer the present, of course, it's a military necessity. Broiler pan and rack and removable drip pan under top burners should also be thoroughly washed. Ovens and oven racks as well as the entire stove should be rubbed with an oily cloth. Burners especially should have careful attention. In case the small holes in burners become clogged they should be cleaned out with a piece of wire. Presence of foreign particles in burners causes flame to burn yellow instead of blue. This not only blacks the pans, but is wasteful. The Villa-Carranza Crisis

NO INTERVENTION

Springfield Republican: There is but one course for the United States Government to pursue. If the Mexicans cannot settle down without more internal disturbance of this character, they must be left to work out their problem in their own way. It would be folly at this time, with Europe in the throes of the greatest war in history, for the United States to weaken its international position by intervening with military force in Mexico. The European conflict has radically changed the situation in which this country finds itself. Uncertain as to what complications may be in store for America because of the prodigious war of the nations, the Government at Washington must keep clear of an entanglement on this continent that might involve a conquest costing millions of dollars and the employment of thousands of soldiers. Simple prudence in the midst of a world crisis dictates this policy. Evidently, the President has not thought of departing from it.

MEXICO'S BEST FRIEND

Chicago Journal: There is one ground for hope which the dispatches from Washington do not mention. It ought to be clear by this time to every thinking Mexican that President Wilson is Mexico's best friend, that his counsels are as unselfish as his power is irresistible. If the public men south of the Rio Grande have a tithe of the regard for their country that has been shown by the President of the United States, the threat of another revolution will vanish.

WHO IS BACKING VILLA?

Philadelphia Record: In view of the well-known facts, it does not seem out of place to inquire as to who is backing Villa now? Are the contending oil companies again in the field, or has some new interest staked the versatile and able Pancho? Of the merits of the controversy between the ex-bandit and Carranza it is not easy to judge at this distance. Perhaps the First Chief is only a fussy and tactless old gentleman, with a weakness for luxuriant whiskers, but he has been generally esteemed a disinterested patriot who is really sincere in trying to do something for Mexico. In any case, with a war of the first magnitude waging in Europe, Americans will find it hard to become excited over hostilities in Mexico. Much as they may admire Villia's military abilities, they will have difficulty in believing that there is not some sinister and ulterior influence back of him in this last outbreak.

VILLA "THE IRON FIST"

Washington Times: Mexico's future lies between Villa and the civil administration that shall come into power. Villa is the iron fist. He is determined, if his protestations may be believed, to have an intelligent and progressive civil Government; and when he gets it, to put the military force at its back and stand firmly by it. That is just what Mexico needs. If Porfirio Diaz had been as honest and public spirited and understanding in making civil policies as he was in using the military, his regime would have been gloriously successful. Villa proposes to use the military power to sustain good government and popular rights, where Diaz used that power to uphold bad government and grafting privilege.

WHAT MEXICO NEEDS

Chicago Journal: What Mexico needs is not tyranny, but justice. She needs a redistribution of the soil; she needs free schools where peons may learn to be citizens; she needs courts whose equitable decrees will protect the weak from spoliation.

It may be that her leaders, even now, will muster patriotism enough to give their country these blessings.

"REINFORCE FUNSTON"

Washington Post: The moral effect upon both factions in Mexico would be very beneficial if the United States, instead of withdrawing Gen Funston's troops, would reinforce them by 4000 or 5000 additional men. Mexicans who respect American life and property would not be affected by such a move, and Mexicans who might otherwise seek to make victims of Americans or other foreigners would think twice before drawing down on themselves the heavy hand of the United States.

Roosevelt's War Articles

OBSESSED BY MARS

New York Evening Post: It is with fine unconscious humor that the Colonel has begun a series of articles instructing his fellow countrymen in the "lessons" of the European war. The joke of it is that he has for years been finding those same lessons in everything that happened anywhere. To make the country strong and terrible as an army with banners; to build battleships with fury and to fortify every spot where guns can be placed; to scorn all civilized agreements and to depend always upon force—what has ever occurred since Theodore Roosevelt passed 20 which did not freshly impress these great patriotic duties upon him? It needed no foreign war to give him such profound thoughts. He could discover them in the meanest flower that blooms. The same truths were borne in upon him in the wilds of Africa and the Brazilian jungles. He learned them over again from the wart hog and the piranha. Let him meet casually a hunter of big game and he inevitably digressed into the need of arming the nation against all possible foes. A ride in a dug-out on the Zambesi or the Paraguay would set him discoursing upon the necessity of more warships. And the funny thing is that, having long ago exhausted all his expletives and superlatives on lesser occasions, he hasn't a fresh one left for the present gigantic struggle. The war in Europe giving the Colonel opportunity to "draw" lessons? Why, he has been drawing the same ones all his life from every possible event—drawing them first of all, of course, from his own inner consciousness. Nothing for him comes too early or too late to argue that we should all carry guns and knives and be ready to fight at the drop of the handkerchief. If it is ever his lot to see the parliament of man, it is certain that he will perceive in the hushing of the war drums the supreme need of fortifying the Panama Canal. And when he gets to heaven he will be sure to draw the archangel Gabriel aside to expound to him the imperative necessity of mounting heavy guns upon the celestial battlements.

GUARANTEES OF PEACE

New York Globe: Colonel Roosevelt states with great power the reasons why this country, in the present state of the world, should not solely rely for protection on arbitration treaties and the like. The words of the ex-President are likely to have a profound effect.

As events have unfolded themselves two things have burned in on American consciousness. One is that it is not safe to pin faith to international morality and to what is called the public law of the world. Neutralized Belgium, dedicated to peace, lies prostrate before us. Germany, deemed one of the most civilized nations, has openly declared that treaties are but scraps of paper when the interfere with the pursuit of military advantage. A large percentage of our citizenship accepts as valid the latest explanation of Von Bethmann-Hollweg—that Germany merely forestalled the allies.

But while Col. Roosevelt's appeal is timely and valuable, it is obvious that he goes too far in minimizing the value of paper guarantees of peace. [illegible] one thing to say that arbitration treaties do [illegible]ure peace and thus are not a substitute for [illegible] preparedness; but it is another thing to imply they are of no use at all. It is a good thing there was a Belgium neutralization, and it is a good thing there are Hague rules. It is possible that the results of the war will show, despite the lack of an international policing force, that it is not wise to disregard treaties and agreements. Naval and military preparedness should be the ad interim policy of this country, but at the same time it should continue to extend its arbitral system and agree, even if others do not, to submit its disputes to arbitration. There is nothing incompatible about supporting both the Roosevelt policy and the Bryan policy. Both are necessary and wise—one for the protection of ourselves from existing wolves and the other for the gradual elimination of the wolfish spirit.

"MAN ON HORSEBACK"

Pittsburgh Gazette-Times: It is when Col. Roosevelt ventures into what might happen to America if an Old World nation were to attack us that he stirs more than academic interest. Here it is the man on horseback writing. "I and my four sons would go" to such a war, he says—and he believes it were better to let the enemy take and destroy New York and San Francisco, as was done with Louvain, than to pay tribute, as was done by Brussels, and then fight it out in the interior. This, he admits, would be a terrible price to pay for unpreparedness, but unless the risk of having to pay that price is to hang over us indefinitely it is well to be ready to take care of ourselves.

TEACHINGS PROMOTE STRIFE

Chicago Journal: No one imagines that the United States can afford to disarm. Every thoughtful American is agreed that this country must maintain a strong navy, and must devise some military system that will provide our army with a trained reserve in case of war. But while paying this tribute to the imperfect civilization of the world, every thoughtful citizen is likewise agreed that this country should do everything possible to keep war away from our shores; whereas Mr. Roosevelt stands for policies that are sure provokers of strife.

Mr. Roosevelt championed the treaty-breaking ship subsidy clause of the Panama Canal act, which, if not repealed, would have cost this country the good will of England.

Mr. Roosevelt made all Spanish America hate and fear the United States by his lawless action in "taking Panama."

Mr. Roosevelt's comments on the Mexican situation indicate that had he been President he would have invaded that country long ago, with the probable result of bringing on a war with Japan. This country needs no advice from a man with such a record.

Let us improve our fleet and army, by all means; but let us maintain the wise policy of the present administration, and do all in our power to make military action unnecessary. Let us make arbitration treaties wherever we can. Let us deal justly by all nations, whether they are able to demand justice or not. Let us make patience and fairness the foundation stones of our foreign policy, and let there be no counterpart in our land of the blatant jingoism that is turning the fairest fields of Europe into vast graveyards.

"PRO PATRIA."

Britons, in this great fight to which you go
Because where honor calls you, go you must,
Be glad, whatever comes, at least to know
You have your quarrel just.

Peace was your care: before the nations' bar
Her cause you pleaded and her ends you sought;
But not for her sake, being what you are,
Could you be bribed and bought.

Others may spurn the pledge of land to land,
May with the brute sword stain a gallant past;
But by the seal to which you set your hand,
Thank God, you still stand fast.

Forth, then, to front that peril of the deep
With smiling lips and in your eyes the light,
Steadfast and confident, of those who keep
Their storied scutcheon bright.

And we, whose burden is to watch and wait—
High-hearted ever, strong in faith and prayer,
We ask what offering we may consecrate,
What humble service share?

To steel our souls against the lust of ease;
To find our welfare in the general good;
To hold together, merging all degrees
In one wide brotherhood;

To teach that he who saves himself is lost,
To bear in silence though our hearts may bleed;
To spend ourselves and never count the cost
For others' greater need;

To go our quiet ways, subdued and sane;
To hush all vulgar clamor of the street;
With level calm to face alike the strain
Of triumph or defeat.

This be our part, for so we serve you best,
So best confirm their prowess and their pride,
Your warrior sons, to whom in this high test
Our fortunes we confide.

THE PANCHO THEORY OF POPULAR GOVERNMENT

"PILLORYING THE BANKS."

Pittsburgh Gazette-Times: The persistence with which Washington continues to nag the banks cannot but provoke suspicion that it is attempting either to produce a fictitious revival of trade and instil a conviction of its business solicitude in order to take the edge off a lack of faith in the efficacy of the administration's economic policies to yield predicted favorable results. In any event, the pillorizing of banks by name is dangerous because the public may misinterpret the alleged ground of complaint and credit be impaired as a consequence. General arraignment for unethical practices, moreover, instead of privately communicating with and admonishing offenders, has a tendency to reflect injuriously upon national banks as a class. This is going the wrong way about correcting such evils as actually exist.

A BUSINESS PROPOSITION

Indianapolis Star: Secretary McAdoo unquestionably believes he is doing the country a service in rapping the national banks that have accumulated reserves above the legal minimum. He makes public the names of three Indiana institutions that have reserves ranging from 58 to 35 per cent and drops the hint that they are not alone among the Indiana banks that have too much cash on hand. His action, while well meant, is a gratuitous slap at men who are better qualified than he to say how much money they should have in their vaults.

The bankers of Indiana, and other states, are not in banking for amusement or politics. It is a business proposition with them. There is no profit in hoarding money in vaults. If they have more cash on hand than the legal requirement they have accumulated it because they considered such action prudent. They may be unduly apprehensive, but their first thought is for the safety of their institutions. If they are overcautious, that is a matter of judgment and it is better to have them err on the side of safety.

A NECESSARY MEASURE

Seattle Post-Intelligencer: Signs of a hoaading movement began to appear some weeks ago, and in sounding a warning the Journal of Commerce said:

> The fundamental factor in the situation is the need of a good example to the country in keeping money in circulation, preventing it from clogging here and there as a result of undue timidity, and maintaining the activity of the credit mechanism. Hoarding is always a sign of weakness that may be fatal, since it means that indispensable confidence which furnishes the motive power to business and commerce has declined in vigor.

The measures taken by the Treasury Department to stop this hoarding and compel all banks to perform their proper functions are none too drastic and come none too soon. The effect of an enforced change of policy on the part of offending banks is bound to be wholesome and helpful and hasten the return of normal conditions and prosperity.

TEXAS BANK RESERVES

Galveston News: When banks that are required to keep a reserve of only 15 per cent and that, in ordinary times, do not willingly do more in this respect than the law requires, are caught with reserves running from 35 up to more than 70 per cent, it is not easy to dodge the suspicion thus presented that they are hoarding. The figures given out by Mr. McAdoo the other day showing what reserves are being maintained by a few banks of the eleventh reserve district give pretty plausible corroboration to the charge he made a few days previously, which was that a great many of the banks, instead of using the emergency currency they got from the Government to relieve farmers and merchants are using it for the accumulation of an unnecessary gold reserve against their deposits. These figures show, for example, that none of the Texas banks is keeping a reserve of less than 35 per cent, while the average is much above 40, reaching in some instances to 50 and even 70. A curious circumstance is that the Texas banks seem to be more precautious in this respect than are the banks of Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma or New Mexico. Of course, the figures which Mr. McAdoo has given out will not support an indictment of hoarding against all the national banks of Texas, but they may be accepted as symptomatic of that malady which, in vulgar vernacular, is sometimes called "cold feet."

"BANKS UNDERSTAND BUSINESS"

Philadelphia Ledger: The replies from banks to Secretary McAdoo that they are needlessly hoarding money seem to prove that the bankers understand their business and the Secretary does not. For example, the Mechanics' National Bank of Trenton, N. J., had a large reserve because when the report was called for it had a temporary deposit which it could not lend. The Central National Bank of Spartansburg, S. C., has $40,000 of Government money for crop-moving purposes which it cannot use in ordinary commercial loans, and its reserve is therefore large. The Howard Bank of Burlington, Vt., is in the habit of carrying a reserve of from 20 to 30 per cent, because it has discovered that local conditions require it. The Union bank of Schenectady has to provide cash for 300 payrolls, and it had in its vaults money promised to local merchants; its large reserve is explained by special circumstances; and so on throughout the country.

The unfortunate episode, however, has some compensations, for it proves that the bankers are not hoarding, and are prepared to meet all reasonable local demands for cash.

McADOO MISTAKEN.

Philadelphia Inquirer: Before son-in-law McAdoo, the Secretary of the Treasury, [illegible] in to lecture the banks and censure them fo[illegible] which he described as reprehensible, [illegible] should have taken the precaution to make s[illegible] of his facts. He failed to do so, with the res[illegible] that he has been placed in an equivocal position before the country and in certain cases has been compelled to admit that he was mistaken.

GEORGIA NOT HOARDING

Savannah Morning News: In response to the vigorous statement made by Mr. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury, on Wednesday, relative to reports that banks were hoarding money and charging high rates of interest for it, Mr. W. J. Speer, Treasurer of this State, has sent to the Secretary a statement that the State banks of Georgia are neither hoarding money nor charging excessive rates of interest. It is probable that what he says respecting the State banks is true respecting the national banks.

It is a fact, of course, that there is more currency afloat than ever before in the history of the country, and there ought to be money enough to meet all legitimate demands for it. If there were an unsupplied legitimate demand it is probable that the banks would take out more emergency curre[illegible]

By Frances Cabanne Scovel.

NOT for many years has there been as much mystery about the Veiled Phophet's Queen as there is just now.

Everyone—even those near the throne—have guessed a different girl and each one is perfectly sure for reasons, which all seem good ones, why their particular girl is going to be chosen by His Mystic Majesty, the Veiled Prophet, Queen of the Court of Love and Beauty to reign in his stead until he comes again to chose another Queen.

That is the way it is expressed—all that.

Think what a responsibility he imposes upon the most favored and to-be-envied-girl in St. Louis!

But beneath all the glamor and make-believe of the pageant and coronation ceremony the girl who is chosen Queen receives the greatest honor, civic and social, that can be conferred upon her.

Who will she be this time?

Miss Mary Dee Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Breckinridge Jones?

Miss Elza Zeibig, the third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Zeibig?

Miss Carol Miller, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Gilman Miller's daughter and a member of the old O'Fallon family?

Miss Ruth Bixby, the second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William K. Bixby, who has not yet returned from Lake George, but could easily be here by Tuesday evening?

Miss Clara Busch, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August A. Busch?

Or Miss Edith Whittemore, Mr. and Mrs. F. Churchill Whittemore's daughter?

The Queen has not always been a debutante, so she may be anyone of several other girls—Miss Theotiste Nugent, or one of the Scullin girls, Misses Eugenia and May. Who knows?

The music program that will be given while the assemblage waits for the arrival of the Prophet will be one of the most beautiful ever heard, with Sophie Braslau and Antonio Scotti to sing, and a band of 70 pieces to play.

There will be about 74 maids and as many matrons of honor, and the scene will be one more never-to-be-forgotten spectacle.

THE mask ball at the Coliseum Thursday night is creating an unusual amount of interest. There will be over a hundred maskers on the floor and another large contingent will occupy the boxes and seats. Everyone on the floor must be in costume and mask and those in the boxes, not in mask, must wear evening dress. Miss Adaline Capen, the Queen of last year's ball, will occupy a box with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Sam D. Capen, and as soon as a new Queen has been selected at the ball of Tuesday night, a special invitation will be extended her to grace the occasion with her presence, queening it over the maskers the same as she will over all St. Louis for the ensuing season.

Among the box holders are: Messrs. [illegible] Mesdames John C. Roberts, August [illegible], C. P. Walbridge, W. C. Steig[illegible], E. H. Conrades, J. Arthur Anderson, W. J. Hess, Edward M. Flesh, A. C. Einstein, George W. Simmons, Mayor Kiel, Hanford Crawford, William Flewyllen Saunders, Sam D. Capen, Edward Devoy, C. P. Ellerby, A. H. Handlan Jr., Sears Lehman, Charles P. Stanley, Tyrrell Williams, Alexander Hilton, R. S. Haines, Dr. H. McClure Young; Messrs. Roy F. Britton, R. H. Nelker, E. D. Tilton, Linn R. Brokaw, Paul V. Janis, Wilkins Jones, Walker Taylor.

Miss Olga Bates will open dancing classes for children at the Monday Club, in Webster, Saturday afternoon, Oct. 10.

THE marriage of Miss Florence Ewing Wilkinson and Francis Broughton Waddock took place last evening at 8:30 o'clock at the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. John Cabell Wilkinson, at Woodlawn, Kirkwood.

The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father J. J. McGinn, S. R., and was witnessed by a small number of relatives and friends. The bridal party was grouped before a prie-dieu, in a bower of palms.

The bride's gown was of white duchess satin and tulle, with a tulle veil. She carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and orchids.

The maid of honor, the bride's sister, Miss Dorothy Wilkinson, and the only bridesmaid, Miss Constance Edwards, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson G. Edwards, were attired alike in gowns of golden-yellow satin, with gold lace. They carried bouquets of large yellow chrysanthemums, tied with golden tulle.

The bridegroom is the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank G. Waddock of Webster Groves. He was attended by his brother Joseph Waddock as best man, and William H. Bell Jr., of Detroit, as groomsman.

After the ceremony the bridal couple departed for an eastern trip. They have taken a house in Woodlawn where they will be at home after Nov. 1.

A luncheon was given Sept. 26 at the home of Mr. and Mrs. H. Clifford Currens to announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Beulah Beatrice, to Lewis W. Christophel, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. J. Christophel of 6320 Washington bolevard.

Covers were laid for 12. At each plate were miniature bridal couples which were used as place cards. Suspended from the chandelier above the table was a wedding bell to which pink ribbons were attached and extended to each place. The wedding will be in the spring.

MISS BEATRICE B. FOX, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert H. Fox of 948 Laurel street and Lewis Mesler Williams of Chicago were married at the home of the bride at 8:30 o'clock last night by the Rev. Dr. J. L. Roemer of Lindenwood Seminary, formerly pastor of Tyler Place Presbyterian Church.

The bride was gowned in white crepe failler trimmed with old family lace. Her veil of tulle fell from a coronet of the lace and she carried an old-fashioned bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

She had her sister, Miss Ann Fox, for her maid of honor and the bridemaids were Miss Laura Williams, the bridegroom's sister, and Miss Marie Hermann. The ribbons to form the aisle through which the bridal procession passed from the stairway to the canopy of flowers where the couple stood during the ceemony, were carried by Misses Arline Proctor and Mathilde Mann.

The maid of honor wore pink and carried a shower of Killarney roses. The other attendants also wore pink and carried French baskets of pink roses.

The bridegroom's brother, Richard Williams, was best man and the bride's two brothers, Gilbert W. and Burdsal Fox, served as groomsmen.

A reception followed the ceremony. Later Mr. and Mrs. Williams departed for the East to spend the first month of their honeymoon. They will be at home at 894 Grove street, Glencoe, Ill., a suburb of Chicago.

Mr. Williams and his bride met at Dartmouth College when they were students several years ago. He was graduated in '10. Mrs. Williams, two years later.

The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry T. Williams of Chicago, who came down for the wedding, accompanied by Miss Laura and their sons, Richard and Master Robert Williams.

THE marriage of Miss Frances Wickham Bryan and Bruce Seddon took place quietly at 5 o'clock Wednesday afternoon in the Bollnger Memorial Chapel of Christ Church Cathedral. The ceremony was performed by the Very Rev. Carroll Davis, dean of the cathedral. The guests were limited to the two immediate families.

The bride's gown was of white satin and tulle. She wore the rose point lace wedding veil which had belonged to her grandmother, the late Mrs. Frances T. Bryan.

Miss Edmonia Taylor Bryan, the bride's cousin, was maid of honor. The bridegroom's brother, Scott Seddon, was best man. Messrs. Champ Eley and Francis T. Bryan III, the bride's brother, were ushers.

The bride is the daughter of Francis T. Bryan Jr. and the granddaughter of the late Judge Wickham. She made her bow to society several seasons ago and was considered one of the prettiest girls of the winter. She and Mr. Seddon have been sweethearts since they were children.

The bridegroom is the son of former Judge James A. Seddon. His mother before her marriage was Miss Lulu Scott and, after her death, many years ago, Judge Seddon married Miss Anne Carter Wickham, Miss Bryan's aunt.

After the ceremony Wednesday there was a reception at the bride's home, 4508 McPherson avenue, for the bridal party and immediate family.

To Help the Stomach Digest Your Food

When the stomach fails to digest and distribute that which is eaten, the bowels become clogged with a mass of waste and refuse that ferments and generates poisons that are gradually forced into the blood, causing distress and often serious illness.

Most people naturally object to the drastic cathartic and purgative agents that shock the system. A mild, gentle laxative, positive in its effect and that will quickly relieve constipation is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, sold by druggists at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle. It does not gripe or cramp, but acts easily and pleasantly and is therefore the most satisfactory remedy for children, women and elderly persons. For a free trial bottle write to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 451 Washington St., Monticello, Ill.

GRAY HAIR TURNS ITS NATURAL DARK COLOR AFTER APPLYING SAGE TEA

When Mixed with Sulphur It Darkens So Beautifully that Nobody Can Tell; Takes Off Dandruff.

Almost every one knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and luster to the hair when faded, streaked or gray; also cures dandruff, itching scalp and stops falling hair. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays skilled chemists do this better than ourselves. By asking at any drug store for the ready-to-use product—called "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy"—you will get a large bottle for about 50 cents. Some druggists make their own but it's usually too sticky, so insist upon getting "Weyth's" which can be depended upon to restore natural color and beauty to the hair and is the best remedy for dandruff, dry, feverish, itchy scalp and to stop falling hair.

Folks like "Weyth's Sage and Sulphur" because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly, says a well-known downtown druggist. You dampen a sponge or soft brush and draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This requires but a few moments, by morning the gray hair disappears and after another application or two is restored to its natural color and looks even more beautiful and g[illegible] than ever.—ADV.

LAST week was remarkable for the large number of engagement announcements—one of them a genuine surprise, which is rather unusual in St. Louis, where everyone seems to know everyone's else affairs so well that sometimes the rumor of an engagement precedes the proposal and creates a most embarrassing situation.

So well was the secret of Miss Mildred Stickney's engagement to Orion Willis guarded that not even a whisper of it escaped, and it seems that they have been engaged for a couple of years, too.

Since her debut several seasons ago, Miss Stickney has been one of the most popular girls in society. No charity affair or social function was complete without her. She belongs to a small coterie of girls and young matrons who constitute the inner circle of what commonly is called the "smart set," all members of the Imperial, that most exclusive of social organizations.

There is an old saying something like this: "When the string breaks the beads quickly drop off!"

It is true in the case of the Stickney family, for Miss Stickney and her three brothers, Taylor, Stuart and Arthur, have been a unit in social doings for several years and although there have been threats and rumors of a break in their ranks nothing ever has come of the talk until now.

About a fortnight ago the engagement of Arthur Stickney and Miss Sallie Currier, one of the Currier girls who visited Miss Carol Miller in the summer, was announced in Boston.

Miss Currier is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Currier of Boston. They have a mansion on Commonwealth avenue, a country place at Methue, Mass., and a camp or two around the country somewhere else, according to all accounts.

Miss Currier's marriage has been set for Oct. 24, and will take place at the town house instead of Methuem, as was first planned, because of the illness of the bride's sister, who has had pneumonia, and the affair will be quieter on that account.

Mr. Stickney's mother, Mrs. William C. Stickney, Miss Stickney and his brother will go on for the wedding, and so will a number of St. Louisans, among whom will be Mrs. Joseph Gilman Miller and her daughter, Miss Carol Miller.

There probably will be another announcement in the Stickney family, for Dame Rumor has had it that one of the other brothers will marry one of last season's most popular debutantes whose cavalier he was at every affair last winter.

Miss Stickney's marriage to Mr. Willis will be shortly after her return from her brother's wedding, and he and his bride will come home from their wedding trip for the occasion. It also will be a quiet affair as the Stickneys are still in mourning.

Mr. Willis is a graduate of Yale and came here about five years ago from Tennessee.

Our new goods, both foreign and domestic, are arriving daily. As the supply of imported novelties is very uncertain, we would advise an early selection. The Applied Arts, 3612 Washington boulevard.

The engagement of Miss Eloise McLeod, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson W. McLeod of 15 Kingsbury place, and Howard Stephens, formerly of Cincinnati, O., also has been announced. The marriage will follow closely and will take place Nov. 7.

Miss McLeod is a charming, talented girl and immensely popular. She has studied dancing here and in Europe and has appeared at a number of charity affairs with Miss Anita Gaebler for a dancing partner. Their Pierrot and Pierrette is one of the best bits of interpretative dancing seen on the amateur stage.

Mr. Stephens is a Yale man and came here about two years ago to reside.

Mrs. Lee Dorsett, a bride of last summer, gave a luncheon Thursday in honor of Miss McLeod, to tell the news.

Announcement also was made of the engagement of Miss Ethel Cox, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles A. Cox of 4052 Westminster place, and James Lowell Bennett of Worcester, Mass., Wednesday at a luncheon given by Mrs. Douglas A. Cox.

The wedding in the early winter will be the third in the Cox family within a year. Douglas A. Cox and Miss Marion Jarvis of Council Bluffs were married in February. Miss Sarah Cox was married to James Grover Sims June 10, and is now in Kobe, Japan, where they will reside.

J. White, Ladies' Tailor, 1002 Olive, is showing imported models and materials.

Another interesting engagement, the announcement of which was not unexpected, is that of Miss Daphne Brown, daughter of Lieut. George Marion Brown, U. S. A., retired, and Mrs. Brown of 3658 West Pine boulevard, and Robert Nelson, which was made Friday at a luncheon given by the bride-elect's mother. The wedding will be in the spring.

Miss Brown is the granddaughter of Judge and Mrs. Daniel Fisher. She made her bow to society last January and is regarded one of the beauties of the debutante set. She will be one of the maids of honor at the Veiled Prophet's ball Tuesday evening.

At the luncheon were Misses Nancy Bakewell, whose engagement to George M. Pinney was recently announced; Miss Kathleen McBride, whose wedding to Lacy Love will take place Oct. 20; Miss Isabel Cline, whose marriage to Gerald Harney will be in the winter; and Misses Jane Fowler, Adeline Capen, Anne Maude Kennedy, Louise Pitzman and Juanita Wilkinson.

Mr. Nelson is the son of Mrs. E. Nelson of St. Paul, Minn. He was graduated from Harvard in the class of '13. He rowed on the varsity crew, was a member of the mandolin club, and was editor of the Harvard Advocate. He belongs to the Theta Delta Chi fraternity, and is a graduate of the St. Paul Law School. After finishing college he came here to make his home.

Exclusive model gowns for the V. P. Smart evening coats. E. Schumack, Ladies' Tailor and Dressmaker, 856 Century Building.

Still another engagement which will be followed closely by the marriage is that of Miss Virginia Saunders Foster, daughter of Col. T. Saunders Foster of St. Louis and Guadalajara, Mexico, and Edward A. Limberg.

Miss Foster's mother was Miss Mary Wiggins and since her death many years ago the two daughters have made their home with relatives, Miss May with Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wiggins and Miss Virginia with her aunt, Mrs. Adelaide Wiggins Barnett, under whose chaperonage she made her debut two winters ago.

Few girls enjoy such popularity as has Miss Foster. Last winter, which was known as a debutante's year because of their number—75—she was one of the acknowledged belles.

Mr. Limberg is the son of Mrs. Ellie Koehler Limberg. He is the grandson of the late Caspar Koehler, is one of the best golf players in town and one of the most ardent exponents of modern dancing in the younger set.

He was a student at Yale for about two years and is a member of the Racquet and University clubs.

Mrs. Barnett, her son, William H. Barnett, and Miss Foster are occupying the William A. Gardner house at 6 Lennox place this winter.

SOCIETY

Both Miss Nulsen and Mr. Rheinholdt, who is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Reinholdt of 3658 Cleveland avenue, are members of the Liederkranz Club's younger set.

Miss Nulsen made her formal debut at the Veiled Prophet's ball two years ago and will be a maid again Tuesday night.

ADDED to the already long list of the week's engagements, is another, that of Miss Marie Alice Wimmer and Earl Bliss Morgan, which was announced yesterday afternoon at a bridge party given by Mrs. Karl Sharp Howard of 5504 Cates avenue.

Mr. Morgan and Miss Wimmer met for the first time just a year ago when they were in Mrs. Howard's bridal party, and have proven that out of every wedding party comes another romance.

Mrs. Howard was Miss Aline Curtice. Her marriage took place last October.

The guests at yesterday's gathering included Mrs. E. R. Culver, an aunt of the bride-elect, Mmes. Carlos Tredway, Lon Morris, Frederick von L. Smith, Melville Smithers, J. M. Vimont, G. D. Kingsland and Misses Lady Holliday, Rebecca Wick, Effie Godwin, Leah Martin, Edna Idler, Bess Terney, Katherine Burlingame and Loretta Hatton.

Miss Wimmer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter W. Wimmer of 5915 Horton place.

The engagement of Miss Babette Kahn, daughter of Mrs. Rebecca Kahn of 3906 Delmar boulevard, and Dr. Samuel T. Lipsitz, has been announced.

Mrs. Kahn and her daughter will be at home informally Sunday evenings, beginning Oct. 18.

THE first concert of the season will be the joint appearance of Alice Nielson, the noted soprano, and Rudolph Gang, pianist. They will open the Odeon Oct. 24.

It will be one of the notable social as well as musical events of the early season, and will, doubtless, bring out a fashionable audience.

Formal announcement of the engagement of Mortimer C. Furchgott of St. Louis to Miss Claribel Kahn, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Kahn of Indianapolis, has been made. The wedding will take place the latter part of December. Mr. Fuchgott resides at the Westwood Country Club.

Visitors are advised not to miss the Society of Applied Arts, 3612 Washington boulevard, one of the show places of the city. Easily and quickly reached by Olive, Page or Grand cars.—ADV.

The engagement of Miss Dorothy Krausse, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E. B. Krausse of 5878 Plymouth avenue, and Stewart Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Campbell of 5841 Julian avenue, has been announced. The wedding will take place the latter part of October.

THE marriage of Miss Mona Alden and Burchard O. Hess will be one of the notable ones of the week, and will take place Thursday evening at 8 o'clock at the Cabanne Methodist Episcopal Church, the Rev. Luther E. Todd officiating.

A reception at the residence of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Alden of 5652 Maple avenue, will follow.

Miss Virginia Hess will be maid of honor and the bridemaids Misses Evadne Alden and Miss Mildred Hess. Misses Dorothy Rainwater and Virginia Quarles will be flower girls. The best man will be Fletcher Barker of Los Angeles, Cal., and the groomsmen Messrs. Linn Culbertson and Rolland Russell. Messrs. Harry Rhodes, Charles Manassa, Kerchevan Ray and Kenneth Baker will be ushers.

MR. AND MRS. CHARLES LEONARD and their two small children have returned from England, where they have been visiting Mrs. Leonard's sister, Mrs. James Hope-Nelson, at Wellesbourne Hall, Wellesbourne, Warwickshire.

They are stopping with Mrs. Leonard's father, Dr. Jules F. Valle, at 4955 Maryland place, for a short time before going to their home in Pittsfield, Ill.

James Hope-Nelson, who was exempt from service with the British reserves because of an accident in the hunting field about two years ago, has joined a volunteer regiment, which by this time probably has gone to the front.

The husband of one of his sisters came home wounded early in the war and will rejoin his regiment as soon as he is able.

Mr. and Mrs. Guy Oliver who have been residing in California since their marriage about three years ago, have returned here to make their home. They will spend the winter with Mrs. Oliver's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John C. Van Riper of 5357 Waterman avenue.

V. P. corsage with dress shields, complete, $2.50. English nosegay, to be worn on shoulder, $1. Grimm & Gorly.

Miss Julia Maffitt has returned from Paul Smith's, in the Adirondacks, and is visiting her brother, William Maffitt and Mrs. Maffitt of 4409 West Pine boulevard, until the arrival of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Chouteau Maffitt, who have remained late in the East.

A WINTER without the Symphony concerts is too bleak to contemplate. It can't be true that the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, which had reached third place in the rating of orchestras in the United States, will be allowed to go out of existence for a paltry few thousand dollars.

Aren't we a big enough city to have and to hold a fine orchestra—an orchestra to be proud of—and which gives full value in the enjoyment and education of thousands of persons?

It is all too absurd to believe. It cannot be that the thousands of music lovers who patronized the weekly "pops" and the fortnightly concerts Friday afternoon and Saturday evening will permit the orchestra—our orchestra—to go to pieces.

For the last two symphony seasons—since Max Zach, the director, has been able to really lead his men and not beat time, because he had the material to work upon.

The orchestra has improved to such an extent that before we realized it, we had one of the best symphony orchestras in the whole country.

People from away who heard it began telling us about it—the more orchestras from other cities we heard the more we liked our own.

Its fame began to spread—so did our pride—and hundreds of persons who had not known or cared what kind of an orchestra a symphony orchestra was, began to be regular patrons of the concerts.

And now there is danger of its going out of existence—just for a song.

Whatever would we do on Sunday afternoons, and what would the music lovers do without the "sypmphonies," and what would St. Louis have to brag about?

A LITTLE daughter arrived a week ago at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ben Kennedy of 3911 Shaw avenue, making the fourth generation in her mother's family.

The young lady is the great-granddaughter of Mrs. James M. Franciscus, one of the grand mesdames of St. Louis, and now in her eighty-second year.

Mrs. Kennedy was formerly Miss Dorothy Samuel, daughter of Mrs. William P. Samuel, who was before her marriage Miss Annie Wade, Mrs. Franciscus' daughter by a former marriage.

Mrs. Franciscus was born in Wayne County, Kentucky, Nov. 13, the night the great meteor fell. She came to St. Louis many years ago and is the mother of James M. Franciscus and Mmes. Frank N. Johnson, Louis T. Maguire, and Alvin Nicols, who now resides in Cleveland, O.

AMONG the important weddings of the early winter will be that of Miss Elizabeth Case, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Case of 4171 Washington boulevard, and Harold Bixby, which will take place Nov. 2.

Miss Case would have made her debut this season had she not chosen to be married instead.

Miss Marian Harris, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Marcus Harris of 14 Washington terrace, gave a luncheon Friday in honor of Miss Florence

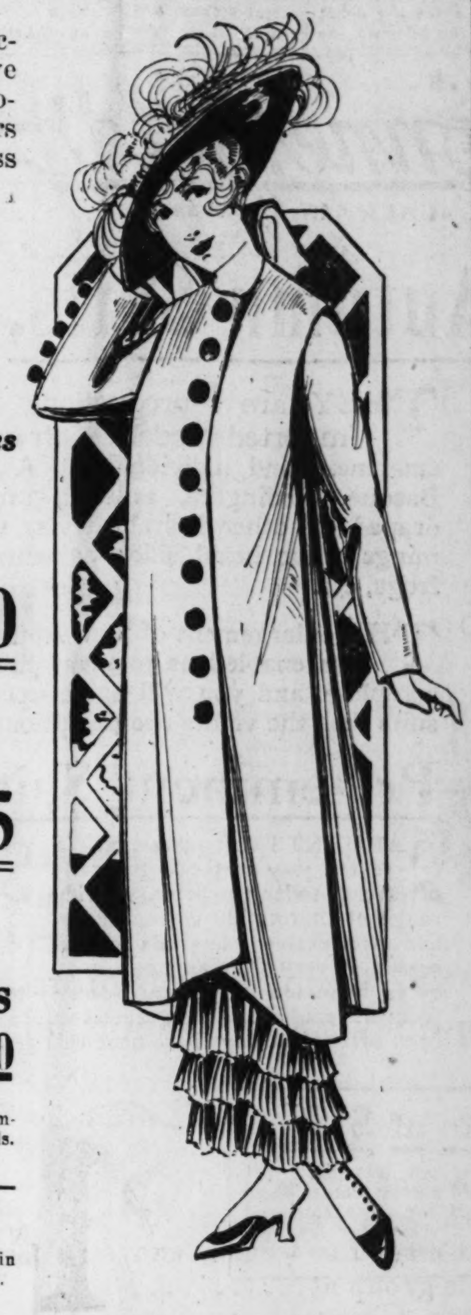
8th Annual October Sale of Coats and Suits for Women and Misses



This sale is the outgrowth of conditions which the garment manufacturers have to face about the same time each year, and our desire to give our customers something better each year. During the month of September there is a "lull" in the garment manufacturing field. Orders "slow up" at that time and the manufacturers are anxious for business in order to keep their working force intact.

Eight years ago we sensed these conditions and entered into arrangements with several of the largest coat and suit specialists to take over their excess stock, provided the garments were up to our high standard in quality and style, and at prices such that we could place before our customers values that would be positively unmatchable.

That's the history of these October sales, which have grown in magnitude and attractiveness to the women of St. Louis and vicinity with each succeeding year. This sale will eclipse them all.

The New Bien-Jolie Corsets
Will Be Demonstrated This Week

Paul Poiret, the great Parisian couturier, prior to war times, had pronounced the Grecian Treco Corset the acme of all that is desirable in corsetry and had engaged to sell this American-made Corset to his fastidious and ultra-fashionable Parisian clientele.

Mrs. Jones, the manufacturer's representative, who is here this week, has had years of experience in corset work and was, for many years, with B. Altman of New York City. She will take pleasure in assisting you to the correct model and will personally take charge of your fitting.

There are no better corsets for wear with your Veiled Prophet Ball gown than the Bien-Jolie, which range in price from $3.50 to $15.00

END OF 'WISCONSIN IDEA' IS SEEN IN PRIMARY RESULTS

Conservatives in Republican and Democratic Parties Win Notable Victories.

BLOW TO LA FOLLETTE

Politicians in State Believe Vote May Mean "Progressivism" Is a Thing of the Past.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Oct. 3.—The victory of Emanuel L. Philipp, "stalwart Republican and proud of it," over La Follette's forces, for Governor, in the Septemebr primary election in Wisconsin, is of national import.

On the Democratic side John C. Karel, the "Ikey" of Wisconsin football fame, now a Milwaukee Judge, for Governor, overwhelmed the supporters of John A. Aylward, sponsored by the Wilson administration, through Joseph E. Davies, Commissioner of Corporations.

This conservative victory, in each party, political students declare, means:

That La Follette is apparently discredited at home and cannot have Wisconsin support in his 1916 campaign for the presidency;

That if Wisconsin sentiment is indicative of that of the nation, "progressivism" is a thing of the past.

That a return of the nation to more conservative legislation and abandonment of radical policies is likely.

Supreme Ruler 12 Years.

It is, according to Wisconsin sentiment, a foretaste of what will happen soon in other states where La Folletteism has been copied.

Taken broadly, catastrophe has overtaken the reign of La Follette. Supreme in political rule for a dozen years, the State at the September primaries hurled out La Foletteism, until the only chance of a La Follette success in the coming elections is through the placing in the field of an independent ticket, progressive in character, with progressive Democrats and Republicans in a fusion movement.

The only important victory for the Progressive wing of either party was the Republican nomination of Gov. F. E. McGovern, Bull Moose Progressive, for the United States Senate, but who remained with his following under the Republican title.

And the foes of La Follette say McGovern's victory was less due to his own strength than to the fact that he was attacked by La Follette. The voters seemed to rise en masse to turn out of office every follower of Senator La Follette.

Two candidates on the Progressive slate for minor State offices were nominated, but almost the entire Legislature has been defeated in the primaries, anti-La Follette Senators and Assemblymen being nominated in nearly every instance over their Progressive opponents.

Election Result Summary.

E. L. Philipp, former conservative Republican leader, nominated for Governor on the Republican ticket. His plurality over his nearest opponent is upward of 25,000.

La Follette's opposition to McGovern appears to have aided McGovern in running ahead of the Philipp slate by 15,000; at least this is the one explanation by politicians of the fact that McGovern led the entire field of Progressives, all the remainder of whom were more or less favorably regarded by La Follette.

John C. Karel, conservative Democrat, defeated John A. Aylward by 15,000.

Paul Husting, so-called Wilson candidate for United States Senator, defeated T. M. Kearney, the Karel running mate, by about 2000.

In the four State offices Philipp men were victorious twice and La Follette men were successful in two contests.

In the State Senate H. C. Martin, President pro tem., one of the oldest La Follette supporters, and Senators Teasdale and Linley, floor leaders, were beaten, with seven other La Follette men.

In the Assembly the La Follette majority of 20, in a membership of 101, over the Democrats, conservatives and Socialists, was reduced to a plurality of two over the conservatives alone.

In the race for United States Senator, where La Follette bent his hardest efforts to defeat Gov. McGovern, Lieutenant-Governor Thomas Morris, the La Follette candidate, was 25,000 behind McGovern and 10,000 behind Bancroft, the Philipp candidate.

Features of Campaign.

Wisconsin is sated with Progressivism

Since the Progressives began to take hold of Wisconsin affairs, the expense of State government has mounted, as judged by the taxes, from $2,000,000 a year to $12,000,000.

In the face of this enormous burden of taxation, the taxpayers revolted, charged everything to the Progressive idea, defeated the Progressive Republicans because they have been in office a dozen years, and also defeated the Progressive Democrats because they have been copying La Follette's ideas in their platform.

The result cannot be taken as a repudiation of President Wilson, except in that Wilson, probably misinformed as to Wisconsin conditions, threw his influence and patronage to the Aylward slate and was decisively beaten.

The coming campaign will be marked by two notable features, the probable launching of a fusion Progressive ticket, with a La Follette man for Governor, and a Wilson Democrat for United States Senator, in the effort to prevent the election of either of the old party conservatives, Karel, Democrat, or Philipp, Republican.

Karel will be under the handicap of having to fight his fall campaign with a State Committee composed of anti-Karel Democrats. Philipp's victory, however, was so sweeping as to make it possible for him to change the composition of the Republican State Central Committee and put his own men in charge of his campaign.

MISSOURI FACTORY PRODUCTS IN YEAR OVER $650,000,000

Official Figures Show Plants in That State Have 222,268 Employes.

JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 3.—The high standing of Missouri as a manufacturing Commonwealth is shown in figures given out today by Commissioner John T. Fitzpatrick of the Bureau of Labor Statistics. Eleven thousand and twenty-nine factories and workshops of the State, in the last fiscal year, turned out products worth $654,613,833.

In the output are included the products of Missouri boot and shoe factories, flour mills, packing houses, furniture factories, car shops, cotton gins, saw mills, pipe factories, smelters, harness shops, electric light plants, cooperage factories and a hundred other classes of industries. The 11,029 factories employed 222,268 wage and salary earners, consisting of 180,398 men and boys and 41,870 women and girls. There were also at work in these establishments 10,237 men and 625 women, who, owning the places they toiled in, did not draw salaries, but took the profits. No stockholders, or owners not employed are included. The army of 222,268 workers drew for their services, $124,671,522.

Half of the manufacturing of the State is done in St. Louis.

A bulletin prepared by Supervisor of Statistics A. T. Edmonston, states that the capital invested in the 11,029 establishments is $429,490,249. Of this sum $130,787,969 is in buildings and grounds and $122,369,315 in machinery, tools and fittings. The raw material and supplies used were worth $389,770,763. There was paid out for rent, taxes and insurance $23,773,941 and $39,178,132 miscellaneously.

NEW CONFIDENCE GAME CALLS FOR 44 CENTS

Swindlers With Fake Telegrams Rob Two Women Seeking to Sell Furniture.

The police have learned of a new confidence game in which women have been swindled of small sums by means of fake telegrams. The swindlers have gone to the trouble of having a bogus telegram blank printed. It bears the address "Western Telegraph Company," and resembles the regular blank used by the telegraph companies.

Mrs. Nellie Beatty of 3163 Locust street advertised for sale a rooming house at 3312 Washington avenue. A man called, and introducing himself as a traveling salesman, said he represented E. V. Allison of Club Lake, Ark., who was embarking in the hotel and club business and needed furniture.

Last night a boy delivered what appeared to be a telegram at the home of Mrs. Beatty. It was signed "E. V. Allison, Club Lake, Ark.," and told her to hold her furniture until he could reach St. Louis. The boy collected [illegible] cents charges on the message, and Mrs. Beatty, later becoming suspicious, went to a telegraph office and learned the message was bogus.

Mrs. Albert W. Lawrence of 41[illegible] Washington avenue had a similar experience. She had advertised some furniture for sale. The "telegram" she paid 45 cents for was "E. B. Ellis, Club Lake, Ark."

LAWYER WITH ANOTHER'S RIG TAKEN TO STATION

Henry Rowe Detained Few Hours After Explaining He Meant No Harm.

Henry Rowe, an attorney, of 3736 Delmar boulevard, was detained by police yesterday morning until he could explain how he happened to be driving a horse and buggy that had just been reported as stolen. The rig belonged to Chris Schawacker, 414 South Third street, liveryman and professional bondsman.

Schawacker was at the Central Police Station with a report that his horse and buggy had been taken from in front of the Municipal Courts' Building, when C. W. Scott, a traffic policeman at Broadway and Locust street, came in with Rowe as a prisoner. He said he had seen Schawacker's rig making an erratic course along Broadway, the horse appearing to be unmanageable.

He knew the rig as Schawacker's, the policeman said, and when Rowe gave an incoherent explanation, decided to arrest him. Rowe explained to Schawacker he had meant no harm and Schawacker said he would attempt no prosecution. Rowe was detained for a few hours longer at the police station.

Rich American Women Are Menials in War Hospital

The American colony of Berlin is working as arduously for the Kaiser as though its members were actually his subjects. The American church has been turned into a hospital. The American Woman's Club has been offered as an additional hospital. Every American home in that new and bright districa appropriated by the Americans around Wilmersdorff, is open at the slightest indication of need. The women are taking Red Cross lecture courses to make themselves efficient nurses and they are taking charge of numerous bands of tiny children whose fathers are at war and whose mothers are doing the men's work at home.

Some of the distinguished officers of the British army, now in France, are preparing to fight the Germans elsewhere, are the husbands of well-known American wives, women who shone brilliantly at court, but who shine less brilliantly amidst the sombre days of war. Lady Maxwell, the daughter of Charles Bonynge of New York and the wife of Lieutenant-General Sir John Maxwell, has addressed a stirring speech to Englishmen, imploring them to enlist, which has not ben equaled by anything else of the kind since was was declared. With the fiery eloquence which could come only through intenes devotion to the nation, she called to her aid every invective of the German, while praising his obedience to the command of duty, at the same time raining down upon the heads of the unenlisting Britisher such condemnation as he has probably never heard from anyone's lips before. Lieutenant-General Maxwell is a hero of various campaigns in Egypt and South Africa, a member of the Black Watch Regiment of Highlanders and has command under Field Marshal Sir John French.

Lady Paget a Leader.

Lady Paget, the daughter of the late Parar Stevens of New York, is the wife of Lieutenant-General Sir Arthur Paget, who has been decorated by the Kaiser. Lady Paget is the chairman of the American War Relief Fund, which has equipped as a hospital of 200 beds the country home of Paris Singer. Lady Beatty, who was Ethel Marshal Field of Chicago and is the wife of Great Britain's youngest Admiral, already a hero of the war because of the battle of Helgoland, has turned her yacht Shelah into a hospital ship for the Admiralty. It has a perfect equipment and is supplied with two consulting surgeons, Sir Arthur Fripp and A. M. Shield, whose services Lady Beatty has included in her gift.

The Earl of Granard, Ogden Mills' son-in-law, who was master of horse in King George's household, has resigned his ornamental position to become the Colonel of an Irish regiment enlisted for war. Viscount Acheson, the future Earl of Gosford, Ridgeley Carter's son-in-law, is a young veteran of the Boer War who has been called again to the colors of his King. Lord Ashburton, the husband of the former American Gayety actress, Frances Donnelly, is enrolled Captain of the Hunts' Caribineers. Lord Cheylesmore, the husband of Elizabeth French, a Newport belle, is a retired Major-General, but he has offered his services to King George; so has Lord Craven, also, Captain in the Berks Yeomanry, whose wife was Bradley Martin's daughter. Coombe Abbey, which has been the scene of some of the most elaborate parties in English society, will be open as a refuge to any soldiers Lord Kitchener will send there for treatment or convalesence.

Many British Husbands in the Field.

George Gould's son-in-law, Lord Decies, is Major in the Seventh Hussars, which has seen service in Egypt and South Africa. Anthony Drexel's son-in-law, Viscount Maidstone, is Lieutenant in the East Kent Yeomanry. The Earl of Ancaster, who married Eloise Breese of New York, is Lieutenat-Colonel of the Lincolnshire Yeomanry; the Hon. John Ward, who married Ambassador Whitelaw Reid's daughter, Miss Jean Reid, is Second Lieutenant in the Worcester Yeomanry; the Earl of Suffolk, Daisy Leiter's husband, is Captain of the Fourth Gloucestershire Regiment of Militia, called into active service; the Duke of Roxburghe, May Goelet's husband, is an officer of the Argyl and Sutherland Highlanders, while his brother, Lord Alastair Innes-Ker, husband of another of the Miss Breese of New York, is Lieutenant in the First Dragoons.

Mrs. Waldorf Astor is taking great interest in all things associated with the sick and wounded who are arriving at Plymouth from the war. She has arranged quite a number of motor trips for the convalescent to Dartmoor, and at times her guests have numbered 60. She is almost a daily visitor at the hospitals and has been photographed setting out for a moorland trip with sick and wounded of the Royal Scots Regiment and other forces at Plymouth.

Mrs. Lewis Harcourt—Miss Ethel Burns—the American wife of the distinguished Cabinet Minister, is an indefatigable worker in Queen Mary's Needlework Guild, which is organized throughout the country and turning out tens of thousands of knitted socks and shirts and countless rolls of bandages, a work of mercy in which the Countess of Essex—Miss Adele Beech Grant—is also engaged in the most business-like way, working harder for charity than many men do for wages.

American Women Busy in Russia.

The soldiers of the Czar number among their officers the husbands of at least three American-born women. Gen. Frederick Dent Grant's son-in-law, Prince Cantacuzene, served as A. D. C. on the staff of the commander in chief, Grand Duke Nicholas, when the war opened, but he is reported to have been seriously wounded in Austria. The Princess is a Red Cross nurse. Her memories of Austria have hitherto been among the happiest of her life, as she spent her early girlhood in Vienna when her father was the American Minister to Francis Joseph's court.

Baron Hoengen-Huney, whose American wife was a Lathrop of Detroit (her father was American Minister to St. Petersburg) is likewise an officer in the Czar's army, fighting in Germany, where he has many relatives and many bonds of friendship, his family originally belonging there.

Prince Radziwill, husband of another American, the beautiful Dorothy Deacon of Boston, is among those whose whereabouts are shrouded in uncertainty. He is a Russian subject, but more ardently a Polish patriot, and it is reported that he has been arrested and placed in prison by command of the Czar, for attempting to give Poland political liberty independent of Russia's supervision.

HUNTER NEARLY DROWNED

NEENAH, Wis., Oct. 3.—Max Hayden of Oshkosh was in a small skiff on Lake Winnebago hunting ducks and when he picked up his gun it was accidentally discharged, tearing a hole in the bottom of the boat, which rapidly filled with water and sank.

His cries for help attracted a party of hunters who saved him from drowning. He was exhausted when rescued.

No More Wrinkles
BEAUTIFUL BUST
Superfluous Hair Vanishes Like Magic. Eyelashes Beautified.
Pimples and Blackheads Removed Forever.

Let this Woman Send you Free, everything she Agrees, and Beautify your Face and Form Quickly.

This clever woman has not a wrinkle upon her face; she has perfected a marvelous, simple method which brought a wonderful change in her face in a single night. For removing wrinkles and developing the bust, her method is truly wonderfully rapid.

She made herself the woman she is today and brought about the wonderful change in her appearance in a secret and pleasant manner. Her complexion is as clear and fair as that of a child. She turned her scrawny figure into a beautiful bust and well-developed form. She had thin, scrawny eye lashes and eyebrows, which could scarcely be seen, and she made them long, thick and beautiful by her own methods and removed every blackhead and pimple from her face in a single night.

You can imagine her joy, when by her own simple discovery, she removed every wrinkle from her face and developed her thin neck and form to beautiful proportions.

By her new process, she removes wrinkles and develops the whole figure plump and fat.

It is simply astonishing the hundreds of women who write in regarding the wonderful results from this new beauty treatment, which is beautifying their face and form after beauty doctors and other methods failed. She has thousands of letters on file like the following:

Mrs. M. L. B. Albin, Miss., writes: "I have used your beauty treatment with wonderful success. I have not a wrinkle on my face now and it is also improving my complexion, which has always troubled me with pimples and blackheads. My weight was 112 pounds before taking your treatment and now I weigh 117, a gain of 5 pounds. Your treatment is a Godsend to all thin women. I am so grateful you may even use my letter if you wish."

Miss P. S. Swanton, Ohio, says: "I consider your treatment wonderful. I can scarcely believe my eyes when I look in the mirror."

The valuable new beauty book which Madame Clare is sending free to thousands of women is certainly a blessing to womankind, as it makes known her remarkable methods of beautifying the face and figure of unattractive women.

All our readers should write her at once and she will tell you absolutely free about her various new beauty treatments and will show our readers:
How to remove wrinkles in 8 hours;
How to develop the bust;
How to make long, thick eyelashes and eyebrows;
How to remove superfluous hair;
How to remove blackheads, pimples and freckles;
How to remove dark circles under the eyes;
How to quickly remove double chin;
How to build up sunken cheeks and add flesh to the body;
How to darken gray hair and stop hair falling;
How to stop forever perspiration odor.

Simply address your letter to Helen Clare, Suite D 131, 2637 Michigan Ave., Chicago, Ill., and don't send any money, because particulars are free, as this charming woman is doing her utmost to benefit girls or women in need of secret information which will add to their beauty and make life sweeter and lovelier in every way.—ADV.

Youthful, Beautiful Skin Easy to Have

You may be as healthy as a bird in the air and still have a poor complexion. Changing seasons and temperatures, winds dust and dirt are apt to injure any skin, even though the general health be good. When these external influences spoil the complexion, the natural thing is to remove the spoil by external means. Ordinary mercolized wax will do this. It will actually absorb the weather-beaten film-skin, a little each day. In a week or two you'll have a brand-new complexion, a new skin. The exquisitely beautiful and youthful complexion thus acquired comes so easily, without harm or discomfort. There's no reason why any woman should not adopt this simple treatment. Get an ounce of mercolized wax at any drug store, apply nightly like cold cream, washing it off mornings. This will not fail in any case.

To quickly remove wrinkles, signs of care and age, bathe the face occasionally in a solution of powdered saxolite, 1 oz., dissolved in ½ pt. witch hazel. The results will surprise you.—ADV.

NOTED BOTANISTS WILL GATHER AT "SHAW'S GARDEN"

Twenty-First Anniversary of Organization of Board of Trustees to Be Celebrated.

The largest gathering of botanical scientists ever assembled will attend the twenty-fifth anniversary of the organization of the Board of Trustees of the Missouri Botanical Garden, Oct. 15 and 16.

It had been planned to have all of the eminent scientists in the botanical world at this celebration, but the European war has made it impossible for a number of botanists from the European countries to attend.

A feature of the program will be a paper read by Dr. Johannah Westerjik, director of the Phytopathological Laboratories of Amsterdam. This is an unusual office for a woman to hold. Dr. Westerjik has been on a botanizing tour of the tropics for the past 11 months and will tell the scientists of her travels and discoveries.

Dr. Arthur J. Hill, assistant director of the Royal Botanic Gardens, Kew, England, has sent his paper, "The History and Functions of the Botanical Gardens," but will not be permitted to leave England.

Prof. Conzatti of Mexico City has sent his paper and will in all probability be in attendance.

The attendance of the noted American botanists will be large and representative. Practically every state in the Union will be represented, as well as Canada.

If the weather will permit there will be alfresco luncheon served in the garden each day of the anniversary celebration to the botanists. If the weather should be inclement, the luncheons will be given in the drawing room and dining room of the Shaw Museum. The trustee's banquet will be given at the Liederkranz Club, Friday evening, Oct. 16.

The anniversary will be opened by a reception at the home of Dr. George T. Moore, director of the garden.

MARRIED ELOPER WILL FACE MANN ACT CHARGE

Son of Cape Girardeau Lumberman Waives Federal Hearing in Chicago.

Lester A. McDonald, 20 years old, son of Charles A. McDonald, a wealthy lumberman of Cape Girardeau, waived a preliminary hearing before Federal authorities in Chicago yesterday, following the issuance here of a warrant charging him with violations of the Mann act. The information against McDonald is sworn to by United States District Attorney Oliver. Oliver has been informed McDonald will be in St. Louis tomorrow to answer the charge.

McDonald, it is alleged, eloped to Chicago with Miss Elizabeth Holland, 18 years old, of 618 Ridge avenue, Webster Groves. He has a wife and three-weeks-old baby. The warrant charges he violated the Mann act on two counts, inducing Miss Holland to leave the State with him and furnishing her means of transportation.

McDonald was arrested in Chicago, whence he had gone with the young woman in an automobile. Miss Holland told friends she was going to Springfield, Ill., to marry. She had known McDonald but a few weeks. McDonald was captured after his father had complained to Chief of Police Young that his automobile was missing.

Bishop to Address Negroes.

Bishop Tuttle, the ranking Bishop of the Episcopal Church, will address the Colored Branch of the Young Men's Christian Association at Douglass Hall, Beaumont street and Lawton avenue, at 3:30 this afternoon.

NEW BILLS AIMED AT SOUTHERN TRACTION CO.

Assembly Is Asked to Repeal 50-Year Franchise Before Bridge Bond Election Nov. 6.

Bills to repeal outright the 50-year loop franchise of the Southern Traction Co. were introduced Friday in the Council and House of Delegates as moves to pave the way for the free bridge bond issue Nov. 6. A bill reducing the life of the franchise to 25 years also was offered in the Council.

The Central Council of Civic Organizations, which is campaigning for the additional bond issue of $2,750,000 polled the Council members last week and gave out the statement that 7 of the 13 members were pledged to vote for the repeal of the loop grant.

In a conference with receivers of the traction company appointed by a Federal court in Illinois, a Council committee was informed last spring that the receivers would advise the court to concur in a 25-year amendment, but indicated they would oppose any attempt to repeal the grant outright.

When Delegate Grierson, Republican, offered another repeal bill last night, Delegates McCarthy and Scully, Democrats, said the House had twice passed the bill and it was now up to the Council to act on the measure. They predicted speedy concurrence by the Democratic majority in the House, if the Council would act. Seven members of the Council, elected last April, and all members of the House pledged themselves in the campaign to repeal the franchise.

Inter-State Commerce Commission Delays Increase From Ill. Pending an Inquiry.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—An advance of 20 cents a ton in the freight rate on bituminous coal from mines in the Illinois field to destinations in the Middle West, of which Omaha, Neb., is typical, was suspended today by the Interstate Commerce Commission until Feb. 2 1915.

A general investigation will be made before that time.

HAIR STOPS FALLING AND DANDRUFF GOES AT ONCE—25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Save your Hair! Beautify it! Invigorate your scalp! Danderine grows hair and we can prove it—Always effective.

If you care for heavy hair, that glistens with beauty and is radiant with life; has an incomparable softness and is fluffy and lustrous you must use Danderine, because nothing else accomplishes so much for the hair.

Just one application of Knowlton's Danderine will double the beauty of your hair, besides it immediately dissolves every particle of dandruff; you cannot have nice, heavy, healthy hair if you have dandruff. This destructive scurf robs the hair of its luster, its strength and its very life, and if not overcome it produces a feverishness and itching of the scalp; the hair roots famish, loosen and die; then the hair falls out fast.

If your hair has been neglected and is thin, faded, dry, scraggy or too oily, don't hesitate, but get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine at any drug store or toilet counter; apply a little as directed and ten minutes after you will say this was the best investment you ever made.

We sincerely believe, regardless of everything else advertised that if you desire soft, lustrous, beautiful hair and lots of it—no dandruff—no itching scalp and no more falling hair—you must use Knowlton's Danderine. If eventually—why not now? A 25-cent bottle will truly amaze you.—ADV.

YOU WAGE EARNERS
You Who Are Struggling to Secure Shorter Hours

IF YOU would make it a rule to supply your wants only from a firm that is fair to its own employes and in hearty sympathy with the struggling laboring man, the eight-hour working day would more quickly become universal and the hours of honest labor be thereby shortened.

For more than four years we have opened at 8 a. m. and closed daily at 5 p. m., and results prove that we made no mistake when we adopted the 8-hour working day and the minimum wage of $12 per week.

Our business has shown a steady and substantial increase month by month and year by year, proving clearly and conclusively that business suffers no financial loss through early closing or the paying of living wages to employes.

Through higher wages and shorter hours we secure better service and a higher degree of efficiency, besides enjoying the satisfaction of knowing that we are adding our share to the sum of human happiness.

AMERICAN'S FUSE MADE POSSIBLE EXPLOSIVE SHELLS

German Siege Gun Projectiles Equipped With Device Offered Our Navy.

IT MAKES ARMOR FUTILE

By Sliding Charge of Fulminate of Mercury Guncotton Is Safely Handled.

By Wire From the Washington Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—It was the Gathmann fuse that made it possible to hurl tremendous quantities of high explosives without danger to those using them, and the inventor of fuse is a little man with a white beard and a German accent, living at 2015 Kolarama road, this city.

In each of the German shells that battered the forts around Liege was one of these fuses and this is true of all the actions in which the 42-centimetre siege guns have been used.

About 1896 Louis Gathmann invented a fuse which he thought was perfect and brought it to Washington and laid his plans before Secretary of the Navy Herbert. A few tests, however, showed that the fuse was not perfect and he went back to Chicago to experiment.

Two years later he came to Washington with a perfect fuse. It was taken to Indian Head, Md., the Government proving ground, and with its aid armor plate up to 17 inches in thickness was demolished.

The fuse fires a charge on the same principle that the men in the front of an automobile may be dumped on their head when their machine strikes a barrier at high speed. Gathmann placed his priming charge in the rear of the shell, where it could slide through a groove in the center of the shell and explode the guncotton when the shell struck.

The primer was held away from the guncotton by two movable pins. When the shell began to whirl through the rifling of the gun barrel, these pins were moved away by centrifugal force, releasing the priming charge, which remained out of position until the shell struck. The sudden arrest caused the primer to slide forward and strike against a thin steel bulkhead which separated it from the guncotton.

Guncotton Well Protected.

The priming charge itself was made of fulminate of mercury, one of the most sensitive of explosives, and the detonation of the primer was sufficient to fire off the guncotton through the thin steel bulkhead, although when the primer was not forced forward into position, the guncotton was protected by a steel casing.

As a final test they imbedded one of Gathmann's shells in a target and shot at its butt, with a six-inch gun. The powder charge which gave the shell its traveling velocity was set off and the back of the shell blown to pieces, but the charge of guncotton remained unexploded. Thus the invention was a complete success, but for reasons which Gathmann refused to discuss the shell was not adopted by the United States at that time.

In 1904, however, the Japanese adopted the fuse as an experiment and loaded their ships with high explosive shells. The Russian vessels equipped with only armor-piercing shells, were blown out of the water. After the Russo-Japanese War Gathmann took his fuse to the Krupps and found that the German War Office was in possession of photographs of tests made in this country. The Krupps, however, paid him a good sum for the fuse, as it was patented in Germany, and immediately began to incorporate it in their high explosive shells. Japan, Gathmann says, refused to pay him for it, but continued using it, nevertheless.

Powder Worker in Boyhood.

Louis Gathmann is a mechanical and ordnance engineer. He was born in Hanover, Germany, more than 70 years ago. His first experience in the use of high explosives was gained as a boy in a powder factory on the banks of the Elbe. He came to America and settled in Chicago at the age of 21. He built a machine shop and for years experimented with a safety fuse.

The use of high explosives in warfare was known before Gathmann entered the field, but navy and ordnance experts were not disposed to look with favor upon them because of their sensitive nature and the danger of handling them. It was not known at what time one of the shells would explode and kill the gun crew. Almost every experiment with high explosives had been marked by accidents of some kind and officials despaired of the practicability of their use.

The Gathmann fuse was the death blow to the armor-piercing shell. Today a fort may be shattered by a terrific explosive force rather than by shooting it full of holes.

Extraordinary Musical Attraction at the New Grand Central Theater

Messrs. Smith and Fleming, who filled a lengthy engagement at this theater last spring and pleased thousands with their rendition of "Laddie," the famous true-blue song, and other attractive musical gems, have again been engaged by the New Grand Central Theater.

While filling a New York engagement the boys were daily visitors at the ship piers and around the great newspaper bulletins. As they were making one of their daily trips they were strongly moved by this strange incident:

Mr. Fleming's aunt, whose son, one of the stalwart life-savers at Coney Island, was leaving to join his colors in the great European conflict. Mother and sweetheart bade him Godspeed, little thinking he would never return.

> NEW YORK, Sept. 25, 1914.
> Messrs. Smith & Fleming,
> American Annex, St. Louis, Mo.
> Cable confirms report. Jack was killed in battle.
> AUNT MARTHA.

Messrs. Smith and Fleming were anxious to select something different from their usual repertoire. Having in mind this pathetic incident, they were impressed by Fred Lawton's famous march ballad,

"He Was a Soldier From the U. S. A.," which tells a story so similar to the one above mentioned they decided to sing it as their opening song.

Reports from all the music departments show it to be in steady demand in sheet music. The publishers, Buck & Lowney, of St. Louis, have granted us permission to reproduce a portion of the chorus.

Advice on Beauty

by Claire Ainsworth

NOTE—If the reader does not find the information wanted in the questions answered below, just address a letter to Miss Claire Ainsworth, 40 Patterson Bldg., Dayton, Ohio, inclosing self-addressed stamped envelope, and she will gladly advise on health and beauty problems. The articles and preparations mentioned are on sale by all wholesale druggists, large retail and department stores; or any accommodating dealer can obtain them for you.

Letters which I daily receive from girls and women indicate that my advice is appreciated and really wonderful transformations are made by the creams, emollients and toilet necessities which I have recommended. Many who have been indifferent are beginning to see the wisdom of aiding nature and caring for the skin and hair. It is a duty every woman owes to herself—to keep young and beautiful.

Millicent asks: "I am 18 years old and healthy, but my face, hands and arms are anything but pretty. My skin is dark, sallow and unhealthy looking. What shall I do?"

Answer: I will answer in such a manner that others may benefit by my advice. First, discontinue using toilet soap to cleanse face and hands. Use a saponified vegetable oil called gloriol glowene, obtainable in sealed tubes. Use it as a "water massage," and you will be gratified by its wonderful cleansing and softening effect on the skin. Each night before retiring use the "water massage" and follow it with a thorough patting and rotary massage, using gloriol emollient, which is a skin and flesh food unequaled for producing beautiful plumpness and color. Apply on face, hands and arms, according to directions which accompany each jar.

The morning toilet should be made by bathing the eyes only with cold water. Then apply the vanishing gloriol balm and again massage until it is all absorbed. This is very fragrant, cooling and pleasant to use, and a fresh application should be made at any time before going out into the weather. Gloriol powder may be used lightly to deaden the shine, if any.

The foregoing is a scientific treatment which will in a short time transform an ordinary face into one of beauty—beauty of color, beauty of plumpness and beauty of health.

Mrs. T. B. writes: "I wish you would be kind enough to give me the formula for a good home-made hair tonic. I am losing my hair and it looks dull. My scalp itches all the time."

Answer: Simply get one-half ounce hairwand powder in a sealed package. Empty into a pint bottle. Fill the bottle with soft, pure water, shake well and apply with the tips of the fingers, thoroughly massaging the scalp. Avoid anything containing alcohol.

Alice M. asks: "Do you think it safe to take something to reduce obesity? If so, what is best to use?"

Answer: Very beneficial results are obtained by many of my friends, who have used five-grain phythyrin tablets, which are sold by most pharmacies in sealed tubes. Physicians of my acquaintance commend these tablets, and I believe them to be the best reduction remedy extant.

Madame X asks: "Please recommend something to take off or destroy superfluous hair. I have a small patch on my chin and it is very embarrassing."

Answer: I advise you to obtain a sealed vial of fluvol powder. It is harmless and full directions come with it. It acts instantly, and destroys the hair without harming the skin.

C. W. D. writes: "I am vain enough to want to improve my appearance by filling out the hollows in my neck and shoulders. Also would appreciate advice on how to round the bust and arms."

Answer: A regular massage with medicated venosol, each night according to directions, which are to be found in each tube, will soon fill the hollow places and round out the bust and arms to normal. Use the patting and rotary massage movements. Many actresses and society women indorse this treatment.

Dora asks: "How can one rid the face of redness, spots, pimples and large pores? Sometimes the pimples are quite large."

Answer: The best and surest method is to treat the blood for its impurities by taking one-grain tablets quinoxide, which may be obtained at most any well-stocked pharmacy. These tablets have a purifying and whitening effect on the skin, and are perfectly safe to use according to directions in each tube.

Mrs. B. B. asks: "What can I do to keep my hair up? In spite of my care, it comes down in short, ugly strands all about my face and neck."

Answer: Try using gloriol wavelene. I use it regularly, as do many of my correspondents. It keeps the hair in curl or wave for days at a time, and is said by many to promote a natural curl and wave if repeatedly used.

Geo. D. asks: "My wife and I are afflicted with dandruff, itching scalp and falling out of hair. We have tried various remedies in vain. Will you kindly tell us what to use?"

Answer: Use plain yellow minyol to massage the scalp once or twice a week, and in less than a month you should have no more trouble. To prevent a return use the hairwand tonic advised for "Mrs. T. B." in these columns.

Mrs. O. C. T. asks: "Tell me, please, what is the best soap for shampooing the hair?"

Answer: I do not advise either "soap or eggs," as they are neither fit to wash the hair if you value its health and luster. Gloriol liquid shampoo is by far the best shampoo that one can use. It is a treat to use it.

Miss Leila B. asks: "I am using the balm and emollient and I think they are perfect. What face powder should I use?"

Answer: Of all [illegible] I like the gloriol [illegible] purity and odor of lilac. Send two stamps for my booklet, "Beauty Truths." All my readers are invited to send for it.

Miss P. C. C. asks: "What can I do to increase my weight about 15 or 20 pounds?"

Answer: To increase the weight take three-grain hypo-nuciane tablets to increase assimilation and nourishment. This is the most successful remedy for the purpose that has ever been discovered.

The names of these little girls are Katie Bachman of 533 West Papin street; Clara and Bertha Priep, 4539 West Papin; Alice Schmid, 4539A West Papin, and Theodora Welsch, 4537A West Papin.

"Kindly send us a League button by return mail," they write. And the Post-Dispatch Weather Bird on the League button has flown straight to the home of each of these little girls

Just to show that their sex also may be depended upon for good service to the Pure Milk Fund, three little boys sold lemonade on the lawn of 6108 Oakland avenue for the Fund's benefit and earned $2.01 with which to help save the babies.

The names of these three little boys are Paul and Joseph Brodigan of 6108 Oakland avenue, and Charles Brady. They, too, ask that League buttons be mailed to them, wherefore the Post-Dispatch Weather Bird on the League button has winged another flight, this time straight in their direction.

An additional 50 cents to help swell the receipts of the performance of Mrs. Rosa Kantorwitz's beautiful play, "The Piper of Hamelin," at the Mikado Theater, has been turned in to the Fund, bringing the grand total of receipts for the two performances of that play up to nearly $200. Edwin Ritchey of 5571 Von Versen avenue sold tickets realizing the amount of this latest contribution.

Thus do the Children of the League maintain their splendid service to the Post-Dispatch Pure Milk and Free Ice Fund to save the babies. They now are almost $500 ahead of their magnificent record of last season.

Berlin's Musical Life Not Seriously Disturbed by Wild War-Time Discords

Royal Opera Season, Opening Brilliantly With Wagner's "Lohengrin," Now Under Full Headway—American Musicians in German Capital Protest Against Untruthful Reports of Existing Conditions.

European War Thus Far Has Affected Berlin's Musical Life Only to Extent of Causing Abandonment of Philharmonic Concert Season—Many Notable Musicians Now Fighting Under Their Country's Colors—French Composer Killed Defending His Home.

By RIPLEY D. SAUNDERS.

ACCORDING to recent reports from Berlin, the operatic and general musical situation in the German capital is not by any means so seriously affected by the war as was announced during the early days of that great conflict.

Theodore Spiering, formerly of St. Louis and of late years a distinguished figure in Berlin musical life, returning from Germany the other day, gave an interview to "Musical America" in New York, emphasizing this truth of sturdily loyal German devotion to Music under most forbidding conditions. "Berlin has suffered only slightly because of the war," he says. "Only two weeks later than usual, the Berlin Royal Opera Company opened the present season with a splendid performance of Wagner's 'Lohengrin'—a performance which, because of the circumstances, under which it was given, will to me always remain one of the most impressive I have ever heard of the work. I felt that here was a nation, decried for its barbarism, which, under stress of a terrible struggle for self-preservation, was able to uphold its high ideals in art."

Additional confirmation of the truth that Berlin's musical season is progressing along well-nigh normal lines is furnished by the Berlin correspondent of the same publication. "The temporary effect this war has had on Berlin's musical season," he writes, "has been a calling off of all the Philharmonic concerts for this year. Both the Royal Opera House and the Charlottenburg Opera and many other theaters in town are in full swing, giving performances nightly to fairly well-filled houses. No difference between Berlin mobilized and the Berlin of the musical season was noticeable. All the restaurants were wide open and filled with a joyful and at times enthusiastic public."

The first indication of the altered state of Berlin, this correspondent notes, was the number of missing American musicians. Still, he points out, a goodly percentage of American artists remains "to make life livable." And all these are enthusiastic adherents of Germany in the present struggle, he announces.

This fact also is emphasized in a published card signed by a number of American musicians remaining in Berlin, among the signatory group being William Hinshaw, Jane Abercrombie, Alma Simpson, George Walker, Arthur M. Curry, Grace Madison, George Fergusson and Cleveland Bohnet.

These artists emphatically protest against "the fictitious reports concerning danger, a lack of food, a possible panic and similar assertions relative to Berlin or Germany." They announce that the prices for food and all necessities in Berlin have been strictly regulated by the authorities and that, consequently, they are, if anything, lower than formerly. "Food, as well as luxuries, may be had in plenty," they declare, "and the city is imbued with a peaceful calm, so that Americans are better off in Berlin today than elsewhere."

The card closes with an expression of "unbounded admiration for the German authorities and the Germans who are showing Americans here a courtesy and hospitality that baffles all description."

Interesting news also is given of the foreign whereabouts, war-time experiences, adventures and misadventures of many famous musicians, well known in this country, many of whom are under contract for operatic or concert engagements on this side and some of whom now have their permanent abiding place in the land of the free.

Dr. Carl Muck, conductor of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, leaves Berlin this week, bound for Boston, where the Symphony season opens Oct. 16. Arthur Nikisch, whose conductorship of the London Symphony Orchestra concert in St. Louis two seasons ago is so vividly remembered for picturesqueness and colorful effectiveness, was detained for five days as a spy by the Germans in Ostend, Belgium, spending the time in a freight car. Walter Kirschoff, tenor of the Berlin Royal Opera, now is at the front with his regiment, the Metz dragoons. Willy Burmester, the violinist, has been compelled to cancel his engagement for an American concert season. Heinrich Hensel, formerly with the Metropolitan Opera company of New York, is a soldier in the German reserve army. Rudolph Berger, one of the Metropolitan's great tenors, is a Lieutenant in the Austrian infantry. His wife, Marie Rappold, the prima donna, has offered her services as a Red Cross nurse. Ottillie Metzger, who was heard in St. Louis as contralto soloist with our Symphony Orchestra a year or so ago, already is a Red Cross nurse at the front, but hopes to be able to come to this country in February.

It would seem that the Munich Concertverin is perhaps the most seriously affected of all the European musical organizations. Not only is every man in the orchestra now on the war's firing line, but many of the directors, as well, have been called to the front.

Maurice Nitke, musical director of "Omar, the Tentmaker," the American-made drama utilizing old Omar Khayyam as its central figure, in which Guy Bates Post will star on tour this season, was arrested in Canada as a spy and released only when the United States Government vouched for him as a follower of Thespis, not Mars. Seeing the town of Kamloops full of colonial soldiers, Mr. Nitke innocently asked how many there were and so fell under suspicion.

Fritz Kreisler, now an Austrian Lieutenant, is in a Vienna hospital, having been wounded by the Cossacks, and is reported to be recovering and eager for further service. Caruso, the world's greatest tenor and box-office mainstay of the Metropolitan season, publicly announces that, in the event of Italy going to war, he will join her colors as a member of the artillery reserve. Geraldine Farrar of the Metropolitan is in a Munich sanitarium, following a surgical operation for the loosening of a ligament in her right knee, but is expected to sail for New York early this month. Alberic Magnard, the famous French composer of "Berenice," "Yolande," "Guercoeur" and other lyric dramas, has been shot by the Germans after having killed two German soldiers who broke into the garden of his villa near Nanteuil in France. Reinhold von Warlich, the lieder-singer, whose two half-brothers are fighting in the Russian army, himself has volunteered for the French ambuiance service. He cherishes German art ideals, but condemns German militarism and the Bismarckian "brute force policy." Mme. Charles Cahier, profoundly pro-German in her sympathies, recently sang in Munich a German war song specially written for the occasion, a patriotic celebration, on the program of which she was billed as "Frau" Cahier. Edyth Walker, the American prima donna, now in Munich, contributed her automobile to the German Government for war-time service.

Josef Lhevinne, the famous pianist who has been heard several times in St. Louis, now is in a peculiar predicament in Berlin, where he has established himself as a teacher. Because he is a Russian, the German authorities refuse to let him leave Berlin, despite the fact that he is under engagement for an American concert tour, and require him to report to the Berlin police three times a week. Strenuous efforts are being made to obtain his release.

Thin People Can Increase Weight

Thin men and women who would like to increase their weight with 10 or 15 pounds of healthy "stay-there" fat should try eating a little Sargol with their meals for a while and note results. Here is a good test worth trying. First weigh yourself and measure yourself. Then take Sargol—one tablet with every meal—for two weeks. Then weigh and measure again. It isn't a question of how you look or feel or what your friends say and think. The scales and the tape measure will tell their own story, and most any thin man or woman can easily add from five to eight pounds in the first fourteen days by following this simple direction. And best of all, the new flesh stays put.

Sargol does not of itself make fat, but mixing with your food, it turns the fats, sugars and starches of what you have eaten into rich, ripe fat-producing nourishment for the tissues and blood—prepares it in an easily assimilated form which the blood can readily accept. All this nourishment now passes from your body as waste. But Sargol stops the waste and does it quickly and makes the fat-producing contents of the very same meals you are eating now develop pounds and pounds of healthy flesh between your skin and bones. Sargol is safe, pleasant, efficient and inexpensive. Judge & Dolph, Weipert Drug Co., Raboteau, Wolff-Wilson Co., Johnson-Enderle-Pauley 5 stores and other leading druggists in St. Louis and vicinity sell it in large boxes—forty tablets to a package—on a guarantee of weight increase or money back.—ADV.

BOXES FOR OPERA SEASON RAPIDLY ARE BEING TAKEN

The St. Louis Grand Opera Committee is gratified in announcing that the boxes for the popular season at the Odeon in November are being rapidly taken by subscription. Season subscriptions for boxes have been received from the following. Messrs. W. K. Bixby, B. F. Bush, Edward A. Faust, George W. Simmons, M. L. Wilkinson, Julius S. Walsh, H. L. Parker, John C. Roberts, August A. Busch, Daniel Catlin, Charles A. Stix, Henry W. Peters, Festus J. Wade, W. C. McBride and G. W. Brown.

Arrangements have been completed for the sale of tickets for the whole or for a part of the season. A plan has been evolved according to which those who desire to attend all the performances can be accommodated either with boxes or with seats, and those who can attend only half the performances can select six of them that will include all the principal operas and singers.

Series A includes the entire 12 performances. Series B includes Monday evening, Nov. 9; Wednesday afternoon, Nov. 11; Thursday evening, Nov. 12, and in the second week Tuesday evening, Nov. 17; Thursday afternoon, Nov. 19, and Friday evening, Nov. 20. Series C includes performances on Wednesday evening, Nov. 11; Friday evening, Nov. 13; Saturday afternoon, Nov. 14, and in the second week Monday evening, Nov. 16; Wednesday evening, Nov. 18, and Saturday afternoon, Nov. 21.

Repertoire Soon to Be Announced.

The operas to be performed will be announced in the near future. Prices for boxes for the season are $180, and for either series B or C are $90. Single seats in the parquet or balcony can be had at from 50 cents to $2 for a single performance and from $6 to $24 for the season, and half those figures for a half season. "First come, first served" will be the rule, and communications may be sent to the St. Louis Grand Opera Committee, in care of the National Bank of Commerce.

The number of letters asking for information concerning the opera season from prospective out-of-town patrons has been a source of pleasant surprise to those in charge of the operatic campaign. Inquiries have been received from Paducah, Ky.; Nashville and Memphis, Tenn.; Little Rock and Fort Smith, Ark.; Oklahoma City and other towns in Oklahoma and from numerous points in Illinois and Missouri. These inquiries indicate in a striking manner the extent to which residents in surrounding towns look upon a city that possesses grand opera as their natural metropolis, and feel themselves drawn toward it and interested in it.

FANNIE WARD IN 'MME. PRESIDENT' NOW AT OLYMPIC

"Help Wanted," With Henry Kolker, Comes to Shubert—Other St. Louis Playbills.

FANNIE WARD in "Madam President." Olympic. Farce-comedy adapted from the French of Maurice Hennequin and Pierre Veber. Has scored successes in Paris, Berlin, London, Vienna, Milan and New York.

Its story concerns Gobette, a French actress, who appears under somewhat startling auspices at the home of M. Galipaux, president of the tribunal of a provincial French village, becoming involved in a flirtation with Cyprienne Gaudet, Minister of Justice, and from this situation the story's many complications and amusing incidents arise. The play is said to be speedy in action and full of laughs.

The company supporting Miss Ward, who will wear her most famous gowns and jewels in the play, is the same that appeared in the original New York production and includes Harry J. Ashford, John W. Dean, Amy Lee, Frank Darson, Jack W. Horwitz, George Brennan, Charles Laite, William Levis, Reynolds Sweetland, Harriet Trench, Alice Kelly, Emily Hampton and Helen Buckley.

"HELP WANTED," with Henry Kolker. Shubert. New and successful drama by Jack Lait, presented by the original Chicago company, its theme being the problem confronting girls seeking employment in a great city.

Jerold Scott, a prosperous middle-aged importer, has a weakness for good-looking stenographers. Gertrude Meyer, pretty and innocent, answers his "help wanted" advertisement and is employed because of her attractiveness. The incidents that follow are said to be swift in action and tense with dramatic power, lightened by breezy comedy. An honest love affair between Gertrude and Scott's stepson, a junior member of the office force, is interwoven with the main plot. Scott finally is made to see the error of his ways and Gertrude finds real happiness with her rescuer.

Henry Kolker's associates in the cast are Franklyn Underwood, Charles Ruggles, James Corrigan, Grace Valentine, Catherine Emmett, Alice Pateo and Lillian Elliott.

Next week, Sam Bernard in "The Belle of Bond Street."

"THE CONFESSION." American. Return engagement of strong and uplifting drama with two successful seasons to its credit. Its leading characters are a priest, a mother, a sweetheart and an innocent man condemned to death, and its story is of absorbing interest. The play's scenes show the rectory of Our Lady of Mercy Church at Gloucester, Mass., the Governor's office in Boston, the preliminary courtroom at Gloucester and the prison at Charleston. A capable company and a picturesque scenic production are announced.

"MLLE. MODISTE." Park. Introducing Mabel Wilber, one of the original Merry Widows, the new prima donna of the Park Opera Company, in the role of Fritzi Scheff's creating. Miss Wilber takes the place of Miss Eleanor Henry, who goes to New York for a course of study. She is said to be a beautiful and sweet-throated singer.

Two other newcomers in the cast are Charles H. Bowers, baritone, formerly with "The Chocolate Soldier" and with Marie Dressler in "Tillie's Nightmare," and Matt. Hanley, character comedian, formerly with Lulu Glaser in "Miss Dudelsack," with De Wolf Hopper and with Marie Cahill in "Marrying Mary." The cast includes Roger Gray, Louise Allen, Carl Haydn, Maud K. Williams, Margaret Crawford, Royal Cutter and Edward Smith.

An excellent production of this bright and tuneful comic opera, its music by Victor Herbert and its book by Henry Blossom, formerly of St. Louis, is promised.

"THE DEEP PURPLE." Shenandoah. Paul Armstrong's drama of the underground. The Players' cast includes Mitchell Harris, Marion Ruckert, John Maurice Sullivan, Eda von Buelow, Henry Hull, Robert McClung, Carson Davenport, Phillips Tead, Leonora Bradley, Anna Berger Price, Elsa Kendel and Louis Calhern.

ALL-STAR YIDDISH COMPANY in "Who Was Guilty?" Garrick. Sunday afternoon and evening, Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings. Company headed by Mmes. Reinart and Grossman and Mr. Samuel Grossman, and includes Eva Bauffalo, Sam Morris, J. Fishman, J. Weinstock, Mons Weisenfraud and Masters Irving and Joseph Grossman. The play ran for six months in New York City and three months in Boston, and also has scored Philadelphia and Chicago successes.

VAUDEVILLE. Columbia. Bill headed by Mercedes, "the psychic eighth wonder of the world," in an exhibition of thought transference and a curious mingling of music and mysticism, assisted by Mlle. Stantone.

VAUDEVILLE. Grand. Bill headed by David Walters and company in "Salvation Sue," a drama of the early days of the Klondyke gold craze.

GIRLS OF MOULIN ROUGE. Princess. Extravaganza and vaudeville, with Will H. Cohen as leading comedian. Leo La Blanc and Miss Elva Lorraine will appear in ballroom dances.

BIG SENSATION CO. Standard. Will present a new two-act musical comedy entitled "Palm Beach," also high-class vaudeville. Lydia Jospy, "the little nightingale," and the famous Brianza Trio are among the features.

DAINTY MAIDS CO. Gayety. Will present "Fun at a Railroad Station" and "A Night in Monte Carlo." Company headed by Arthur Laning, author and producer, and includes Jim Bennett, Jim McCabe, Dolly Webb and others.

"THE SCALES OF JUSTICE." New Grand Central. Famous Players photoplay, with Paul McAllister in leading role. A juvenile comedy and vocal numbers by Ralph Smith and Harry Fleming complete the bill.

"THE LITTLEST REBEL." Victoria. Photoplay version of successful Civil War drama. Title role played by Mimi Yvonne, a clever little actress seen when this play was presented at the Century Theater.

"QUO VADIS?" Lindell. Thrilling phtoplay version of Henry Sienkiewicz great novel. The Lindell Theater, Grand and Hebert, has been constructed at a cost of more than $200,000 with the idea that it not only will become a landmark toward building up North St. Louis, but also will attract attendance from all sections of the city. It now is spoken of as the "Theater Grand." The "Quo Vadis" pictures, full of action, open tonight.

"TIPPERARY" SONG NOW MONTGOMERY-STONE HIT

"It's a Long Way to Tipperary," the war song of the English army now fighting in France, was bound speedily to reach the American stage. Montgomery and Stone in Tommy Atkins uniforms sang it this past week during the premiere production of the new musical comedy, "Chin-Chin," of which they are the stars, at the Forrest Theater in Philadelphia. It is said to have scored a big hit.

The book of "Chin-Chin" is by Anne Caldwell and R. H. Burnside, the lyrics by Anne Caldwell and James O'Dea, the music by Ivan Caryll, and its plot is based upon the Arabian Nights' story of "Aladdin and the Wonderful Lamp." Montgomery and Stone have the roles of two Chinamen, Ching Hop Low and Chin Ring Chang, slaves of the lamp, and are said to have unusual opportunities for fun-making.

The piece will be taken to the Globe Theater in New York following the close of its Philadelphia engagement.

BURTON HOLMES COMES TO ODEON NEXT WEEK

Burton Holmes will open his annual travelogue season at the Odeon on Tuesday evening, Oct. 13, the total series comprising five successive Tuesday evening illustrated lectures. There will be no matinee course.

The subjects to be presented, in the order named, are "England," "Scotria," "Ireland," "Germany and Austria" and "The Allied Powers." The sale of course tickets will open at the Odeon box office next Wednesday.

Mr. Holmes and his photographers spent the greater part of this past summer motoring through most of the countries now involved in war. He was in England when the war began. But he announces that he will not illustrate the carnage and ravage of war, showing, instead, motion pictures and still views of Austria, Germany and France as they were in the days of prosperity and peace.

NEWMAN TRAVEL-TALKS NEXT MONTH.

E. M. Newman now definitely announces the subjects of the new series of travel talks which he will present at the Odeon during November and December. They are "Egypt," "The Holy Land From Mount Sinai to Jerusalem," "The Holy Land From Jerusalem to Galilee," "The Riviera to Paris" and "Berlin, the War Center." Included in the series will be pictures taken by Mr. Newman himself in the European war zone.

"GETS-IT," 2 Drops, Corn Vanishes!

The Only Sure Ender of All Corns.

Desperate, are you, over trying to get rid of corns? Quit using old formulas under new names, bandages, winding-tapes and cotton rings that make a fat little package out of your toe. Quit punishing your feet by using toe-eating salves and ointments.

This Is the Grip of the Happy, Cornless Footernity of "GETS-IT."

To use knives, files, scissors and razors, slicing and hacking at a corn, only makes it grow faster and bigger. It also brings danger of bleeding and blood poison. The new way, the new principle never known before in corn-history, is "GETS-IT." It's a liquid—2 drops on a corn does the work. Pain goes, the corn begins to shrivel and it comes! You apply it in two seconds. Nothing to stick, nothing to hurt, and it never fails. Try "GETS-IT" tonight on corns, calluses, warts or bunions.

PUNCH AND JUDY THEATER IS NEXT GOTHAM NOVELTY

Financed by an Actor, It Will Open With "The Marriage of Columbine."

New York's most piquant playhouse novelty will come into being with the opening of the Punch and Judy Theater in the near future, and an additional novelty attaching to the enterprise is that it is financed by Charles Hopkins, an actor, who has built the new house with his own money.

The Punch and Judy Theater is situated on Forty-ninth street, just off Seventh avenue. It is said to be beautiful in architecture and decorations. Precisely as is the case with the Little Theater, managed by Winthrop Ames, it will have a seating capacity of exactly 299, but it is announced that its stage is adequate for the biggest productions.

The opening attraction will be "The Marriage of Columbine," a play said to be uncommonly charming in its story and atmosphere and already to have scored a European success. Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins will appear in the production and will be permanent members of the company.

Mr. Hopkins gained managerial distinction as the director of the Fine Arts Theater in Chicago last season.

The annual season of French opera in New Orleans is abandoned this year owing to the fact that every male singer in the company which was to have been brought over from Paris now is serving under the French colors in the great war. An attempt was made to find in some other country a French opera organization open to a New Orleans engagement, but without success.

Rehearsals were begun this past week of Edward Sheldon's play, "The Song of Songs," based on a Sudermann novel which Charles Frohman will "try out" at Atlantic City on Oct. 26, preliminary to bringing it into New York City.

Its central figure is a woman cosmopolite, living in Berlin, with a too-great readiness to love. When the right man comes along late in the story she is sated with loving. Whereupon, tragically tearing into fragments her artist-father's great composition, "The Song of Songs," which has a mystical connection with her own life, she marries a rich parvenu who long has been prominent in her train.

The cast will include Irene Fenwick, William McVay, Pedro de Cordoba, Cyril Keightley, Thomas A. Wise and others.

"England Expects"—is the title of a made-to-order war drama by Seymour Hicks and Edward Knoblauch, just produced at the London Opera House. It is a combination of melodrama, movie pictures, recitations and patriotic songs, opening with a scene in which a number of well-born English "shirkers" are shamed into volunteering for war-time service by a glowing story of the horrors of the destruction of Louvain, told by a young English officer just returned, wounded, from the front. The "movies" show the British troops marching off to the present war. "Your King and Country Want You" is one of the big song hits, and recitations of Kipling's "England's Answer" and "'Erbert, the Bank Clerk," win unstinted applause.

A HAPPY BALD HEADED MAN

Well-Known Politician Nearly Bald Now Has New Growth of Hair.

Tells How He Did It.

A western politician, well-known on account of his baldness and ready wit, surprised his friends by appearing with a new growth of hair. Many of his old friends did not know him and others thought he had a wig. On being asked how he did it, he made the following statement: "I attribute the remarkable growth of my hair to the use of the following simple recipe which any lady or gentleman can mix at home: To a half pint of water add 1 oz. of bay rum, a small box of Barbo Compound and ¼ oz. of glycerine. Apply to the scalp two or three times a week with the finger tips. It not only promotes the growth of the hair but removes dandruff, scalp humors and prevents the hair from falling out. It darkens streaked, faded, gray hair and makes the hair soft and glossy. These ingredients can be purchased at any drug store at very little cost and mixed at home."—ADVERTISEMENT.

ELECTION CLERK CITED TO ANSWER IN FRAUD CHARGE

Democratic Official in Fourteenth Ward Alleged to Have Been Convicted.

The Election Board yesterday cited James P. O'Donnell of 517 North Leonard avenue, a Democratic election clerk in the Fourteenth Precinct of the Seventeenth Ward, to appear at the city hall Wednesday and answer charges that he was convicted of an attempt at fraudulent voting in 1907 and is therefore disqualified to act.

A man named James P. O'Donnell, in 1907, served six months in the Workhouse and paid a $100 fine when convicted of attempted fraudulent voting. This man had attempted, under the name of George James of 4337 Cook avenue, to vote in the Second Primary District of the Twenty-sixth Ward, on June 23, 1906.

When in the workhouse O'Donnell wrote a letter to Judge Taylor. The signature on this letter has been compared with the signature of Election Clerk O'Donnell, which appears on his commission issued by the Election Board.

An applicant for a judgeship or clerkship of election, Commissioner May said, always is asked if he has been convicted of a crime. There is no record, May said, of who recommended James P. O'Donnell for a clerkship.

A Post-Dispatch reporter, who called several times at O'Donnell's home last week, was told he was out of town.

REVENUE MAN SAYS OLEO FRAUDS REACH $18,000,000

Agent Returns From Rhode Island and Ohio, Where He Raided Plants.

Chief Internal Revenue Agent Nutt returned to his office yesterday, after a five months' trip in the East, during which he directed raids on four large manufacturers of oleo. He said he obtained evidence that the Government had been defrauded out of $18,000,000 of oleo tax.

As a result, Nutt said, 13 officials of the four companies were indicted on charges of defrauding the Government, and each released on a $15,000 bond. He said the Vermont Manufacturing Co., the New England Manufacturing Co., and the Narragansett Dairy Co., were all raided in Providence, R. I. The other raid was on the Capital City Dairy Co., in Columbus, O.

Nutt stated these companies have been doing business for many years and although the Government agents have sought numerous times to secure evidence which would cause the indictment of the owners, they were unsuccessful until this summer.

PEORIA MAN ROBBED AND SHOT IN EAST ST. LOUIS

M. A. Lathrop, a merchant of Peoria, Ill., walked into a saloon at Collinsville and St. Louis avenues, East St. Louis, yesterday, suffering from a bullet wound on the left side of his face, which he said had been inflicted by one of several men who attacked him in an automobile after he had left a Collinsville roadhouse early in the morning.

Lathrop said he had been in St. Louis early last night when he met several "good fellows," who suggested that they go to the East Side. He said he drank a great deal and spent about $50, having the same amount left when he got into the automobile bound towards East St. Louis.

Lathrop had but a vague recollection of being shot and said when he recovered consciousness he was lying along a road. He walked to the saloon. He was taken to the Henrietta Hospital, where it was said, his condition is serious. He had no money in his clothing.

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The Easiest and Best Way Is to Dissolve It.

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

If you want to preserve your hair, do by all means get rid of dandruff, for nothing destroys the hair more quickly. It not only starves the hair and makes it fall out, but it makes it stringy, straggly, dull, dry, brittle and lifeless, and everyone notices it. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

CITY IS ASKED TO ABATE ODORS FROM PACKING HOUSES

Civic League Petition Directed Against Nuisance at National City.

COMPLAINT AN OLD ONE

Director of Public Welfare and Health Commissioner Are Asked to Act.

An appeal to Director of Public Welfare Tolkacz and Health Commissioner Starkloff to proceed through Illinois State or municipal officials to abate the odors from packing houses at National City, just north of East St. Louis, was made yesterday by John H. Gundlach, president of the Civic League.

Gundlach recalls in his letter to the health authorities that an investigation by that department a year ago disclosed the East Side packing plants were discharging gases from their rendering plants into the open air, instead of deodorizing them by passage through a sheet of water and through fire.

The league conducted an investigation last summer of St. Louis packing plants through Scott R. DeKins, assistant secretary, who reported conditions were much improved, but not yet satisfactory. DeKins gave five plants a clean bill of health and complained of seven to the Board of Health.

The St. Louis plants are declared by league officials to be entirely local nuisances, odors not traveling more than five to ten blocks from any of them. The East Side plants emit odors that are a nuisance five or six miles away.

Assistant City Counselor Truman P. Young advised the Health Department last May that before injunctions are sought in either Illinois or Federal courts, every effort to abate the East Side odors through State and city officials should be attempted.

INSURANCE COMPANY SUES BANK FOR $99,899

Plaintiff Says Amount Was Deposited, Defendant Says Agent Withdrew it.

Suit was filed yesterday by Matt G. Reynolds, receiver of the Continental Assurance Co. of America, against the Third National Bank for $99,899.18, which, it is alleged, was deposited by the insurance company with the bank between Feb. 26, 1909, and June 9, 1910. The bank immediately entered its appearance in the case and filed an answer to get an early disposition of the case. The suit was assigned to Judge Withrow's court, where a stipulation was filed that Joseph H. Zumbalen try the issues as referee.

In its answer the bank denies that the receiver is entitled to the amount sued for. It is alleged that when the company was being organized, Harry B. Gardner, its fiscal agent and secretary, deposited at various times with banks a total of the amount specified in the petition. While this deposit was entered in the name of the company it was regarded as an individual deposit by Gardner, who, it is alleged, held it subject to his check an the money was paid out in this way from time to time, the answer says. When the receiver was appointed in June, 1910, there was $1226.62 to the credit of the company in the Third National, which was paid over to the receiver.

According to John S. Leahy, attorney for the plaintiff, the money was received from the sale of stock in the company. As the concern had not yet received a license to transact business, Gardner was without legal authority to write checks on its funds, the attorney contends.

Nearly 300 Pleasure Cars and Commercial Vehicles, All of the 1915 Models, Will Be on Exhibition This Week at Forest Park Highlands Three Months Before New York's Big Show Opens—Novelties in Engine and Body Design and Equipments—Decorative Scheme a "Park Driveway."

ST. LOUIS, and no other city in this country, has ever seen as complete and interesting an automobile show as will open at Forest Park Highlands, Monday night, at 7 o'clock. This show is given by the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association. It is known as "the regular show." Every dealer in St. Louis and every car here will be represented, with the exception of possibly half a dozen. These half dozen have found it impossible to exhibit because the 1915 models have not yet been sent to them.

The St. Louis show is notable in that it will be the premier showing of the 1915 models of cars and trucks. There will be no other public automobile show held until January, when the New York show is scheduled, so that St. Louis has the distinction of displaying to the world the newest automobile creations three months before any other city in the country. In fact, St. Louis holds the only fall automobile show in this country. It has been designed on a more elaborate scale than ever before. There will be a total display of 225 pleasure cars, gasoline and electric, and about fifty motor trucks and delivery wagons of various makes. There will be 144 front feet of accessory displays of nine feet deep and ranging in frontage from five to ten feet each, none more than the latter figure. In this display will be included every new and novel accessory attachment for an automobile. There will also be an important and interesting display of tops for motor cars and bodies made in the accessory department, and there will be three exhibits of garages for private grounds, two of them of wood and the other set of sheet metal.

THE show this year will be of supreme attraction to those who are in any degree interested in motor cars. New motor designs, including an eight-cylinder engine; new designs in bodies and the display of much lower-priced models by hitherto makers of only high-priced cars, will be only a few of the many things worth seeing.

The arrangement of the pleasure car department is especially attractive this year. The scheme of the show is a "park driveway," and the cars will be attractively displayed on either side of the "driveway," giving the appearance of an immense parking of cars in a public park.

The electric cars are not isolated this year, as they were at the last show, but are displayed with the gasoline pleasure cars to the best possible advantage. All the electric pleasure cars sold in St. Louis, except one, are shown.

Twenty Exhibits in Section Devoted to Accessory Men

There are about twenty exhibits in the accessories department, which is located in the long pavilion leading to the cottage, just to the east of the main entrance. It is the largest and best exhibit of motor accessories ever shown in St. Louis. The exhibits include a fine showing of piston rings, tire filler, tires, inner tubes, electric batteries, novel spring wheels, new style motor toggery and clothing, robes, coats, caps and general motor supplies, most of which have never been shown publicly.

About forty different makes of trucks will be shown in the truck department. In this display are included delivery wagons with fancy bodies, one, two, three and five ton trucks, motor vehicles with panel bodies and a tractor with a trailer attached.

A new exhibit in the St. Louis fall show will be two handsome hearses, which will be exhibited by the two St Louis automobile manufacturers.

The exhibitors ball will be given this year on Friday night, Oct. 9. This will be an invitation affair. The large ballroom will be attractively decorated in keeping with the al fresco effect of the show. The ball will open at 10 o'clock and continue until 1 a. m. Special car service will be arranged.

The Show Committee has added 2000 60-candle power tungsten lamps to the already brilliant lighting of Forest Park Highlands, and 40 flaming arc lamps have also been installed in the open park.

Rotunda of Park Made to Look More Artistic

The rotunda at the entrance has been transformed into a conventional park garden, with a 20-foot high pergola in the center. In the pergola is a statue of the winged god—Mercury—typical of the automobile industry. Around the base of the statue is a conventional flower bed of blooming plants. The west wall of the rotunda is built up of fissured rocks, which are topped with autumn foliage. Small streams of water trickle down over the rocks, forming a pond at the base, around which aquatic plants are growing.

THE ceiling and pillars are covered with autumn foliage, through which thousands of electric lights will twinkle like so many stars.

A large number of visitors are expected from nearby cities as invitations to more than 5000 persons interested in automobiles have been sent out by dealers. Practically every subdealer in the St Louis territory will attend.

The members of the Show Committee are: T. L Overman, chairman Overland Automobile Co.; Samuel Beardon, Western Automobile Co.; J. D. Perry Lewis, Lewis Automobile Co.; Ralph R. Doak, Woods Electric Vehicle Co.; Joseph A. Schlecht, Mound City Buggy Co.; A. L. Elwood, Locomobile Co. of Missouri; Allan H. Clark, Vehicle Top and Supply Co., and Robert E. Lee, show manager.

To the man who, through use of the modern means of transportation, has tuned his life to the motor pitch, the show in Forst Park Highlands is not a mere display of vehicles catering to the sport of the owner in the case of the car, or of substitutes for horses in the case of the truck. They represent rather a demonstration of the progress of a recognized necessity. Even as a means of pleasure the car has its utilitarian aspect, for the possession of a motor means that the owner and his family are enabled to enjoy the health-giving out-of-doors to a degree that without the motor car is impossible. The car is an asset to the business man who does most of his work at an office desk, for it gives him, to concentrate on his work, sensibilities freshened by the contact with the weather in his daily rides to and from his home. With his car he may live in the country, whereas, limited by any other mode of transportation, he must reside nearer his work in the noisy city. To the business man whose duties take him out of doors, the motor increases his power of personal supervision many fold, while the truck makes available a quicker distribution of merchandise and a wider range of trade.

The manufacturer recognizes in the motor car a method of communication between his office and plant, if his office happens to be in the city and his plant outside; he sees in the truck an agency which tends to break the fetters that have bound factories to the railroad lines. With motor car and motor truck equipment the manufacturer in any line of goods can build his plant on the site that was previously not available because of distance from lines of transportation, and he can keep in touch with the isolated plant as well as with that which is on the older lines of communication. To the merchant the motor is a tie that binds his customers closer to him. He can deliver his goods over more territory and with quicker and more satisfactory service, and his salesmen can visit more customers and see them oftener. The physician early accepted the motor as a means of materially increasing his efficiency. He can attend the same number of patients in a given time or more patients in a day, than he could before with all kinds of transportation that were available for him.

IT may be doubted if the man or woman for whom the motor car is still out of reach because of price regards it in the light of a mere luxury. The things they buy at the stores are delivered by motor, their coal comes in power trucks, their physician speeds to their call in his car, the houses for which they work buy motor cars for their salesmen because they are thereby made more efficient. They see, moreover, their friend who has been able to save a few hundred dollars, investing the money in a motor car, and soon moving out of the cramped city flat to the districts out of town, where living conditions are vastly superior. Even the farmers of Missouri are becoming motor enthusiasts, for they have been quick to figure out that the possession of a motor car puts produce on a farm 20 miles from the city on practically the same basis in relation to the market, as that on a farm seven miles out, with the old form of handling produce.

Music will be featured as never before when the Veiled Prophet makes his annual visit to St. Louis next Tuesday. In addition to the brilliant lights and colorful decorations in the Coliseum when the faithful followers of the Prophet gather for the great ball, which will be the social feature of Festival Week, there will be delights for the ear as well as the eye.

For the first time a concert recital with singers of international fame will be one of the attractions at the Veiled Prophet's ball.

The soloists will be Miss Sophie Braslau and Antonio Scotti. Miss Braslau will sing four selections and Scotti, one of the world's greatest baritones, will be heard in four operatic numbers. Charles Galloway will accompany on the piano.

From the standpoint of the general public the big Veiled Prophet attraction will be the brilliantly illuminated street parade Tuesday night, preceding the ball.

Bolts of bunting and hundreds of flags will be used. Special lighting of 5000-candlepower will be installed. A large illuminated crown will hang over the court of honor and spotlights will be thrown on the dancers.

A call at the costumers' reveals that heroic characters are in high favor with the men and dozens at the ball will carry swords and wear trousers and coats of brocaded satin.

The proceeds of the ball will go to paying the taxes on the Coliseum. The event is being managed by the directors of the Coliseum.

Group Prize Competition.

A number of clubs will compete for group prizes and will have to meet other groups not members of clubs who have banded together and who, in some instances, have delved into stories of adventure and romance for characterization.

O! GIVE BACK TO ME MY O', FALLON ASKS OF COURTS

Traveling Salesman Wants Gaelic Prefix of Distinction Restored to Name.

William O'Fallon, a traveling salesman who makes his headquarters at [illegible] Hotel when in St. Louis, [illegible] to get back the "O" that somebody took from his family tree. He has petitioned the Circuit Court to change his name to O'Fallon.

According to St. Louis experts in Irish history and philology Fallon's desire for the prefix is well justified, for they say a man with an "O" in front of his name has good reason to be proud of it.

In his petition Fallon says the family name originally was O'Fallon, but some ancestor shortened it by dropping the prefix.

Cornelius Molony of 4567A McPherson avenue, a noted Gaelic scholar and authority on Irish history, told a Post-Dispatch reporter that Fallon might greatly improve the aristocratic quality of his name by prefixing either an "O" or a "Mc" to it, as both are the patronymic patents of nobility. The "Mc," he says, is even older than the "O," though both were used more than 600 years before Christ.

Some Philology.

"Before the battle of Clontarff in 1014, when the Irish drove the Danes out of Ireland, the Gaelic form of the prefix 'O' was 'Ua,' said Molony. "The original form of 'Mc' was 'Meic.'

"The prefix 'O' corresponds to the English 'of,' the German 'von' or the French 'de.' It signifies the tribe to which the bearer's ancestors belonged. More than that, it indicated that the man with an 'O' in front of his name was a direct descendant of the royal head of a tribe—literally a descendant of Kings.

"The 'Mc' is even a more distinctive sign of noble birth. In the days of ancient Ireland no one except the first-born son of an Irish King or chieftan was privileged to put a 'Mc' in front of his name. 'Mc' means 'son of.'

Marks of Distinction.

"In olden times it meant 'first son of' and only the heir to the throne of the chieftancy could be a 'Mc.' Other members of the family had to be content with the prefix 'O,' which, however, was in itself a very high mark of distinction."

Molony holds fast to the belief that the first Irish went to Europe about the time of Moses. Some authorities hold that it was not the Israelites, but the Irish, who crossed the Red Sea on that memorable occasion when Pharaoh's army was swamped. However this may be, he says, there were "Mc's" and "O's" in Ireland long before "Von's" and "de's" were dreamed of. He is inclined to think Connie Mack's original family name was McGun, "Mc" signifying "son of."

COMMERCIAL CLUB OFFICERS TO MEET FIRST TIME HERE

Body Organized in Cincinnati Friday to Gather Jan. 19—St. Louisan President.

At its organization meeting in Cincinnati, Friday, the newly created National Association of Commercial Secretaries decided to hold its first annual convention in St. Louis, Jan. 19 and 20 next.

The new organization is a consolidation of the American Association of Commercial Executives and the Central Association of Commercial Secretaries.

Justin A. Runyan, manager of the St. Louis Convention Bureau, was chosen president. The other officers are:

Vice-president, Henry B. Saunders, Convention Commissioner, Buffalo, N. Y.; secretary-treasurer, J. Lee Barrett, secretary Detroit Convention and Tourists' Bureau. Directors, Fred Houser, secretary Atlanta Convention Bureau; J. C. Hillwegg, secretary the Convention Division of Minneapolis; John A. O'Dwyer, secretary Convention Bureau, Toledo, O.; C. W. Dull, secretary Convention Bureau, Peoria, Ill.; and Chas M. Raphun, secretary, manager Indianapolis Convention and Tourists' Bureau.

The new organization has a membership of 139, composed of secretaries and managers of commercial organizations in the cities of the United States.

During the present year Harvard College, Wisconsin University, Columbia University, Missouri University, and a number of other of the larger universities have established courses of study covering commerce and commercial secretaries and their work. The securing of conventions and general publicity work has become of such importance to cities that especially equipped men have been employed to handle this work, so a separate organization, "The Association of Secretaries of Convention and Publicity Bureaus," was formed at this meeting in Cincinnati and the membership is composed of the secretary-managers of independent convention and publicity bureaus, and those specially employed to conduct the convention and publicity department of civic organizations of the United States. These convention directors represent 28 cities at the present time.

TWO IRISH SOLDIERS FIGHT TWENTY UHLANS

Both Are Slain in Mad Dash to Capture Machine Gun; Killed Half of Foes.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A wounded trooper of the Royal Irish Dragoon Guards tells how two members of his regiment, one of them wounded, fought against more than a score of uhlans until both were killed.

A member of the guards carried a wounded comrade to a farmhouse. When the allies were forced to retreat they were left behind and were soon surrounded by a party of uhlans. Behind a barrier of furniture they kept the Germans at bay, wounding or killing half of them.

Then the uhlans brought up a machine gun, and seeing that the home of the farmer and his wife, who had been kind to them, would be destroyed, they rushed from the barricade in a mad effort to take the gun. They had gone but a few steps when both fell dead.

RUDOLPH GANZ WITH NIELSON HERE OCT. 24

Swiss Pianist Escapes Military Service and Will Star at Odeon With Singer.

Rudolph Ganz, noted pianist, who narrowly escaped service in the European war, will come to St. Louis this month as co-star with Alice Nielson, the American soprano, to give a concert in the Odeon Oct. 24. Ganz is of Swiss birth, but German residence, and, although he never has renounced his Swiss citizenship, he found it difficult to prove it to the Berlin military authorities.

Ganz was last heard in St. Louis two seasons ago, when Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, was a special guest and patroness of a concert given for the benefit of the $1,000,000 Goucher College endowment fund.

Nielson has long been a favorite in St. Louis, both in grand opera and in recital, and her popularity here dates back to the time when she sang light opera. Her forthcoming visit will be the first for several years.

The recital in which she and Ganz will give the program will be the formal opening of the musical season here.

NEW CADILLAC HAS EIGHT CYLINDER V-TYPE ENGINE

New Type Motor Most Radical Engineering Change of 1915 Season.

In announcing that its new car is powered with an eight-cylinder engine of the V-type, the Cadillac Motor Car Co. becomes the first American manufacturer to develop an eight-cylinder car for the market, and the only manufacturer whose latest product embodies a vital advance in engineering and in motoring.

As the Cadillac company puts it, "Building and experimenting in turn, with every type from the single cylinder to the six, and from the poppet to the rotary and to the sliding valve, we have been carried forward to the highest form of frequent impulse motor—the V-type eight-cylinder.

"The principal advantage of the eight-cylinder engine is, of course, its continuous torque, and continuous uniform generation of power. There is no pause or lapse between power impulses, of which there are eight in each complete cycle of the engine, four to every revolution of the crankshaft, or one every quarter turn. The firing alternates from side to side. The continuous torque produces an almost utter absence of vibration, at both high and low speeds."

The cylinder dimensions of the new Cadillac engine are comparatively small—3¼ inches bore and 5⅛ inches stroke—yet in repeated tests by bynamometer, an excess of 60-horsepower has been registered.

The cylinders are cast in two blocks of four cylinders each, with water jackets, combustion chambers and intake manifold integral. The cylinder blocks are mounted on the crank case at an angle of 90 degrees to each other, from whence the designation, "V-type."

One of the factors which contributes materially to the smoothness and absence of vibration in this engine, aside from its fundamental principle, is the lightness of the reciprocating parts. For example, a pair of piston connecting rods weigh only 48 ounces, yet in making the laboratory tests it required a compressed strain of more than nine tons to bend one of them.

A multiple disc clutch is employed and the motor and transmission are mounted as a unit, the two rear points being bolted to the frame and the forward point taken care of by a ball and socket joint.

Details of the car include left drive and center location of the gear change and hand brake levers, wide doors, lighting and ignition switches located conveniently on the cowl board and a pedal button in the floor for bringing the electric device into action.

NEW EMPIRE TOURING CAR FOR 1915 SEASON

Increased production, continuation of the one-chassis policy, marked reduction in price and introduction of a new type in an electrically started and lighted stream-line touring car selling for less than $1000 are striking features of the 1915 program of the Empire Automobile Co., as announced this week. This gives the company a line of three distinct cars for the year, a roadster being carried with the two touring cars.

The new touring car, with is stream-line body and many points on continental design, as well as electric starting and lighting, stands out as a harmonious blending of European beauty with American convenience. Seats are set low, allowing backs of more than ordinary height. Upholstering throughout is Turkish type of selected leather. All door hinges are concealed, and with the body tapering back from cowl gives a most pleasing flush-side effect, completed by the limousine back. Roll crown fenders add to the general attractive appearance. Starter button is of plunger type on dash, while all other instruments, such as speedometer, carburetor adjustment, dash light, ignition switch, battery indicator and light controls, are assembled on an instrument board sheltered by the cowl. It is equipped with Remy one-unit electric system, with starting, generating and ignition of magneto type, with spark advance. Not only the car itself, but also the entire electric equipment, including oversize storage battery, is covered by a broad one-year guarantee. Nonskid tires are furnished on rear wheels as standard equipment. Windshield is of latest solid post, rain vision ventilating type, while all other equipment is complete in every detail.

A big car at a low price for a car of its size and power is offered in the Empire standard model 31 nonelectric car, which has complete equipment. This car is in its fourth season, newly improved and refined in many points of detail. The option of either electric or standard car is offered the purchaser. In addition to the touring models the line includes a roadster model furnished either with standard equipment or with electric starting and lighting.

These cars are but a new series of the one Empire chassis on which these various body types are mounted. This chassis, with accrued details of refinement, has been continued for four seasons without change in any basic principle of construction. The entire chassis is one of simplicity. It has unit power plant with the four-cylinder motor of 3¾-inch bore and 4½-inch stroke. The remainder of the chassis is built extra heavy and all gears and shafts being well oversize. In touring cars the gasoline tank is located under the front seat, while in the roadster it has place in the cowl.

The Empire is now represented in practically every part of the world, a splendid exported business having been built up within the last few years.

AUTO TRADE IS NEARER NORMAL, SCARE IS OVER

Reports from factories throughout the country indicate a return of trade in automobiles, which, like other industries, stopped short with the declarations of war in Europe. With the passing of the first fright, however, came the reaction and dealers with the factories state that the buying continues. American automobile manufacturers are now making plans for aggressive export campaigns. Export orders have fallen flat, as might be expected, but last year, it must be remembered, there were only 7 per cent of cars produced in this country, according to statistics compiled by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

America's demands during the last few years have been so great that only one maker has established a factory abroad, it being located in London, although a number of makers have established factories in Canada.

All American manufacturers are conservatively optimistic, with complete confidence in the possibilities of increased business during the next 12 months. Foreign factories are not producing. Their cars and trucks have suffered in the destructive warfare that is going on, so that before many months our export business should be bigger than ever, because the automobile and the motor truck are now among the necessities in the upbuilding and commercial life of every nation.

American representatives of foreign cars, of which about 660 were brought here last year, are now taking on American lines, although this was naturally to be expected because of the constant decrease of the importations of foreign vehicles during the last three years. Even the most conservative American builders appreciate that this country has a rare opportunity to secure the automobile trade of the world, in which they have not been the leaders, although they have fast been reaching the pinnacle.

CHALMERS ADDS LIGHT FOUR AND SIX TO 1915 LINE

Includes All Desirable Types of Both Closed and Open Cars Made.

With its 40 horsepower "Light Six" and its 60 horsepower "Master Six" the Chalmers line for 1915 is probably the most complete ever built by the Chalmers company. The two chassis models for the 1915 season include all of the desirable types of cars, including five, six and seven passenger touring cars, limousine, coupelet and sedan.

"We have in the 'Light Six' a car which is popular in price, $1650, and which contains the high quality which always characterizes the Chalmers output," says Sales Manager Percy Owen of the Chalmers Motor Co.

The improvements in the "Master Six" made in the 1915 model have necessitated an increase of price of $125."

The new Chalmers models show striking advances in body design. The larger "Six" is furnished in two body types; 7-passenger touring car and 5-passenger torpedo.

Both of these cars are of the foreign "boat" design—decidedly racy in appearance.

The torpedo has a single door on either side. The front seats are of the so-called "bucket type," with an aisle between them affording easy passage. The seven-passenger touring car has the same lines as the torpedo, but is fitted with the usual two doors in either side. The tonneau of the seven-passenger car has collapsible Pullman seats in addition to the regular tonneau seat with a capacity of three passengers.

The "Light Six" has the distinctive Chalmers-design body, and like the larger "Six," all "Light Six" types are finished at the top of the body with a "belt" in contrasting color.

On the "Light Six" chassis are also announced several new body types; a six-passenger touring car, a five-passenger inside drive Sedan, and a seven-passenger Limousine. These three models are shown on the "Light Six" chassis for the first time in this second series. The five-passenger touring car and the coupelet are continued.

Mechanically, 1915 Chalmers cars show no radical changes. Both the "Light Six" and the "Master Six" motors are of the T-head type; the larger developing 60 horsepower and the smaller 48 horsepower.

Perhaps the most striking features of the Chalmers power plants are their extreme flexibility and the absence of vibration. Either the "Light Six" or the "Master Six," it is positively stated, will pull at two miles an hour or at express train speed "on high."

All Chalmers models are equipped with one-man top. Shock absorbers have also been added to the regular equipment, and the "Light Six" has as regular equipment one size larger tires than in the past.

The Chalmers-Entz electric starting and lighting system is continued, with refinements which simplify the system. The fact that it makes the motors nonstallable has been described by experts as the greatest factor of motor car safety introduced in the past five years.

The Chalmers molded oval fenders remain unchanged. For over a year these fenders have been an exclusive feature of Chalmers design.

The Chalmers company is planning for the succeeding season an increase over its past year's business, which was the largest both in number of cars sold and in dollars and cents of any year in the history of the company.

CROSS-CONTINENT TRIP FOR SELLING GOODS

Several messages have been received in the offices of the Maxwell Motor Co. in Detroit from Mr. H. M. Wise, who is making a coast-to-coast trip in a Maxwell touring car.

Mr. Wise and his brother are establishing agencies for an acetylene gas generator destined for lighting farm houses and isolated localities. Stops are being made all along the route and Mr. Wise is being extensively entertained by Maxwell dealers in every town where he makes a stop.

STEVENS-DURYEA FOR 1915 BUILD BUT ONE CHASSIS

The 1915 Stevens-Duryea Co. follows very closely the general lines of their previous product. As formerly, only one model is built, but this is furnished in two lengths of wheelbase, 131 and 138 inches respectively.

The cars are equipped with left-hand drive and electric starter, especially adapted to conditions found in the Stevens-Duryea motor. Differing from the general practice to combine the lighting and starting system with the ignition system, the Stevens-Duryea Co. has retained the two independent Bosch high-tension magneto and battery systems of ignition with synchronous coil, high-tension timer distributor and instrument switchboard. Two sets of spark plugs are furnished, which with the independent systems of ignition, minimizes all trouble in this connection.

The wiring of the lighting and starting systems is inclosed in brass-armored tubing, which prevents all leakages and deterioration of the insulation from oil fumes and heat from the engine.

In addition to the regular lights there is also a light in the tonneau which illuminates the step as well as the floor of the car. An electric lamp is also provided on the instrument board for illuminating the instruments, and provision has been made for dimming the electric headlights.

The general style of both open and enclosed bodies follows very closely to that of their former models. The continuous stream line effect of the touring cars has been carried out in the limousine and Berlines, the round corners of the windows and doors, the round lines of the roof and back blending with the underbody as a whole.

An entirely new body type of roadster has been brought out which is unique in its special features and appearance. Continuous stream lines have been carried out in this new type, the deck sloping gracefully from the back of the seat and rounded at the rear. The gasoline tank is entirely enclosed, and provision is also made for carrying two tires mounted on rims, or one wire wheel mounted and extra tire, under the deck completely enclosed and out of view.

The top as furnished on the touring car is of the one-man type being supported from the rear, with no bows at the side of the front seat and rigidly attached in front to the wind shield and can be easily raised or lowered by one person.

A new type of auxiliary seat is employed in the seven-passenger touring cars. Each seat has one upholstered arm on the inner side, the upholstered arm rail providing a rest on the outer side. The construction allows for folding backwards and sidewise against the side of the tonneau, or when in this position can be tipped forward in front of the entrance, thus removing these extra seats entirely out of the way of passengers occupying the rear seat and obscuring from view of those outside of car.

In addition to the complete line of open and inclosed cars as marketed by the Stevens-Duryea company during the season of 1914, they are offering a seven-passenger Landaulet, built on 138-inch wheel base chassis. All the windows are of the sashless type, automatically adjusted, and the back of the top is so arranged by a patented mechanical device that it will allow it to be raised or lowered by anyone seated in the rear compartment.

St. Louis' First Automobile Establishment

Was opened by this Company over fourteen years ago. During these years it has been our aim to improve our facilities that we might render unexcelled service to those who purchased cars from us.

The culmination of our efforts is the new Service Building we have erected on Locust street at 22d.

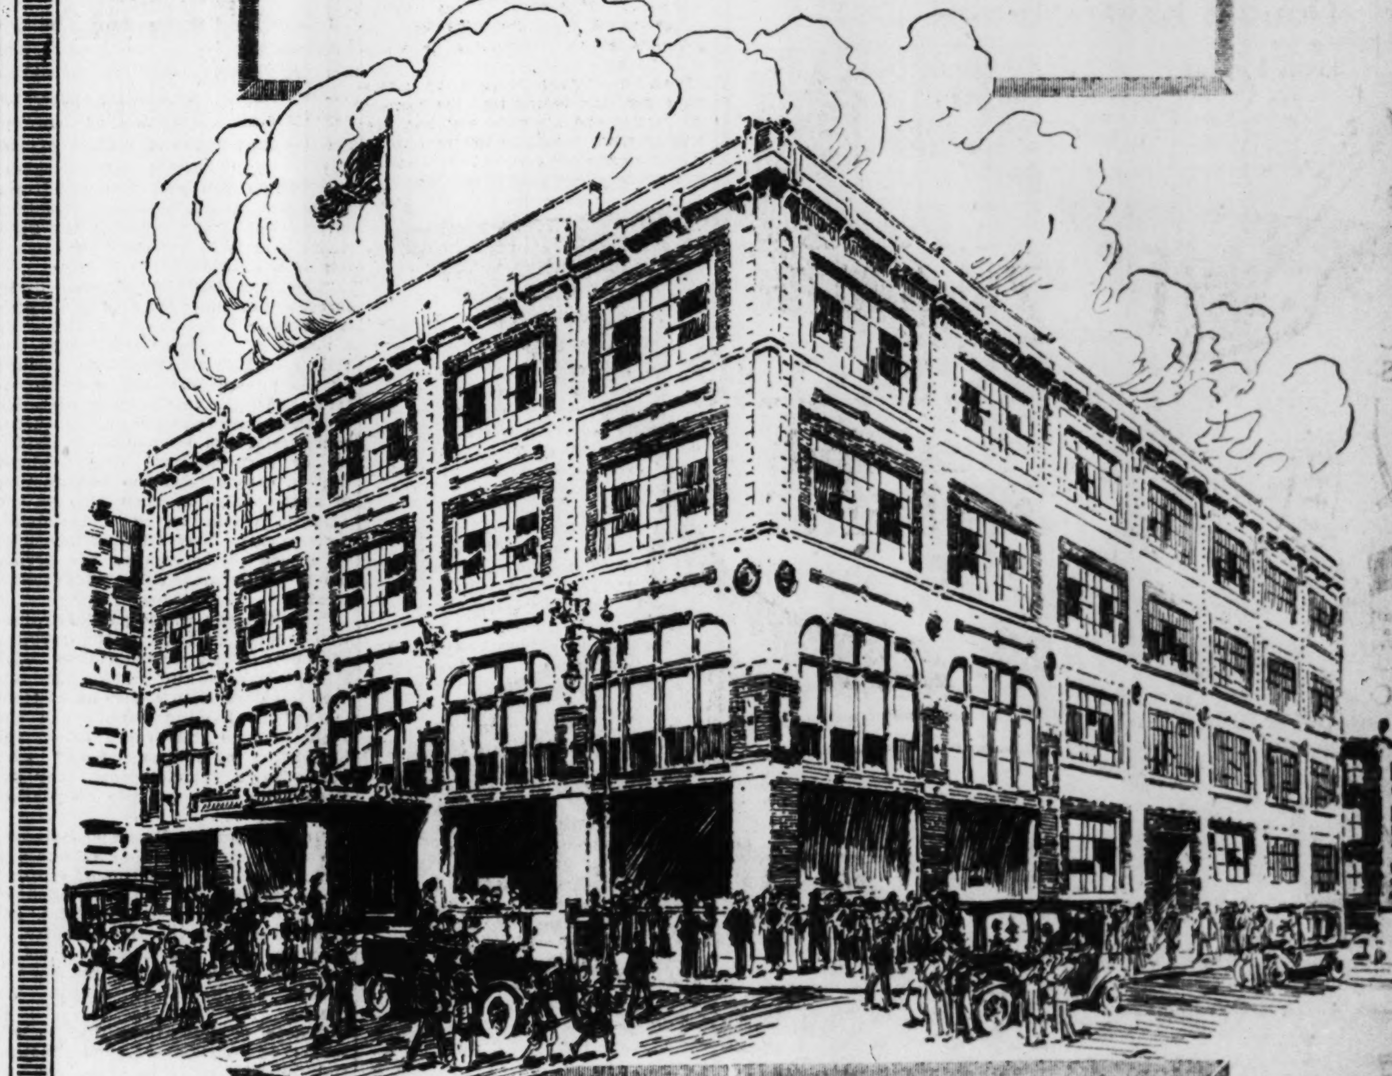
All of its four floors—over 70,000 square feet of area—will be occupied by our Sales, Service and Technical Departments.

The room and facilities provided by this building will allow us to set a new standard in the care of Packard cars, and thus be a direct and lasting benefit to all Packard users in this territory.

The appreciation of these high standards we have set has increased our business to the proportions that have made the construction of this building both necessary and possible.

It is gratifying for us to know this and we trust it will be equally so to every Packard owner.

The entire building is now open for your inspection to give a clear idea of actual methods employed in providing Packard Service.



OUR location in the Forest Park Highlands Automobile Show this week will be at the entrance to the theater in the center section. This year we will display some unusually fine types of both open and enclosed Packards. Owing to the limited room, a number of other Packard models intended for exhibition there may be seen in our Service Building on Locust St. at 22nd, where we most cordially invite you to inspect them

FOUR NEW CLOSED BODY TYPES FOR CHANDLER SIX

Sedan, Cabriolet, Coupe and Limousine, With Imported Trimmings, Added to Line.

A feature of the new Chandler closed cars is their unusually light weight. Since the company first started manufacturing over a year ago, Chandler engineers have directed their energies toward keeping down the weight of the complete car, and this policy has been adhered to in the latest models. As an instance, the big seven-passenger limousine with complete equipment and every luxurious feature, weighs less than 3200 pounds. Both the coupe and sedan models weigh less than the limousine, and the new cabriolet is well under 3000 pounds.

Five persons can be accommodated with comfort in the closed compartment of the limousine with room for the driver and passenger in front. A new type of folding seat in the rear can be arranged so that the occupants face either the front or rear. These seats fold down out of the way when not in use. All glass windows are sashless and the windows of the rear compartment are adjusted by patent regulators to any height or desired position.

In the new Chandler sedan, as in the limousine, the rear seat is 47 inches wide, seating three people. The front seat next to the driver folds out of position when not in use, giving access to the driver's seat.

The cabriolet is fashioned after the style of all-year-round car that has become very popular in this country and is in universal use abroad. The leather top may be folded down in such a manner as to give the car the appearance of a graceful roadster model, without emphasizing its adaptability for winter work as a closed car. The windows fold into the door and to place them in position it is only necessary to open the doors, fold the windows upward, reclose the doors and the car becomes a completely enclosed cabriolet. The wind shield is adjustable for rain vision and ventilation. The driver's seat is 18 inches in width, and is adjacent to a seat facing forward 26 inches in width or sufficient for two other passengers

The coupe seats two passengers forward and has a corner seat for the third passenger, facing the rear. The coupe, limousine and sedan are upholstered in Bedford cord and imported lace, with the usual equipment of curtains, interior electric lights and other conveniences. All models are interchangeable on the standard Chandler six-cylinder chassis.

Mechanical Features.

One of the important features of construction in the Chandler Six is the long-stroke motor. The cylinders are cast in two blocks with a bore of 3⅜ inches and a 5-inch stroke. All valves are inclosed, tending toward an exceptionally silent running car.

Electrical Apparatus in Units.

In place of attempting to combine the electric starting, lighting and ignition systems in one complicated instrument, Chandler engineers have installed the electrical apparatus in three separate units—the Bosch magneto for ignition and a separate generator and motor for lighting and starting. This serves to eliminate a world of trouble in the day-after-day service given the average car's electric system.

UNDER SUBSIDY NATIONS AT WAR SEIZED TRUCKS

Germany and France, Preparing in Advance for War, Had Practical Ownership of Larger Commercial Cars.

Interesting light is thrown on the methods adopted by the French and German governments to subsidize motor trucks for military uses, by John N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Co. and builder of the Garford and Willys-Utility trucks. Mr. Willys has just returned from London, England, where he remained several weeks after leaving the Continent shortly before the actual opening of hostilities.

"The war lords of Europe early foresaw the superiority of the motor truck over horse-drawn vehicles as a means of transportation," says Mr. Willys. "This statement is verified by the precautions they took to reserve the right to use large batteries of heavy duty vehicles purchased for commercial use by private individuals or corporations. They realized that in case of war the manufacture of automobiles on their side of the Atlantic would be at a standstill. Consequently they adopted measures to assure themselves of the proper motor equipment even under such straits.

"The German army administration was induced to take up the question of motor truck transportation with a dual purpose in mind. The authorities desired to secure an efficient method of hauling supplies in the event of war, and of preventing the blockading of military roads with horse-drawn vehicles when they desired them open for the movements of troops.

"It was practically impossible for the army authorities to maintain a sufficiently large quantity of uniform motor trucks, not only because of the initial cost of the vehicles, but also because of the impossibility of keeping under the flag in times of peace a large enough number of skilled chauffeurs to operate the trucks.

"These considerations led to the tender of subsidies of such substantial importance as to encourage the purchase of motor trucks by private concerns under conditions which would enable the Government at any time to draft them for army purposes with the certainty that in the meanwhile they would be kept in perfect running condition and provided with a properly trained chauffeur.

"In order that the trucks might be used without damage to the ordinary roads and bridges of Germany, and at the same time be available for the roads of neighboring countries which might possibly be invaded, trucks were prescribed which, when loaded, ranged from two tons to five and a half tons weight on the rear axle. None of the motors subsidized for army use are less than 35 horsepower. Trailers also are specified as being particularly desirable for army use.

"The subvention for a single truck amounts to the sum of $1190 payable as follows: A premium of $428 upon purchase, followed by four annual premiums of $190.50 for the maintenance of each vehicle. If a three or five-ton trailer is provided with the truck the original premium is raised to $714 with annual payments of $285 each.

"France has adopted much the same method as that of Germany by paying heavy premiums to truck purchasers with the understanding that they are to revert to the Government for immediate use in case of war.

"Each year these trucks are submitted to the military authorities by the various owners and an exhaustive examination determines whether or not they fulfill all of the government requirements. The truck must be constructed entirely in France and in a factory where at least three-fifths of the working force are French. It must be in commercial use on French tion and equipment with the requirements laid down by the French military experts. Upon complying with these regulations the truck owner receives a bounty aggregating from $1022 to $1872.

"In spite of these precautions, which have been carried on almost since the inception of the motor truck industry, an alarming shortage of transportation facilities has been found by the tremendous armies now in the field. Although the levies on motor trucks have been followed by heavy drafts on horses, many more trucks are still needed."

DEATHS FROM FALLS MORE THAN FROM AUTOS

More persons were killed in Chicago and the rest of Cook County by falls in their homes last year than were killed in the streets by motor cars; more died of accidental asphyxiation; more were killed by street cars; more were drowned; nearly twice as many died by burns and scalds, and nearly three-quarters as many died from falls from wagons and horses and falls on the street and sidewalks as died from automobile accidents.

These figures are contained in the biennial report of the Coroner of Cook County, Ill., for 1912 and 1913, recently issued, which is a wide departure from the customary perfunctory official report that the public has learned to expect. It is an earnest plea for a campaign of education among young people and adults of all classes to instill forethought and caution. It has been so compiled as to make it suitable for use even as a teacher's class book on public safety in the schools and as a textbook for heads of departments in all industrial occupations.

DODGE PLANT COMPLETED

Dodge Bros., Detroit, Mich., announce the practical completion of the immense assembling plant which has been added to the factory. This building is 876 feet in length and 70 feet in width and four stories in height and is constructed to withstand a floor strain of 350 pounds to the square foot. With the addition of this building the floor space of the factory, which is to be devoted to the manufacture of the Dodge Bros.' car, is 18¾ acres. As the Dodge Bros.' car will not be an assembled proposition, but will be manufactured entire in the great Detroit plant, thousands upon thousands of men will be given employment. For many years Dodge Bros. have been known the world over as the leading manufacturers of automobile parts.

The New Peerless "All-Purpose" Car Is Here

Peerless Quality and the latest European Specifications for $2,000

Peerless

Made in Fours and Sixes
Sixes $250 Extra

Why This "All-Purpose" Car Duplicates 39 of the Leading Makes of Europe

In Europe as in America, automobiles now do over twenty-five days of utility work in city and suburban streets for every day spent in touring.

Therefore, all Europe has turned to this light, short wheel-base car—the type adopted by thirty-nine of the leading automobile manufacturers of Europe — and now introduced in America by the Peerless Company.

This car turns completely around without backing in a city street—yet is as easy riding as the longest wheel-base cars. The saving in weight, tire and fuel expense is remarkable.

In Europe, and now in America, this type of car is expected to average over three hundred miles on an ordinary sized tank of gasoline, as the car weighs from one to two thousand pounds less than older style long wheel-base cars of similar price.

The Peerless "All-Purpose" Car is designed to interest experienced buyers familar with and desiring all the improvements and comforts of a $5000 car for $2000. It is not a $1400 car built to supplant a $1600 car.

Come and see $5000 comfort for $2000!

Note These Unusual Features

Remarkable System of Spring Suspension on Chassis produces an ease of riding heretofore found only in the longest and heaviest cars made.

Style and Beauty Obtainable Only in Aluminum Bodies—as used in the Peerless "48-Six" and all other makes of $5000 cars. The first car of its price in which this material is used.

Spiral Bevel Rear Axle Gear—the same as used heretofore only in the highest priced cars sold in America, identical in design with the 1915 Peerless "48-Six."

Extra Large Wide-Opening Doors—Three-Abreast Rear Seat—and many other comfort features found heretofore only in $5000 cars—Actually duplicating in comfort the Peerless "48-Six."

REFINEMENTS IN 1915 BUICK LINE, PRICES LOWERED

Motor Construction Remains Practically Unchanged; Body Designs Improved.

Many improvements have been made in the 1915 Buick line and at the same time the price has been reduced.

The Six, known as the C-55, is priced at a reduction of $335, and this year it makes its appearance as a seven-passenger car, the extra seats folding up from the floor boards and so arranged that there is plenty of leg room for everybody. The other touring car models will sell for $100 less than last season and the roadsters for $50 less.

All models are Delco started, with the automatic spark control, an added feature on the C-36 and C-37, the big fours and the Six.

The Delco apparatus has been greatly simplified by the elimination of the ignition relay and the cut-out relay, the operation now being through the switch on the dash, which closes the ignition and generating circuits.

The unit incorporates a new system of current regulation which has for its main advantage the delivering of a greater output at lower speeds than heretofore. On the larger four-cylinder models and the Six, a new method of delivering the gasoline to the carbureter is employed. While the gasoline tanks are still carried at the rear and hung below the frame level, the force feed has been replaced by a modification of the Webb Jay, or Stewart method of vacuum feed. The vacuum apparatus is mounted on bosses cast on the intake manifold and is high enough so that the fuel can flow from it to the carbureter by gravity, utilizing atmospheric pressure to send the fuel to it.

The motors are of the same valve-in-head type of construction which has been distinctively Buick. The sizes are the same, but in order to give a greater bearing surface to the pistons of the large four and six cylinder motors, and to eliminate any possibility of piston slap, the pistons have been lengthened one inch and a new oiling feature has been incorporated in these pistons.

In body design, refinement has been the keynote. Radiators have been rounded fully at the top; their edges have been coped over; hoods have been given more of a slope, and nowhere are there any protruding points to disturb the general impression of smoothness.

The upholstery on the larger cars is of modified European form. The formerly used leather padding extending over the edges of the body has been cut out and the upholstery is kept within the body lines of the car. Leather beading on the body edges without padding replaces the formerly used trim stick, and gives a distinctive touch.

1915 COLE LINE HAS MANY FEATURES

The Cole line for 1915 consists of three models—a four-cylinder car, a light six-cylinder and the Cole Big Six touring car. In each of these three models the Cole Motor Car Co. has given its effort toward making them safe in the highest degree, light as is possible when the safety is considered, and has adhered to the standard of quality which has marked the construction of the Cole product.

The Light Six model is called the "biggest light six on the market." Its wheelbase of 126 inches has made it possible to build it as a seven-passenger car. It will seat seven people comfortably. Disappearing auxiliary seats in the tonneau are regular equipment and these can be folded down so that they rest against the rear of the front seats.

A severe hill climbing test also was made in Cincinnati, where in 75 miles of hill work the car averaged 15 miles to every gallon of gasoline, five gallons being used in making the tests. The car proved its ability to run surely and smoothly over every hill it encountered on the test trip, and the hardest grades were chosen. The car has many features, among which are included a genuine Janney-Steinmett seamless gasoline tank, a high grade motor-driven tire pump, and oversize 4½-inch tires with non-skids in the rear.

The Cole Big Six is a powerful touring car and has been subjected to the most rigorous tests. It was given a 12-week's test through all kinds of country from Indianapolis to the Pacific coast. It has a big motor, 4½-inch bore by 5 1-4-inch stroke, which develops 60-horsepower and holds the mountain climbing record on Mt. Hood, having climbed more than a mile higher than any other car which ever made the attempt.

Combined with its strength is a wheelbase of 136 inches, and a big, roomy body so balanced that the easy riding qualities are very marked.

The Big Six is luxuriously upholstered and finished perfectly throughout. The tonneau is roomy and seven people can ride in utter comfort. The car comes fully equipped with top, Cole handy curtains, tire pump, clock, speedometer, demountable rim and tools.

The third car in the Cole line is the four-cylinder, 40-horsepower, seven-passenger touring car. It is built on the same lines as the two larger cars, is sturdy, safe and very attractive.

SHIPPING CARS TO EUROPE

A letter to the Heinrich Automobile Co., St. Louis, says: "Great interest has been expressed in the fact that the King Motor Car Co. of Detroit, Mich., has received a release on all of its English shipments, which shipments have been held up since the beginning of the European war. Further interest has been expressed in the above statement owing to the fact that a number of the cars being shipped to England have been purchased by the British Government through Salmons & Sons, King distributors of London, England.

The King Co. also reports that indications at the present time are most favorable for an early release via the Atlantic of a majority of their foreign shipments going to Australia, New Zealand and Africa."

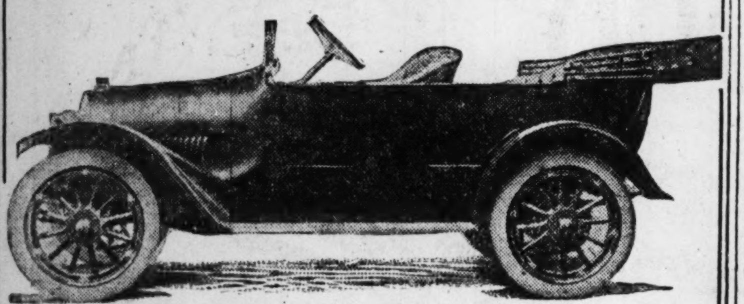
Reo the Fifth
A Super-Car
$1,175 with Electric Equipment, f. o. b. Lansing



A Better Car
Than Need Be—Vast Over-Capacity For Men Who Buy to Keep

The latest model of Reo the Fifth is on exhibit now. Come see its outer attractions, its lines, its finish, its equipment. You will see that Reo designers excel in other than hidden parts.

Its Chief Appeal

This car—designed by R. E. Olds—is based on 27 years spent in car building. It is better-built than it need be for normal service or for one-season satisfaction. It is built to render years of perfect service.

The car has vast margins of safety. It has 35 horsepower, but the tests applied are for 50 horse-power requirements.

Its steels are made to formula. Test cars are run for 10,000 miles to find out each part's needed strength.

The car is built in a model plant, equipped with countless machines designed for this single model. Six weeks are spent on each car.

The factory cost is about one-fifth more than if built by lesser standards.

Rare Value

Reo the Fifth, with all its improvements, costs $220 less than it used to cost. That is due to mammoth output, new machinery, new efficiency. No other car in this class today offers equal value.

It will save you in trouble, upkeep and repairs. It will keep its newness when lesser cars grow old.

About 35,000 men who bought cars to keep have selected this Reo the Fifth. The present demand is the largest ever known.

Come and see the latest model. Let us show you the costly construction. Come now. The coming days are the best of the year for driving. Decide on your new car now.

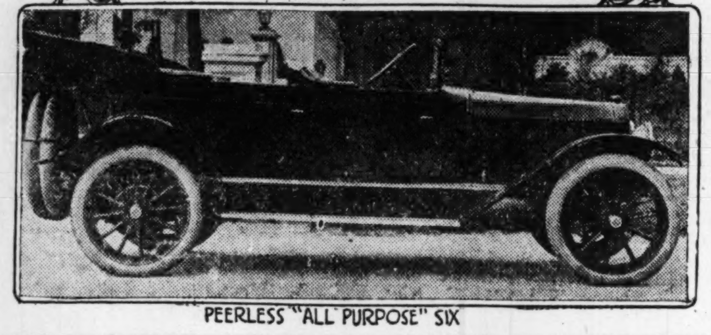
STUDEBAKER SIX



PEERLESS "ALL PURPOSE" SIX

MANY NEW FEATURES IN STUDEBAKER CAR

There are many new features in Studebaker cars, and a three-passenger roadster and five-passenger "six" have been added to the line, in addition to lower prices.

Local Studebaker representatives have received formal notification of the details of the new Studebaker "Four" and "Six" cars. In addition to many improvements in design, the news is of especial interest, as it involves a radically lower scale of prices than anything heretofore asked for cars of such quality.

Reduced weight, greater roominess, more powerful motors and attractive lines are other points of the announcement.

Additional importance attaches to the announcement, as it contained the first intimation that the Sudebaker Corporation has added to its line two new body types—a five-passenger "six" and a three-passenger "four" roadster.

The five-passenger "six" is listed at $1385, and the seven-passenger "Six" at $1450, instead of $1575 as during the past season.

The new three-passenger roadster is the most striking departure from the conventional motor car design. The body is unusually wide, seating three persons comfortably. That part of the seat reserved for the driver projects forward about four inches. The rear deck, which is covered with aluminum, provides plenty of space for a trunk or other baggage. This new model sells at $985, which is the same as the figure placed on the standard five-pasenger "Four" touring.

Without increasing the bore or stroke of either the four or six cylinder motor, Studebaker engineers have practically added about 15 per cent to the power of each. This was done by reducing the weight of the cars without sacrificing strength and by the use of larger valves, an improved exhaust manifold, concentric piston rings and lighter pistons and connecting rods.

Timken bearings and a full floating rear axle continue as prominent factors in Studebaker construction. All models now carry crowned fenders and oversize tires, with safety threads in the rear.

The equipment on all models includes the Wagner separate-unit starting and lighting system, gasoline gauge, dimming attachment for headlights, switch locking device, anti-rumble gasoline tank in dash, crowned fenders, Shebler carburetors and non-skid tires on rear wheels.

To insure prompt deliveries in greater quantities than ever before, important additions have been made to the Studebaker plants in Detroit and South Bend.

GOOD YEAR'S BUSINESS

A review of the year's activities between last and this year's show illustrates the success of Meteor car sales, distributed by the Schal Motor Sales Co., 1312 South Grand avenue.

The Meteor made its debut to St. Louisans at last year's show. The Meteor light six and runabout are the two models, the six being an aristocratic family car, priced to fit the modest pocketbook, and the roadster is an excellent physicians' car.

John S. Fabick, president, and E. J. Stossberg, sales manager, are making elaborate plans for the handling of Meteor cars in the future, with in view the desire to acquaint the public with every angle of their cars. Visitors at the show will find a large display of Meteors in space 28.

The Schal Motor Sales Co. is distributor for these cars for Missouri and Illinois and have established a number of subagencies in these two states.

1915 VULCAN LINE

The Mogul Truck Sales Co. is showing the 1915 Vulcan touring cars at its salesrooms, 1424 North King's highway. This new car embodies all the advanced ideas in body line and construction, being fully equipped electrically and with one-man top, stream line body, besides other exclusive features. The Vulcan Manufacturing Co., which recently increased its capital stock to $1,000,000, is now prepared to deliver its cars in large numbers. Mr. Fred Beckwith, manager of the Mogul Truck Sales Co., states that the demand for a light car of ample capacity is a decided advantage to this season's Vulcan.

DATES FOR SPRING SHOW

Because the number of applications are far in excess of the available space at the national automobile shows in New York and Chicago, the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce has voted the exhibition in January shall be invitation affairs, to which will be invited such concerns in the motor car and accessory industry as can be cared for properly.

Allotment of space will be confined to members of the N. A. C. C. subject to the rule of that organization, to members of the Motor and Accessory Manufacturers', the Motor Cycle Manufacturers' and the Electric Vehicle Manufacturers' Association. The fifteenth annual shows will be held in New York at the Grand Central Palace, Jan. 2 to 9, and at the Coliseum and Armory in Chicago, Jan. 23 to 30.

ST. LOUIS BRANCH, 4300 FOREST PARK BL.

If you will make your decision on points of real merit, your next car will be a Studebaker.

Studebaker should be able to offer you the best proposition in the world: It has one of the largest factories; it has the longest manufacturing experience—62 years; it has the most complete engineering laboratories in the manufacturing business; it has great business resources, and, best of all, it intends to manufacture a car equal to Studebaker reputation and Studebaker opportunities.

Its idea is not to produce as many cars as possible at the lowest possible price, nor, to produce the biggest car for the least amount of money.

Its idea is to produce a really good car, the price to be the secondary consideration.

The Studebaker SIX

Two years ago when the Studebaker light SIX was first offered at $1550 it created a sensation. The world did not think that a six-cylinder car of quality could be produced at this price: It did not consider the resources of Studebaker.

This car has not only made good, but, it has done two very important things besides.

In the first place, it has practically put the heavy four-cylinder car out of business.

In the second place, it has revolutionized the price of six-cylinder cars.

Other manufacturers have found it necessary to compete, but they haven't the resources of Studebaker to give you the same quality at the same price.

Remember that Studebaker manufactures its six-cylinder car. It does not buy the parts from various manufacturers. It does not have to pay the profits on these parts to other manufacturers. It does not have to take chances on whether they are good parts or not. Studebaker makes them and they are all uniformly excellent.

If you have made up your mind to buy a light six, why not buy the original light SIX,—the car that made the light six popular—the car that has every advantage and every reason to be the best light SIX car in the world for the money—or at any money.

The Studebaker FOUR

Like the SIX, the Studebaker FOUR fills a distinct place in the automobile field.

Like the SIX, it has been manufactured with the idea of quality first, price the secondary consideration.

There are a great many "Fours" built because you can "build" or "assemble" a "Four" cheaper than you can anything else. A "Six" has to be good or its power will pull it to pieces. The Studebaker FOUR is made as good as the Studebaker SIX, in fact, many of its parts are interchangeable.

HINTS FOR REPAIRMEN

The Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. has just issued a little repair book on tires. The following are extracts:

"When dark-curing cement is used in repairing white treads, dark lines and marks are left that will spoil the appearance of the most workmanlike job. Realizing this fact, we have for some time past been using a white vulcanizing cement in our own repair department, and with such excellent results that we are adding it to our regular line of repair material."

"Repairmen often turn away trade in motor cycle tire repairs because they suppose they can repair motorcycle tires without a complete equipment of sectional molds. This is not necessary. Cement two or three plies of light fabric on the inside, flatten the casing out and cure repairs on the tube plate."

"Sand bags may be used instead of air bags, in curing tread cuts. Internal pressure only is needed against the tread in such repairs. For each sectional mold size one sand bag and one steel bar will be needed. The bag should be of heavy canvas, shaped like a common salt bag and filled loosely (not packed) with fine sand. The steel bar should be of one-inch section, about a foot long, and curved so it will fit within the mold.

"The sand bag is placed within the casing, the casing dropped within the sectional mold and the steel bar laid along the sand bag, concave side up. Screw down the clamp screw, on the mold against the center of bar. This spreads out the sand bag and supplies the necessary pressure against the tread. It is a good plan to drill a hole or slot in the bar, so that the clamp screw can get a grop."

KING CARS ENTERED IN CORONA ROAD RACE

"Kantiliver Klein," who has been performing exceptionally well in his "King Oriole" out West, by winning a number of valued prizes, has entered the King racing car in the Corona road races, the Los Angeles-Phoenix road race and the Panama-Pacific road race. In addition to the above events, Klein and the King racing car have also been entered in the Grand Prix and Vanderbilt Cup races, in which two latter events great interest is expressed by the race-loving people in all parts of the United States.

Both Klein and the King car are reported from recent information to be in the best of condition and a most creditable showing is anticipated both by the King Motor Car Co. of Detroit as well as 'Kantilever Klein."

NEW HAYNES DISTRIBUTOR

"The new model Haynes light six-cylinder car contains many new and unique features in automobile design," states James E. Newell the new Haynes distributor in St. Louis. "The Haynes car is the first one in America to employ the arch frame construction, which permits the lowering of the body and the use of the extra long, 54-inch underslun elliptic spring in the rear.

"The speedometer is driven from a gear mounted on the propeller shaft immediately behind the unit power plant, where the driving and pinion gears are protected from the mud and dirt of the road.

"The starting motor of the separate unit starting and lighting system is direct-connected to the crankshaft of the engine, so that no gears have to be shifted into mesh to crank the engine. A small button on the floor starts the motor by pressure of the foot and cranks the engine without any clashing or disagreeable noises.

"The en bloc 3½" by 5" six-cylinder motor is very flexible, and the car can be driven from one mile per hour to sixty miles per hour on direct drive. The vacuum system of gasoline feed to the carburetor is used, with a sixteen-gallon supply tank on the rear of the chassis where it may be readily filled.

"The magneto is dispensed with and the ignition system simplified by using the storage battery current through a combined timer and distributer on the generator.

"The full streamline body is pressed out of sheet steel and the seams are electrically welded to form a single piece, substantial and rigid construction. The crowned fenders add much to the elegance and refinement of the car. The top is of the one-man type. Either a five passenger touring car or a two passenger roadster body may be had. With the 121-inch wheel base, there is generous foot room in both the forward and rear compartments.

SPLITDORF TO EXHIBIT

The Splitdorf Electrical Co. of Newark, N. J., will show a special type magneto for Ford cars at the salesrooms of the Missouri Auto Specialty Co., 1832 Locust street, during the auto show this week. E. A. Kelley, Chicago manager, and D. T. Hersey, Kansas City manager of the Splitdorf branches in those cities, were in St. Louis last week, when they made arrangements to have factory mechanics here for the week. During the auto show all "Ford special" magnetos will be installed free of charge and a demonstration of their efficiency on the car will be given at the Missouri Auto Specialty Co.'s salesroom on Locust street.

MANY NEW FEATURES IN 1915 OHIO ELECTRIC

A. E. Archer, manager of Ohio Electric Sales Co., states that there are many added improvements in the new model Ohio Electrics.

A new crown fender harmonizes perfectly with the graceful Ohio body designs. Each fender is beaten by hand from one piece of aluminum. The new stream line body designs attract instant attention, while a change in style of upholstery and interior refinements add much to the car's beauty and one's convenience.

Helical bevel driving gear or worm driving gear adjustment is furnished on Ohio cars at the purchaser's option. The type of worm gear used has the driving pinion swung underneath, and consequently always operating in a bath of oil.

The Ohio principle of direct shaft drive without universal joints is maintained in connection with either the helical or worm gear equipment. The Ohio assembly of motor, propellor shaft and rear axle form one rigid unit.

All Ohio Electric cars are equipped with sashless glass. The front window is a single pane of glass, which can be lowered completely out of sight or to any desired position. There is a clear vision wind and rain shield in front that can be adjusted from inside the car.

With one movement, by simply operating a short lever, and with scarcely any effort, the front window and door windows in the Ohio can be lowered or raised to any desired position. This new window device automatically locks itself in different positions, and likewise releases itself when the lever is operated. It is a vast improvement over the regular style of mechanical window lifter.

Magnetic control and magnetic brake were first applied to the electric automobile by the Ohio Electric Car Company's engineers, and continue to be exclusive features of the Ohio.

SPECIAL TRAFFIC RULES

In order that the members of the Automobile Club of St. Louis may be familiar with the traffic regulations which will be enforced on Tuesday night, the club has sent them pamphlets which explain in every detail the directions in which automobiles may travel on certain streets and also designating the streets on which automobiles may be parked. Everyone attending the ball should be familiar with these regulations, and anyone wishing a copy may obtain same by calling at the Automobile Club headquarters, Planters Hotel, Fourth street entrance.

The Car That Will Interest You Most at the Automobile Show

To a man who owns a Dorris of the earlier models, the retention of the mechanical details shown in the new model I.A.4. will be a source of much gratification.

It will be proof positive of the wisdom displayed in planning the original chassis, the valve-in-the-head engine and other important features essentially Dorris.

To the man who does not own a Dorris, this opportunity for a close comparison of the Dorris with other first-class cars is gladly welcomed by us.

The new model I.A.4. is thoroughly modern and anticipates the car of the future in mechanism, structural lines and passenger equipment.

No car built offers greater safety, quicker response, finer comfort, or longer life.

It is therefore with pleasure that we invite you to inspect the Dorris exhibit at the Automobile Show, October the fifth to the tenth, Forest Park Highlands.

RECENT MILLER TIRE TEST

For a test of car and tire endurance, Henry J. Adams of Fostoria, O., completed a 3000-mile trip through the northeastern section of the country with a Reo car equipped with Miller tires made by the Miller Rubber Co. at Akron, O. Adams made the following route, which he recommends as being an ideal tour. Cleveland to Buffalo to Rochester, down the State road to Montreal, back through Rouses on Lake Champlain, across Vermont and the Green Mountains, up into New Hampshire and the White Mountains, across Maine to the Atlantic Coast; then down the coast to Boston, through Rhode Island and Connecticut to New York City, and across New Jersey to Philadelphia and on to Delaware, Baltimore; from there to Washington, D. C., over into Virginia and Mount Vernon, Washington's old home; over the Blue Ridge Mountains to Gettysburg, Pa., Cumberland, Md.; across the Allegheny Mountains into West Virginia and back into Ohio.

"The tour lasted 25 days and the tires are good for another trip," states Mr. Adams, who upon the return of the Fostoria man, four tires were sold upon the strength of the tire equipment on the sturdy Reo car.

PROSPECTS FOR FALL AUTO BUSINESS GOOD

F. L. Jewett, assistant sales manager of the Paige Motor Car Co., has returned to Detroit from a trip to Nebraska, South Dakota and other Western points, brimming over with stories relative to the effect the crop situation is having on the motor car market. The fall season should be the most profitable automobile manufacturers and dealers have ever had frequently been stated by men who observed the wealth to be garnered by the farmers. Mr. Jewett can give specific instances proving that this optimism is founded on facts which have been especially emphasized by the European war. Here is one instance:

A Nebraska farmer had a large field of wheat that promised a splendid yield and he concluded that now was the time to buy that Paige car he had been yearning for. Accordingly he visited the nearest Paige dealer and booked an order, declaring that just as soon as he had his wheat on the market he would come in and close the deal.

A few weeks later the farmer again appeared at the Paige office. "I guess," said he, "I could afford to buy several Paige cars if I wanted to. The war has sent wheat sky high. I'll take one Paige 36 right now."

The incident merely illustrates the fact that the optimistic prophesies based on the crops were not overdrawn and that with the impetus the war has given to American foodstuff prices, the season will indeed be a humdinger for the motor car men.

PAIGE

"The Greatest Automobile Value In The Entire Industry"

Many automobile men — well informed judges of motor car values—have used these very words in describing the new Paige "36" for 1915.

They have carefully examined this car from every possible angle and it is their unanimous decision that there is no car in America which offers so much for the money.

If you stop to consider the matter for a moment, you will realize that this is quite the most satisfactory form of praise which can be bestowed upon any automobile.

To offer the greatest value for the money means that Paige cars are the soundest investment in the automobile market. To offer the most value for the money means that the Paige has once more established a new standard for cars in the moderate price field.

Any manufacturer with the necessary manufacturing facilities can easily produce a car and sell it at a popular price, but it is quite another thing to produce a car which—dollar for dollar—offers more intrinsic value than any other automobile in the world.

Make it a point to see the new Paige "36" before another day goes by. Then you will understand why this model has created such a sensation throughout the country wherever motor cars are displayed.

PEERLESS ADDS LIGHT FOUR AND SIX TO 1915 LINE

All "Purpose" Models Announced and Exhibited at St. Louis Show for First Time.

The Peerless Motor Car Co. has just announced a line of light, short wheel base, "all-purpose" cars, which will supplement the large 48-horsepower six-cylinders the company has been building for several years past.

These new light cars are made in both four and six-cylinder types. The Four sells for $2000 and the Six for $2250. They follow in general design type that has been most universally adopted by the leading light car makers of Europe during the past year or two.

Thirty-nine leading makes of European light cars have an average wheel base of 112½ inches. The Peerless Light Four has a wheel base of 113 inches, making the car easy to manage in narrow streets and crowded traffic. Owing to special spring arrangement, riding ease, as great as that attained in longer wheel base cars, is secured.

In past most American cars have been built for touring, while it is pointed out in connection with the short wheel base that the ordinary car is used 20 days for regular service in and about the city for one day touring in the country.

The four-cylinder motor is almost universally used in European light cars. It is of the small bore, high-speed type. Recent developments have made it possible to build a four-cylinder motor, which is as smooth in operation and as flexible as the Six. But in deference to a widespread desire among American motorists for the six-cylinder, the Peerless "all-purpose" car is also supplied in that type. The wheel base of the Six is just enough longer than the Four to accommodate the longer motor—121 inches.

The cylinders of the four-cylinder are 3¾ inches by 5 inches, and in the six they are 3½ inches by 5 inches.

A 20-gallon gasoline tank is carried and this is said to be large enough to contain a supply that will drive the car from 300 to 400 miles. This is a great advantage, especially when the owner drives his own car, as it makes unnecessary frequent attention to the gasoline supply.

The bodies are of pure stream-line design, built in the Peerless shops of sheet aluminum. It is the same material as used in the large Peerless cars.

The equipment includes "one-man" top, rain-vision windshield, extra rim, Stewart speedometer, tire pump, electric horn mounted under the hood, dash light with night light extension, standard head lamps with small lamps out of focus for city traffic. The body and hood are thistle green, the spokes and felloes thistle green, molding black with white hair line, other parts are black.

The rear axle, like all the Peerless models of the coming season, will be equipped with a spiral bevel gear insuring silent operation. All of the instruments that need to be touched by the driver are carried on a board at the front of the forward compartment within easy reach of the hand.

A striking feature is the divided front seat. The passage between allows anyone to go from the front compartment to the rear without leaving the car. This permits passengers to change seats easily and gives the interior of the car a unity of appearance similar to that acquired by the exterior when foredoors were adopted.

The famous Peerless rear paltform spring suspension is a feature of the new car, which insures the best possible riding qualities. The upholstery is deep and soft, done in the best obtainable leather and equal in quality to the upholstery of the heavier Peerless cars.

The products of some of the leading parts specialists will be used in the new Peerless Light Four and Light Six. No maker has made all the parts that go into the finished car, but all have purchased them ready to use to a considerable extent. In the past the Peerless Motor Co. has manufactured as many parts as any maker ever did and has acquired an experience which enables it to judge whether the parts purchased are of proper design, material and workmanship.

"It has been known in automobile circles that the Krit company had a surprise for 1915 and many motorists have been wanting to learn the features of the new $850 model," says Albert Sterne, local dealer of Krit.

"In the model O the Krit company has clung to its policy, tried by six years of successful service, of building lightweight cars that are powerful and, at the same time, economical. While some other American manufacturers are just coming to this idea of motor power combined with economy, the Krit engineers have built this type of motor for six years, during which time it has been constantly refined, until today it is giving better service than ever.

"In the crank case and transmission case aluminum is employed to produce not only lightness but great strength as well."

The new model Krit is built in two types of bodies, the touring car being finished in Brewster green and the roadster in light gray.

The ball-bearing motor follows the same basic design which has been employed in Krit cars for four years.

The new model Krit possesses the lateht streamline body, rounded radiator, tapered bonnet and modern fenders. The floor and running boards are covered with cork-linoleum and are bound with nickel. The instrument board is leather covered and the equipment is complete.

Autumn automobile wraps are beginning to make their appearance. A few are from the other side of the water and a number of excellent models are from our own exclusive designers. One of the latter is a very attractive coat in green velour made with a wide, three-quarter skirt and modified kimono sleeve. Square collar and cuffs and large olive-shaped fancy buttons finish the front.

AUTUMN DAYS ARE HERE; NONSKID WEATHER, TOO

With autumn comes an increasing call for tires of the nonskid type, because not only are there more rainy and slippery days than in the summer months, but also there are more motorists using the city's asphalt streets, where skidding is more often encountered.

Nonskid treads are of many types, and for all of them the same virtues are claimed. Where, however, a nonskid tire has been reasoned out on scientific principles, it is most likely to accomplish what is claimed for it. The Ajax was one of the first tires to be put on the market with a nonskid tread.

The tread is marked by deep cross hatching, which leaves diamond-shaped lozenges. The edges of these diamonds are very sharp and remain so until the tire is worn down to the very fabric.

The sharp edges cut into the film of moisture or grease on the pavement, breaking it up so that it is pushed out of the way and the flat part of the diamond rides, not on the pad of slippery surface, but on the dry asphalt below this moisture, which has been pushed aside by encountering the sharp edge of the nonskid.

It does not take expert knowledge or any trick of driving to hold a car on a line when a good form of nonskid is employed. Inasmuch as the safety of many may depend on keeping an automobile from skidding, the driver of a car owes it to the general good to employ an effective nonskid tire.

One of the latest emergency medicine cases opens out flat and contains in one section five bottles, a pair of tweezers and a pair of scissors. In the six other compartments are a package of absorbent cotton, mustard, adhesive plaster, rolls of bandages and vaseline jar.

"Japanese Panama" hats with wide black bands and square bows are liked by men fortouring, as they stretch to fit the head tight, and the brim is just wide enough to shade the eyes. Another hat favored by young men is the stitched khaki with the plaited yellow crepe scarf folded around it. One side of the brim snaps up to the crown with a snap catch, if it is desired to wear it in that shape.

NOVEL FEATURES ON NEW VELIE SMALL SIX

An entirely new small six, called the Biltwel series 15, is the feature of the line of the Velie Motor Vehicle Co., Moline, Ill., for the ensuing season. Last season's small four, the model 11, has been discontinued, and the big six, called series 14, this year and the big four, called series 12, have been improved and reduced in price. The four has been reduced from $2000 to $1750 and the six from $2350 to $2015. New bodies are featured on all the cars. In the new small six the Velie company has incorporated a number fo special features which have lately come into use by motor car builders. The spiral-bevel rear axle is one of these features, the tapered frame is another, and it might be mentioned that the frame of the new Velie brings the distance between front spring centers to 27¼ inches. The rear of the frame is 37 inches wide and the front 29¼. Hotchkiss drive is another adoption. In this car propulsion is through the springs, eliminating the conventional radius rods or torsion tube Stewart vacuum fuel feed and Atwater Kent ignition with automatic spark advance are other features used in the new small six which were not used on previous models.

The engine is a Continental, forming a three-point suspended unit power plant with a cone clutch and gear-set made by the Warner Mfg. Co., Toledo, O. The engine cylinders are cast in block, have a bore and stroke of 3½x5 inches and are of L-head design. Gray & Davis lighting and starting system and Atwater-Kent ignition system form the electrical equipment, which has all wires enclosed in metal conduits.

The Biltwel body is the exemplification of the stream-line idea. There is a graceful curve from cowl to a new type of rounded-shell radiator, the sides are straight and the back bell-shaped. The symmetry of the car has not been broken up by anything, for the designers have gone so far as to install a gasoline tank in the rear. A feature of this body as well as the others of the line is that they are fitted with anti-squeak strips. Besides the ordinary equipment the new six is equipped with tire pump and cut-out.

Special trains following Veiled Prophet parade will be operated Tuesday night from Union Station by the Missouri Pacific-Iron Mountain for Kirkwood at 9:45 and for De Soto at 10 p. m.

FADS AND FANCIES FOR THE MOTORIST

Various styles in chauffeurs' liveries are used this season. Among those for touring are the mohair dusters and caps. They are in dark brown. Full suits of khaki, with cap and leggins to match, are also much used.

1915 OVERLAND LINE INCLUDES TWO NEW MODELS

A Six-Cylinder Job and a Small, Light, Popular-Priced Car Have Been Added.

While the 1915 Overland, designated by the manufacturers as model 80, follows in most of its general features the Overland of 1914, the latest product of the big Toledo plant of John N. Willys embodies a number of improvements and noteworthy changes over last year's model. The points of the new car which receive the first attention are graceful body design and numerous improvements.

The body conforms to the modern notions of stream-line design, yet is without the suggestion of freakishness.

Frame, running-board bracket, and battery box are concealed by mud shields which add materially to the looks of the car by giving it that much-desired long and low appearance. Though the wheel base remains 114 inches, the body offers considerably more leg and elbow room.

The seats are 20 inches deep, with cushions sloping toward the rear, which permits the passenger to ride in the easiest possible position, least likely to result in fatigue. The new Overland has a unique clamp which holds the top so securely as to prevent all rattling. Leather pockets are provided in all doors, which, in addition, have metal beading for protection from the weather. The doors are hung on concealed hinges, with inside-operated latches placed so as to make it impossible for them to catch on passengers' garments.

The Overland 35-horsepower motor remains practically unchanged, with the exception of improvements made to the oiling system.

For easier assembly and to do away with metallic sounds a union joint has been placed in the exhaust pipe. The ignition is Bosch high-tension magneto

The equipment includes electric lights, top and boot windshield, speedometer, demountable rims and electric starter. The steer is left hand, with center control.

An announcement of interest to the general automobile trade has just come from J. N. Willys, president of the Willys-Overland Co., in the form of an Overland six at $1475, giving Overland dealers a line of cars complete and inclusive, enabling them to satisfy the varying demands of their customers with the product of a single manufacturer.

In appearance the Overland Six is stylish and impressive and the wheelbase is 125 inches.

The long-stroke motor is rated at 45-50 horsepower, the streamline body seeming to indicate fleetness and power. Tires are 35x4½ on demountable rims, and every modern automobile convenience, such as self-starter, electric lights, etc., have been incorporated in the liberal specifications.

Apart from the general characteristics of the Overland Model 81, as this most recent achievement of John N. Willys is known, the feature most calculated to draw attention to the new small Overland car is its price, $850, including electric starter and all equipment. But of hardly less interest is the fact that at this price is offered a big five-passenger touring car which is electrically lighted and started, has four-inch tires and high tension magneto ignition, and is completely equipped in every respect. The roadster of the same model is $795.

It follows in every essential detail the well-known characteristics of Overland constrction. The 30 horsepower motor has singly cast cylinders of the L-shaped head type, with water jackets integral, both inlet and exhaust ports being surmounted with a good body of water. The cylinders have a bore of four inches and a stroke of four and one-half inches. The wheelbase is of 106 inches and has allowed the Overland designers much leeway. in creating a roomy body. The body is of streamline design. Conealed hinges and inside handles of the door eliminate all unsightly projections and leave the exterior of the car entirely smooth. The doors have been made extraordinarily wide, while the roomy seats have high, comfortable backs. Deep upholstering adds materially to the riding comfort and appearance of the body, which is finished in a rich Brewster green with striping of ivory white.

In addition to the regular five-passenger touring car and roadster there is a special delivery car with a paneled body and an open delivery car.

A New Tire Day
Begins When Men Adopt No-Rim-Cuts

400,000 Know It

400,000 men—at least—have proved out and adopted Goodyear tires. They find in them a quality supreme and unvarying. They find safety and sturdiness, less trouble, more mileage.

No rim-cuts. A way we control prevents them.

Loose tread risk reduced by 60 per cent, by a patent method we alone employ.

Less punctures—less wear—because of our double-thick, very tough All-Weather tread.

In those four ways—combating your four chief tire troubles—No-Rim-Cuts excel every other tire. Their resistless appeal will win you soon or late.

When it does, it will mean tire comfort, tire security which you never can get without them. Ask any Goodyear user.

The Winter Tire

For winter use get All-Weather treads. When you know them you will use them all the year around.

They are tough and double-thick. They are flat and regular, so they run like plain treads. Their grips are sharp and resistless, and so deep that they last thousands of miles.

Other anti-skids cost more—some one-third more—than these. But a glance will tell you that All-Weather treads excel them. And every test will prove it.

Goodyear tires have won more users than any other tire that's built. They won them by service, such as you desire. Give them—for your own sake—a chance to win you.

Model 80
F. O. B. Toledo

Every Advanced Feature
But No Advance In Price

THE new Overland has one of the most advanced and most admired body designs of the season. The full sweeping stream lines are clean cut, trim, uninterrupted and perfectly proportioned. A slightly sloped hood, a perfectly rounded radiator edge and gracefully crowned fenders add both charming grace and excellent taste to this smart model.

The new Overland has a larger tonneau. You know how cramped and uncomfortable three adults usually are in the average car. There is plenty of room in the 1915 Overland—ample for three large people and enough length for the tallest.

The new Overland has the most advanced and most practical type of rear springs. They are of a new design, underslung, and much longer than heretofore. Being unusually flexible, their action absorbs all road shocks and rut jolts, and perfectly smooth riding is the comfortable consequence.

The new Overland has the most advanced electric lighting and electric starting system. All electric switches are conveniently located on steering column—directly in front of the driver. No stretching forward or bending down. Every electrical control is right at your hand.

The new Overland has the most advanced ignition system. A high tension magneto is used which is independent of the starting and lighting unit. On most popular priced cars the cheaper battery system is furnished. As the magneto long ago demonstrated its superiority over the battery ignition, even though it costs considerably more, the Overland is equipped with a magneto.

The new Overland has larger wheels and tires. 34 inch x 4 inch all around, with demountable rims, mean mimimum tire expense, minimum tire trouble, and maximum riding comfort.

Yet, in spite of these and numerous other advanced and costly features the price has not been advanced.

Orders are now being taken for immediate delivery.

PACKARD AGENCY HAS FORMAL OPENING

The formal opening of the new building of the Halsey Automobile Co. at Twenty-second and Locust streets was held Saturday afternoon. In response to the invitations sent out hundreds of visitors, owners and dealers and personal friends of members of the company inspected the building.

The Halsey building is one of the most elaborate automobile structures in the United States. In the matter of fittings and equipment the building compares with any commercial structure in any line in St. Louis. The office and salesroom are finished with mahogany and a polished floor lends dignity to the Packard cars exhibited thereon.

Messrs. Halsey, McCrea, Menner, Leathers and others of the sales department acted as reception committee and conducted the visitors through the four floors of the building. The Halsey company will exhibit the Packard line at the Automobile Show.

Real Estate Worth Millions of Dollars,

Which will be worth millions more in a few years, is on the market and advertised in almost a thousand REAL ESTATE and farms ads in today's BIG WANT DIRECTORY.

1000 A DAY FOR A YEAR

DETROIT, Oct. 3.—A thousand cars a day for 306 days. Excluding Sundays and holidays, this constitutes the "working year."

The surprising and the unprecedented feature of the Ford schedule, to most people, is that any automobile company can calmly and confidently plan its daily production a year, or even three months, in advance—much as if it were bread or some other staple that is being made and sold.

"The Ford is not subject to the condition and laws of the rest of the automobile industry," said an officer of the Ford Motor Co. "Unlike all other cars, the Ford car is not considered as just a luxury. It is considered an economic necessity. I suppose no more bread is sold and eaten in April than in October. The demand for bread is constant. So is the demand for Ford cars. In periods of business depression we economize in our luxuries. It is the market for high—or higher—priced cars that falters then. The citizen, moved to economizing, buys less expensive clothes, cigars, hats, gloves, candy and motor cars. But he goes right on buying bread and shoes and clothes and Ford cars—because these are necessities. These are staples.

"For such reasons the Ford Motor Co., the only one among the motor car manufacturers of the world which can safely plan a daily production a year in advance, simply because the demand for Ford cars and the market for Ford cars are unchanging."

DEALERS' ASSOCIATION HAS NEW SECRETARY

Paul Fisher, a former St. Louis newspaper man, is acting as assistant manager of the St. Louis Automobile Show, and after the close of the show will take charge of the office of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association.

Capt. Robert E. Lee, who has been secretary of the association for seven years, will retire from the secretaryship when his term expires in April, 1915.

Fisher will act as secretary in the interim at the downtown office which the association will probably open before Nov. 1. Lee offered his resignation to the directors of the association last May, because of a press of other duties, but was requested to continue until after the Fall Automobile Show, which he has managed for the past six years.

FOREIGN TRADE BOUND TO GROW

While American manufacturers will experience a big boom in their export business, as a result of the war, they will have to cater to the European demands, rather than to try to force American goods upon unwilling buyers.

This is the opinion of Robert M. Barker, advertising manager of the Palmer-Moore Motor Truck Co. He believes that as soon as shipping facilities have been improved the demand for American goods will grow rapidly and that motor trucks will form a big bulk of the exports.

Failure to analyze the conditions as to ascertain the requirements of foreign trade a carelessness in the proper packing of goods for shipment must be remedied, if we are to get a large part of the trade which Germany and England are liable to lose Complaint has been made that American manufacturers have been careless and hurried in packing, and that goods exported have arrived in bad condition, in many instances no thought having been taktn of the fact that shipments would have to be transferred inland over mule packs or other crude methods of transportation. Reviewing the situation, he says:

Demand for Trucks.

While there have been several foreign Governments seeking to obtain trucks and although a few sales have been made, the actual business done has been more or less visionary.

If representatives of foreign Governments are looking for trucks in this country, it is evident they want them right away and not 30 days hence. This means an outlay of ready cash for American manufacturers are not going to take the risk on a transaction of this kind, for the lack of shipping facilities makes it a proposition not eagerly looked forward to by American manufacturers, besides the trucks wanted would have to be of capacity of three tons and upwards.

The shipment is somewhat different as regards neutral countries, which have been buying hitherto English and German trucks, and on credits which have been extended even up to a year's time.

South America should be a large buyer of American motor trucks, but because their financial dealings have been almost entirely through and with the banks of the nations at war, it will take some time to readjust things satisfactorily. The National City Bank of New York City has recently established connections through South America, so that dealings with Americans will now be facilitated.

As to the effect of the war on domestic business, it is undeniably true that this country is on the threshold of a big business boom. Our financial resources were never in better shape than at present and with the organization of the Federal Reserve Bank and consequent greater facilities for getting money in various centers instead of New York alone, every class of business is bound to benefit.

The lack of a foreign market for cotton will retard business development in the South, but this will be offset by a greater demand for cotton among the mills in anticipation of supplying foreign markets with finished goods Throughout the North, crop conditions have been excellent and nature has favored agriculture this year in a way t leave little to be desired.

AUTOMOBILES ARE NOW BOUGHT THE YEAR ROUND

A few years ago the man who intended to purchase a car held onto his money until spring, for the cars of yesterday were not the finest winter vehicles obtainable.

Now all that is changed.

Every car offered by the modern factory is the sure conqueror of winter roads; all but the biggest of blizzard snows, which tie up the railroads as well as the pikes of the countryside.

Winter touring, while not quite as comfortable as summer joyriding, is far from an ordeal in the warm cars of today, with foredoors, stream-lines that cut down the draft and the snug curtains that effectually shut out the chill.

With all the latest inventions of science that can be obtained at reasonable prices, the car can be made almost as warm and comfortable as a vestibuled train.

There are foot warmers of all sorts, screens that go over the radiator and protect it from freezing; electrical warming devices to fit onto the steering wheel, and last but not least, the most improved sort of driving clothes that are light in weight and as pliable as the sheerest of silk.

Then the modern windshield, built into the stream-line design, is so accurately fitted by the latest design curtains that absolute protection is afforded.

All these things go to make the average car or roadster a proper vehicle for winter travel.

Those who must have even greater protection, and yet cannot use the conventional closed cars for constant long drives over the country roads, have also been provided for by the modern maker of motor cars.

We refer to the quick, convertible closed car, landaulet and semi-closed car provided with a leather top that can be dropped if desired, and with glass windows that drop into the doors.

These are really closed cars with the advantage and lightness of open cars, and consequent low operative costs in gasoline and tires.

Now is the time to look over the entire 1915 models, and the time for the wise man to do his buying.

Make the car do its fair share of work in winter as well as in the summer time, when most any model of ancient vintage is comfortable.

NEW IDEAS IN 1915 CLOSED KISSEL-KARS

The St. Louis Kissel-Kar is showing the latest models of both the Kissel-Kar 36-"Four" and Kissel-Kar 48-"Six," two very smart appearing cars.

The 36-"Four" takes the place of last year's 40-"Four" and although considerably lower priced, is declared by experts to be an even better automobile. It has a Kissel block motor, 121 inch wheel base, and is offered in several tonneau styles, including four, five and seven passenger bodies, with either two or four doors, and the conventional roadster design.

The same range of bodies can be had with new series of 48-"Six," which is a materially changed car from last year. A brand-new Kissel-built motor, 4x5½. Centralized station for electric wires, vacuum feed system, automobile spark advance, non-skid rear tires as standard equipment and several improvements are noted.

New Two-Door Body.

The Kissel-Kar two-door body, which has individual forward seats and but a single compartment, has created great interest, and the company announces that it outsells the conventional four-door car. It is handsome and classy, and owners say it is infinitely more convenient and just as comfortable as the four-door style.

New Idea in Closed Body.

As a natural evolution of the two-door body, the Kissels have introduced a detachable Sedan top, the use of which converts the touring car into a perfect closed coach for winter driving. To attach or remove this top does not require expert labor, while the initial cost is several hundred dollars less than for two complete interchangeable bodies, which otherwise it is necessary to buy if one chassis is to be used the year around.

The two-door body and the detachable Sedan top have done much toward individualizing this year's Kissel-Kars, and owners are equally enthusiastic over the purely mechanical merits of the different chasses, declaring that for sturdiness, accessibility, flexibility of control and engine ability, they are not surpassed.

The Standardized Car

THE

IS A SIX OF SUFFICIENT SIZE

This fact has been proven in tests made recently by Cole's Chief Engineer on the hardest grades in Cincinnati

In a test of 75 miles on Clifton Avenue Hill, the Light Six consumed Five gallons of gasoline, making an average of Fifteen miles to the gallon, equipped with the Stewart-Warner Vacuum feed system, which is used on all Cole models.

Its Power Is Unquestioned

Its Hill-Climbing Efficiency Is Proven

Its Gasoline Economy Is Certain

THE COLE LIGHT SIX
IS ALSO A SENSIBLE AND SAFE SIX

The extremely wide margin in bearing sizes and all other vital parts of the chassis renders the car practically unbreakable in ordinary use.

The steering apparatus is oversize and of the finest material. The axles are both Timken and Timken bearings are used. Both axles and bearings are oversize.

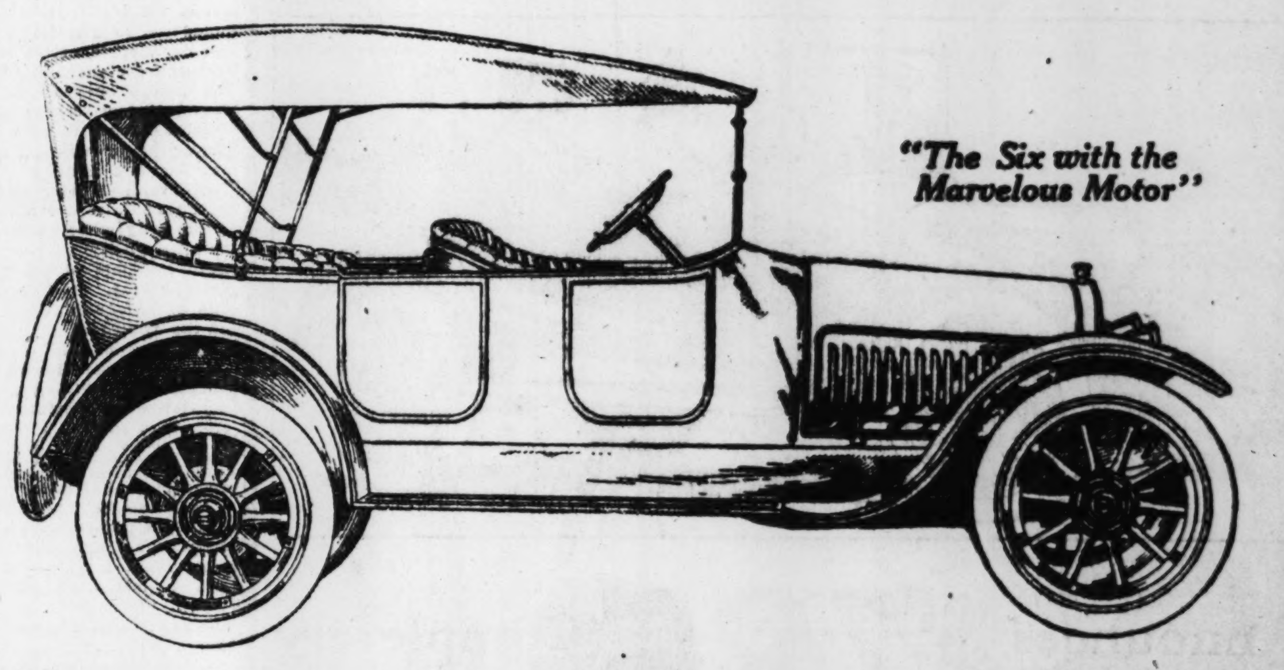
Beautiful Chandler for Immediate Delivery



"The Six with the Marvelous Motor"

WE are displaying the famous pioneer light-weight six in its beautiful new form. You will want to see it at once. With the best touring season of all the year yet to come, our immediate delivery of the refined Chandler makes very special appeal.

The exclusive Chandler-design and Chandler-make motor is the talk of motorists everywhere. It has put the Chandler Light-Weight Six distinctly in the lead of all other quality light sixes.

Chandler body design has been fully abreast the times, and acceptable to the most critical.

But NOW, right at the height of the Autumn buying season comes the new Chandler body, the new Chandler one-man Pantasote top and many other refinements.

And the Chandler price remains just where we put it the first of June when we launched our profit-sharing policy. The touring car or the roadster for $1595. Handsome enclosed cars of four types for correspondingly low prices.

Roomy, Graceful, Luxurious Body

You will marvel at the roominess, the grace, the luxury of the Chandler touring body. It seems to us the last word in body design. There is a sweep to the lines — unbroken by even the slightest projection, unmarred by a single hard line — that words cannot describe and even a photograph inadequately portrays.

The tonneau seat, deeply cushioned, is full 47 inches wide, net inside measurements. This means that three large persons sit together comfortably, without any suggestion of crowding. The tonneau is deep, too. There is leg-room, lots of it, for even the tallest persons. And room for auxiliary seats for children, if you wish to carry them with you. Like roominess, relatively, is provited in the front seat.

Simultaneously with the beautiful new body comes the new Golde patent one-man Pantasote top. It is graceful in line, free from bag, sag or wrinkle, and rigidly attached, when in use, to the built-in wind-shield.

NO RADICAL CHANGES IN 1915 RAUCH & LANG

No decidedly radical changes have been made in the R. & L. for 1915, so that the cars of the "IV" Series are obsolete and antiquated. Those changes that have been made are of the type and kind to add pleasure to the driving of an electric car and, incidentally, comfort.

The line consists of seven cars, ranging in price from the open, or roadster type, at $2600, to the town car type, at $4000. The J-5, of which the above photograph is a replica, is of the selective dual control type at $3200. The controlling mechanism of this dual control car is unique in that the engineers have been able to incorporate all of the excellent features which have made the Rauch & Lang control so predominant without adding any great number of additional parts to the car. The potent factor of safety is very prominent in the selective dual control type of car. It may be driven from either front or rear without in any way creating concern by having the mechanism go wrong. Automatic and fool-proof duo of controllers make this car an ideal conveyance proposition where the intention is to carry more than four persons.

This is the second year of the Straight-Type, Top-Mounted Worm Drive Electric, and thousands of cars in the hands of users the past year have demonstrated unquestionably that the Worm Drive method of propulsion is the most ideal for the electric type of automobile. It eliminates noise, unnecessary adjustments, misalignments, and possesses longevity. Maximum service is received from the car with minimum upkeep expense, making it an unusual electric car. The seven models are made on three chassis—92-inch, 102-inch and 109-inch.

The St. Louis Kisselkar Co., 308 North Twelfth street, has just taken the agency for St. Louis and territory for the Haynes car and will exhibit the Haynes light six at the automobile show. It has the electric gear shift. James E. and Leslie Newell are officers of the company. The agency for the Kisselkar will probably be dropped by the company.

TWO NEW MOONS AT HIGHLANDS AUTOMOBILE SHOW

Two new Moon models will be shown for the first time at the auto show by the Moon Motor Car Co.

The Moon four "38," a four-cylinder car is unique in the four-cylinder field. It is the first example of the European four-cylinder car with long wheel base. It is designed along the lines of the European fours and is priced by the Moon company at $1350, which is $500 less than any car ever built by this company.

The car is built low in order to enable it to hold the road under high speed. Tests have shown that it holds the road equaly as well as the heavier models, at the same time giving, the designers claim, 21 miles to the gallon of gasoline. A special four-cylinder continental motor of 3¾-bore and five-inch stroke is the power plant, while a special Delco starting and lighting system is used. Delco ignition with automatic spark advance is also a feature.

The long wheel base of 120 inches permits plenty of room in the tonneau and lots of leg room in the driver's seat. Full leather trimming and durable body finish are features of the finishing.

The new six "40" was designed by Chief Engineer Goodspeed for the purpose of providing a light six with greater motor flexibility than is possible in a four.

The power plant is a specially constructed Continental motor and 3½-inch by 5-inch stroke and has a mileage record of 18 miles to the gallon.

Delco starting and lighting system and Delco ignition with automatic spark advance are distinctive features. The wheel base is 120 inches, while there are 44 inches of leg room for the driver. Gasoline tank is carried on the rear. Other features are clear running boards, crown fenders, 18-inch steering wheel, left-hand drive and center control.

A cabriolet on this chassis will be shown. This body is larger than the ordinary body of this type, seating four passengers. The finish is blue with cane panels of natural color, while black leather is used for the trimmings. Extra tires are carried in the rear compartment. This chassis will also carry a six-passenger touring car.

The light weight Six "50" will also be shown. This model has been lightened 200 pounds and the body broadened to make the tonneau more roomy. Extra seats, which fold out of the way, are attractive features. The chassis of this model is of 130-inch wheel base. Particular stress will be laid on the new Moon brake equalizer, which is a standard part of all Moon cars.

Earl J. Moon, advertising manager, and Stewart McDonald, vice-president and general manager, will be in charge of the exhibit, with a corps of experienced factory salesmen to explain every feature in detail.

MOTOR TRUCKS REDUCE HIGH COST OF LIVING

The truck department of the Dorris Motor Car Co. has been compiling some very interesting information in regard to what the general public is paying for the maintenance of horses and the relation of this to the high cost of living.

The great possibilities in the motor truck to assist materially in the general reduction of living costs has not been given very great consideration, but from figures which have been compiled by statisticians, it has been shown that there are over 100,000,000 acres of America's finest farm lands devoted exclusively to the raising of feed and the upkeep of horses. These figures are based on authentic information that it takes five acres of ground to raise enough food to keep a horse. Consider for a moment the foodstuffs which could be produced on this same land—wheat, potatoes, apples and other good things to eat—and also the beneficial employment for a great many people. Then, there are hundreds of men now employed as "horse valets" who could be devoting their time to other pursuits in life which would make them more useful and productive to the general community.

Another question which arises is the insanitary conditions which are created in a big city by horses and which are entirely eliminated by the motor truck. All of these items will have a direct tangible bearing on what we are now paying for our general living expenses and as we progress and become more efficient, these questions will be given closer consideration than is now being done, and instead of legislation, what we need is the actual help of mechanical and efficiency engineers—the former to produce machinery which will lighten human burdens and the latter to work out their application to reduce the lost motion now prevalent in our general mode of living.

DEALERS TO PROTEST TAX ON MOTOR CARS

A number of the dealers of St. Louis expect to ask the officers of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association on Monday to send a formal protest to Missouri Congressmen against the proposed war tax that Congress is preparing to fix on automobiles, in the bill now pending. The tax is to be 50 cents per horse power to be paid by the owners, with an additional tax on each manufacturer of a sum not yet fixed for each automobile turned out from his plant.

Automobile associations all over the country are filing protests against this and the imposition of a tax of 1 cent per gallon on automobiles. The argument is that automobiles are already doubly taxed by the various states. One of these State imposts is the personal property tax, the other the license fee.

TOUR ENTRIES CLOSE AT NOON OCT. 6

All automobile owners who wish to enter the Seventh Annual Owners' Reliability Tour of the Automobile Club of St. Louis should send in their entry blanks before noon on Tuesday, Oct. 6, for according to the rules no entries will be received after that time.

The route which has been selected by the Touring Committee for this year's tour is the best that has ever been chosen for this event. And the Touring Committee is looking forward to a larger entry list than they have ever had.

The 1915 Model Premier is a six-cylinder automobile of distinction and quality. Nothing but the best enters into its construction, and in design it is second to none.

The new price of $2385 sets a new standard of high-grade automobile value, and the $400 reduction is possible only through refinements of selling and manufacture.

The 1915 Model Premier hasn't a competitor at its new price of $2385, and the new chassis is made of better material than its predecessor; proven by thousands of miles of individual and contest touring. Economical and powerful.

The Doctor's Advice

by Dr. Lewis Baker

Miss O. M. asks: "I have pimples, oily skin and suffer from constipation, headache and never feel strong and well, please prescribe for me."

Answer: You should overcome constipation and cleanse the system of accumulated poisons by taking three grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur) for several weeks or more. These tablets are very beneficial, especially in hot weather, as they have a tendency to cool the blood and improve its quality.

* * *

"Poorly" writes: "Being past middle age and observing that my nervous system is in bad shape I write for a prescription. I do not gain strength from my food, am weak, listless, forgetful, sleepless at times, tired and unable to act the part of a strong man of health, such as I was at one time."

Answer: Get from a well-stocked pharmacy a sealed tube of 3-grain cadomene tablets, which are especially made for those needing a strong, harmless, rejuvenating tonic. Astonishing and pleasing results follow and life and hope are renewed.

* * *

"A Fat Woman" asks: "Would you please prescribe a safe reducing remedy for too much fat?"

Answer: At this season many fat people suffer greatly from the heat as you do, and to all I recommend that they reduce with 5-grain arbolone tablets, the most successful and convenient prescription I know of. Druggists supply in sealed tubes with full directions.

* * *

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Ellwood sts., Dayton, O., enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given, but only initials or fictitious name will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Miss C. W. R. asks: "I have tried for two years to diet so as to increase my weight and improve the quality of my blood, but in vain. Please prescribe for me?"

Answer: Thin, scrawny bloodless people need assistance in absorbing nutrition from the food eaten, and for this particular purpose I always prescribe three-grain hypo-nuclane tablets, a most effective preparation if regularly and persistently used, as it seems to increase the red and white corpuscles of the blood thus affording health, strength and increased weight.

M. J. B. asks: "My hair is too oily and my scalp itches with dandruff and of late is combing out too much. What is a good treatment?"

Answer: Obtain plain yellow minyol from your druggist in 4 oz jars and apply as per directions. This cleans, purifies, cools and invigorates the hair and scalp, thus stopping the death of the hair. Dandruff and itching are at once relieved. Men and women all over the country now use it regularly.

* * *

"Essex" writes: "What should I do to relieve a severe case of kidney and bladder disease? I have fever, chills, pains like rheumatism, and soreness in region of bladder."

Answer: For such symptoms as you describe, I prescribe my favorite formula under the name of balmwort tablets. This is a splendidly efficacious remedy for such abnormal conditions. Begin their use at once as per directions on each sealed tube.

TWO NEW PACKARD CARS BOTH OF SIX CYLINDER TYPE

Announcement has just been made of the two Packard models, "3-38" and "5-48." These new sixes are in reality a later series of the previous models, the "2-38" and "4-48."

The most notable change in the exterior appearance of the car is in the lamp design. Each of the powerful electric headlights has an auxiliary headlight which has a separate reflector but is an integral part of the same lamp. These auxiliary headlights are designed for city driving or meeting cars on the road.

With the addition of auxiliary headlights, the side lights were reduced in size and are now designed to be used only where headlights of any kind are prohibited.

The lights are governed by buttons on the control. The tail light and license tag illuminator have been replaced by a combination tail light and license tag light on the left rear fender.

The motors are of six cylinder type, and are of the L-head design with cylinders cast in blocks of three. The "3-38" motor has a bore of 4 inches and a stroke of 5½ inches, giving an A. L. A. M. rating of 38 horsepower, developing a maximum of 65 horsepower. The "5-48" motor has a 4½-inch bore and a 5½-inch stroke, giving an A. L. A. M rating of 48 horsepower. This motor develops over 80 horsepower as a maximum.

All valves are on the right side of the motor and are inclosed by oil-tight aluminum covers.

The crank case is in two parts with cast web or mud splashers, which makes the motor mud proof.

The Packard-Bijur starting and lighting system, built especially for Packard motor carriages, is continued without change. The starting motor and generator are separate units.

Twenty body styles, both open and inclosed, are available for attaching to the Packard chassis.

Packard open bodies include the standard touring, a seven-passenger body, and a salon touring, a six-passenger body, both of which are mounted on the touring chassis; the phaeton bodies of four and five passenger capacity and a runabout body which fits the phaeton chassis.

The inclosed bodies are classified as limousines and landaulets of six and seven-passenger capacity, with cab sides and without cab sides; imperial limousine of six and seven-passenger capacity; broughams of six and four-passenger capacity, and a coupe. The limousine and landaulets all fit the touring chassis, while the brougham and coupe types fit the phaeton chassis.

The salon brougham of the three-window type is the latest achievement of the Packard body shops. With its low roof and narrow body, it is regarded as a particularly smart design.

The coupe, while appearing about the same as last year's body, has been widened to accommodate three people on the seat and one on the extra seat. Another departure for this type of body is a small corner window on the left rear corner of the body to give the driver a better view of the road in the rear.

The Packard "38" and "48" chassis are furnished in two styles, touring and phaeton. The "38" chasses have a wheel base of 140 inches and the "48" chasses have a wheel base of 144 inches.

KRIT MODEL M

1915 OAKLAND LINE BUILT ON TWO CHASSES

For 1915 the Oakland Motor Car Co. will build only two chasses—model 37, a light four, and model 49, a six-cylinder.

The four-cylinder model 37 corresponds to model 36 of last season, improved with a roomy, distinctly streamline body, more power, stronger construction and a marked reduction in weight. There is no change in the price, but the 1915 job offers much more car for the money. A roadster is also built upon this chassis.

Model 6-49 seven-passenger touring is an improvement on last year's 6-48 and $100 less in price. On this chassis will be built a roadster and speedster.

The changes made by Chief Engineer N. E. Wahlberg in the four-cylinder model 37 constitute almost an entirely new car. The six is practically the same body design as the four, except on a larger scale.

The four-cylinder model has many new features.

All the changes tend toward a reduction in weight, increase of power and greater economy of operation. The model 37 has a newly designed frame, new type of drive, an entirely new rear axle and many bearings with their necessary oil cups have been eliminated by the use of a special spring and pivot mechanism. In addition to this it has a more powerful motor, and is lighter by approximately 300 pounds. It is claimed that this motor will develop 30 horsepower on block test.

The motor is equipped with the latest type of Standard Delco combination electric unit, mounted on the right side of the engine and when operating as a generator is driven from the front gear. When turning over the motor it drives the fly wheel through a gear train.

The Delco unit has been improved by incorporating a current control which is inter connected with an automatic spark advance. The automatic spark advance is entirely mechanical and does not depend on magnetic or electrical devices of any kind, operating with a free range.

The wheel base is 113 inches; the seats are wider and there is more room in the driving compartment. The touring car seats five passengers and the roadster two.

The equipment is complete, some of the new features incorporated being the one-man top and the two-piece, rain-vision windshield. The extra wide aluminum covered running boards are absolutely clear; crowned fenders are used and the tool box is under the front seat with access from the tonneau. Tires are 33x4 inches, with non-skids on rear.

Model 6-49 is a seven-passenger touring, with a wheel base of 123½ inches. The body design is streamline, tapering from the V-shaped radiator to the rear of the car, which is the widest part. Extra broad aluminum crowned running boards and crown fenders are used. Two disappearing auxiliary seats in the tonneau provide ample room for seven passengers.

NEW FRANKLIN HAS FINE BODY DESIGN

The most important change in the Franklin is the price which has been reduced $150 on touring cars and roadsters, while on the enclosed cars there is still a greater reduction. How the Franklin is able to reduce the price is explained by its concentration on the one model (which happened a year ago), by improved factory facilities, special machinery, tools and equipment, practically doubling the factory output.

The Series Six consists of touring car and roadster, coupe, Sedan and Berlin.

The Franklin has always been distinctive in its appearance, made allowable by its direct air cooled engine. The body is larger, seats sides higher and the upholstery is finished off in a roll around tops of seats, giving a more luxuriant and comfortable look to the car.

The French type of hood in use some years ago has been improved in lines and gives the car a more sturdy and powerful appearance.

The greatest number of changes in the Franklin Series Six are electrical. The starting and lighting system is the Dyneto and has been much simplified, is lighter and more accessible. The starter can be removed without dropping the engine boot.

The Franklin Series Six is equipped with Goodrich Silvertown cord or Goodyear Power Saver tires.

The latest Franklin has the same general features that have been characteristic of every Franklin built. These include a direct air cooled motor, wood frame, full-elliptic springs and scientific light-weight construction throughout.

The Sixth Series of the Six-Thirty is made on one chassis with five body styles—touring car, roadster, coupe, Sedan and Berlin. The standard color for all types is Brewster green with black trimming. All bodies are aluminum over a wood frame. The hood is also aluminum. The lighting switches, starter switch, oil, hot and cold air and gasoline controls are all on the cowl board within easy reach of the driver. The wheelbase is 120 inches.

In spite of increased size, many added improvements and additional and better equipment, the weight of the car remains 2750 pounds.

ALLEN MOTOR CARS

$895 puts you in the automobile aristocracy

You have been waiting for this powerful, light, economical, classy ALLEN car. It is just what you have wanted in an inexpensive automobile. It has strength, speed, style and unusual power.

Think of an $895 car with a 3⅝x5-inch long stroke motor developing 37 horsepower! There is no other car built at anywhere near this price with a motor of this size in a car that weighs but 2260 lbs.

How can it be done?

We eliminate extravagant over-head expense. We are not a hastily organized concern that has been formed merely for the purpose of "taking a flyer" in the automobile business. A quarter of a century of manufacturing experience has taught us "how to produce and sell goods at lowest cost."

The ALLEN Model 34—$895—is the best bargain the man who wants an inexpensive automobile can find anywhere in the world. It meets every requirement of the man who wants a low priced car, which isn't cheaply made and does not look cheap—a car which is cheap only in the price you pay for it and in what it will cost to run it. Don't forget this—the ALLEN motor, with its long stroke—3⅝x5—not only means positive power, but it insures economy of operation through small gasoline and oil consumption.

Allen history is a guarantee

For twenty-five years we have been building vehicles. A number of years ago we began building automobiles. The first ALLEN car was a tribute to the efficiency of our engineering skill. It is today a powerful car, reeling off miles to the utmost satisfaction of its owners.

During 1914 our business increased more than one thousand per cent over the previous year. ALLEN cars were bought by people who had knowledge of automobile values. Conscious of the economy due to volume, we have enlarged our facilities, and we will during the ensuing season greatly increase our output. Our factories cover four city blocks. Every part we put into an automobile is carefully inspected and thoroughly tested before it is accepted.

"Automobile Elimination"

Investigate the ALLEN before you buy; ride in it; examine; compare it with other cars selling at much higher prices—that's all we ask.

The Short Road
To a Real Estate Sale!

From the DECISION to SELL that real estate to the ACTUAL SALE of it is either a long or a short road—as you elect.

The shortest road a property owner will ever find, leading to a sale, will be one leading through the Post-Dispatch's advertising columns.

There are, often, instances where ONE INSERTION OF AN AD does the work. In a majority of instances a limited campaign of classified advertising is sufficient. In rare instances the road stretches out to a longer campaign.

Test your "luck" with an attractive, factful ad of that property of yours, or instruct your agent to do the advertising. You may find the "end of the road" in one day.

Furious Fighting Between Russians and Germans in Augustowa Forest

GERMAN CAVALRY PUT TO FLIGHT BY RUSSIAN CAVALRY

Czar's General Staff Says Kaiser's Squadrons, in Engagement of Battle of Augustowa, Sustained Heavy Losses, Carrying Infantry With Them in Rout.

Czar Nicholas Departs for the Russian Front

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.

EMPEROR NICHOLAS it is announced, has departed for the theater of war.

Kaiser Speaks to Troops.

LONDON, Oct. 4.

A PETROGRAD dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. says that the Russian papers announce that Emperor William has been making speeches along the Russian frontier at Bromberg and Thorn on the "Inevitable victory of German culture."

By Associated Press.

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.—The following official announcement from the General Staff had been issued:

"The battle at Augustowo continued to develop with extreme ferocity on Oct. 2. The enemy relaxed his position to the north of Lake Vigri, carrying out a furious attack on the side of Ratchki and Borgimene, in an effort to occupy the western roads leading out of the Augustowo forest.

"On the road to Lodz and Schihlischki the first division of the German cavalry attempted to check the offensive tactics of the Russian cavalry. This engagement took place at dusk, but the squadrons of the enemy were put to flight and completely disposed, sustaining heavy losses. They carried along in their rout the infantry which was protecting them.

"The Russian troops have occupied Raygrod, Kalvary and Mariampol (all in Russian Poland).

"In the Carpathians the Russian troops repulsed near Mikoulitz an Austrian detachment which lost its cannon and mitrailleuses."

Russians Pursue Germans Over Pontoon Bridge Built by Enemy.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. from Petrograd, describing the German attack on the Suwalki-Olita Railroad, says that the Germans made Vilna their objective, disregarding Kovno, and attacked most stubbornly, finally retreating before Russian bayonet charges, but in order.

The roads were covered with German corpses. A dead gunner still held a shell in his arms.

At Ossowetz the Russians captured a number of heavy guns.

A German vanguard succeeded in constructing a pontoon bridge over the Nieman River, but not a single German who crossed the river survived, every one being mowed down by infantry fire, which was supported by a hail of shrapnel from masked artillery.

The Germans, the correspondent says, made another attempt to cross the river, advancing in dense columns, but were again repulsed, quick-firing guns playing havoc with their crowded ranks. The German batteries which had been supporting the infantry attack finally were silenced by Russian artillery. The enemy then retired for a distance of eight miles, prusued by Cossacks, who crossed the river by means of the pontoon bridge which the Germans had built.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph Co. at Rome says a dispatch has been received there from Bucharest, saying that, after occupying the principal cities of Bukowina (a crown land of Austria-Hungary), the Russians have begun an advance on Transylvania.

Austria, hoping to defeat this serious menace, has concentrated in the Carpathians several army corps, including those formerly on the Servian frontier, and a big battle is imminent.

The Post-Dispatch is the only evening newspaper in St. Louis that receives or publishes news gathered by the Associated Press.

GERMANS FORCE DEFENDERS BACK TOWARD ANTWERP

Legation in London Announces Retirement to Strong Position on River Nethe, Where Further Resistance Will Be Offered to Kaiser's Troops.

By Associated Press.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The Belgian legation issued the following official announcement tonight:

"On the east of the River Senne the defense of Antwerp has been forced to fall back to the River Nethe before the violent attack of the German artillery, after a desperate resistance of five days.

"The position on the Nethe is very strong and the Belgian army will resist with its full energy."

(The River Nethe flows into the Rupie 12 miles, as an aeroplane flies, from Antwerp. The Senne, a small stream, is four miles farther to the southeast. It joins the Oyle at Malines.)

German Troops Moving West Near Dutch Frontier.

HULST, Holland, via London, Oct. 3.—Preparatory to the final siege of Antwerp, large detachments of German troops, composed for the most part of naval reserves and landwehr, moved westward parallel with the Dutch frontier.

Several villages between Alost and Ghent have been deserted by the inhabitants. Driving their cattle before them and removing as much as possible of their furniture on wheelbarrows and hand cars, the Flemish peasants are moving westward as fast as they can.

Large numbers probably will be obliged to cross the frontier into Dutch territory. Everything is ready to receive them. Those who are unable to provide for themselves will be sent at once to the Dutch refugee camps in the province of Gelderland, where the Dutch Government has thus far taken care of about 12,000 refugees.

The activity of the Germans in Brussels since Sept. 24, and their energy in repairing the roads leading to the Belgian coast of the North Sea have been marked.

Recent storms have blown the waters of the Scheldt far over the regions to the south and east of the town and surrounding country have been converted into a marsh.

LONDON, Oct. 3, 10:50 P. M.—An Amsterdam dispatch to the Reuter Telegram Co. says that on yesterday and today thousands of Belgian fugitives arrived at the Dutch town of Esschen from the villages and towns around Antwerp. There were men, women and children, but mostly children. It was impossible to house all the fugitives in Esschen, and many were taken by trains to the neighboring towns.

FLUSHING, Holland, via London, Oct. 3.—Owing to renewed activity on the part of the Germans in Belgium, followed by the arrival here of a steady stream of refugees from that country, the state of siege which has been declared to exist over this port is being strictly maintained. Every preparation has been made to close the mouth of the Scheldt River at a moment's notice. Likewise the principal bridges which connect the Zeeland Island with the continent have been mined. Strong detachments of troops keep constant guard over these structures.

By order of the military authorities all road signs for the guidance of automobilists and cyclists have been removed. The greater part of the rolling stock of the railroads has been sent to the center of the country.

Lieutenant-General von Trotha Killed in Battle With Russians

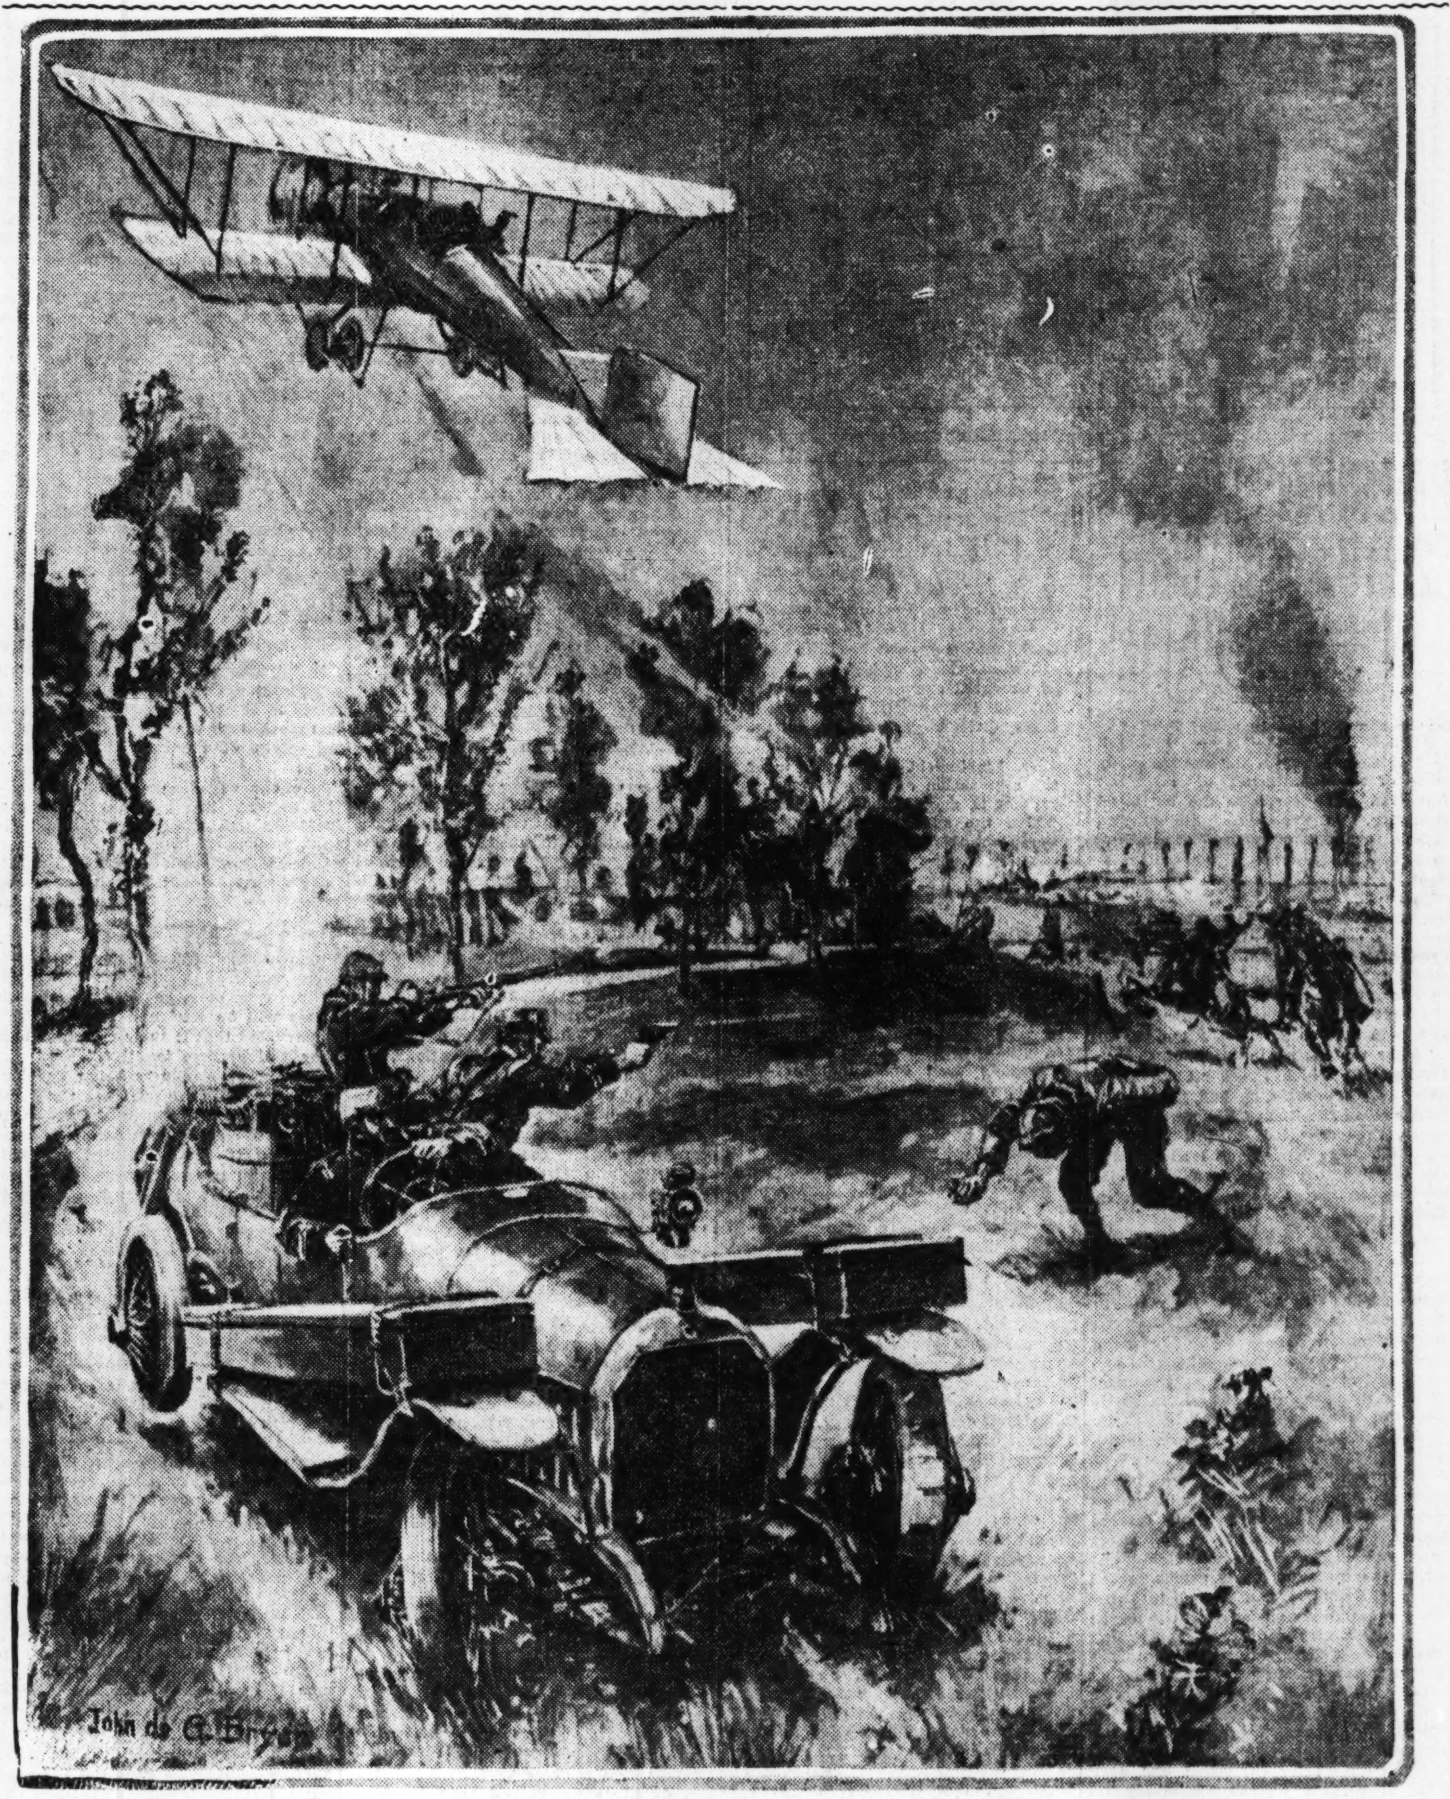
LONDON, Oct. 4, 2:06 a. m.—Lieutenant General von Trotha, formerly Commander in Chief of the forces in German Southwest Africa, has been killed in the fighting in East Prussia, where he was in command of an infantry brigade, according to a Central News dispatch from Amsterdam.

Correspondents to Be Barred From the German Frontier

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A Copenhagen dispatch to the Central News says the German General Staff has announced that no correspondent, painter or photographer will be permitted at the German frontier in the future.

Saving the Mechanic That an Airman Had to Leave Behind Him

An Incident of the Battle of the Marne Drawn by John de G. Bryan for the "Illustrated London News" From a Sketch Made by W. F. Bradley, Who Was With the French Army at the Time.



"Capt. Gerard of the Royal Flying Corps, scouting for the French on a Caudron biplane, came to the ground near the German advance posts; a detachment of their cavalry made an effort to surround him. His mechanic swung the propeller, starting the engine, but in his hurry was struck by a blade of the propeller and disabled. Capt. Gerard had to leave him on the ground. Fortunately the military car, fitted with spare parts, that is attached to every airman, was following closely, and the occupants made a dash for the disabled mechanic, who was taken on board under cover of the fire of the occupants. Both aeroplane and car got safely out of danger."—Note accompanying sketch.

MISS ANNE MORGAN TELLS OF MAKING HOSPITAL OF VILLA

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Wounded French soldiers have been convalescing at a Varsailles villa controlled by Miss Anne Morgan, sister of J. Pierpont Morgan, who arrived tonight on the steamer France, of the French line, and told of conditions in the war zone.

Miss Morgan spoke of turning over to the injured men the villa Duissoons, which is next to her own, and which has two gardens. Her saddle horse at Versailles was commandeered by the French, she added, but she was glad the animal was taken for war service.

"Everyone knows that atrocities have occurred," continued Miss Morgan. "For instance, we motored into the village of Courtacon, where we found that two-thirds of the village had been burned by the Germans. I talked with a woman whose son, a noncombatant, had been shot before her eyes by the Germans. The only reason given was that he was of military age; personally he had done nothing."

Miss Morgan, with Miss Elsie de Wolfe, Miss Elizabeth Marbury and Mrs. Paul Morton, stayed in Haute-Savois until the middle of July. Then, accompanied by . Lepine, former Prefect of Police in Paris, the party made a trip along the coast, which ended at Bordeaux, whence Miss Morgan and Miss de Wolfe returned to Paris.

Among 387 passengers whom the France brought from Havre was Johnny Reiff the jockey who for the past 14 years has ridden abroad for the stables of Baron Rothschild. In return for the kindness shown him in France, he said, he would seek mounts in this country for the French army.

Plans for Hague Peace Conference Abandoned

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.

ALL plans for holding the third international peace conference at The Hague next year have been abandoned.

This was announced today at the State Department.

Germany Building 50 More Submarines; Motor Fuel Scarce

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The German dock yards are working with feverish energy, says a Copenhagen dispatch to the Daily Mail. Fifty submarines are being built, it is reported, the submarine successes having made the German public clamorous for more ships of this kind.

The great lack of benzine, petrol and rubber are seriously affecting the German transports in the field, according to the dispatch, as all secret petrol depots established before the war are exhausted.

France to Name 4 Marshals, Joffre, Pau and Two Others

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The French Government will create four Marshals of France, according to the Paris correspondent of the Express. The men selected, he says, are Gen. Joseph Joffre, Commander-in-Chief of the French army; J. S. Gallient, Military Governor of Paris; Gerald B. Pau and C. De Castelnau, who are on the fighting line.

GERMANS' RIGHT FLANK PROTECTED FOR POSSIBLE RETREAT

By ASSOCIATED PRESS.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The official communication issued tonight says:

"There is no new detail to announce. The general impression is favorable."

The official announcement issued this afternoon follows:

"First—On our left wing the violent action, which has been progressing since yesterday continues without interruption, particularly in the region of Roye, where we have repulsed all attacks, although upon this part of the front the enemy has been reinforced by new additions taken from the enemy's center, as has been previously noted.

"Second—Upon the center nothing is to be noted from Rheims to the Argonne region. In the Argonne district the Sixteenth German Corps (the army of the Crown Prince), which had attempted to slip through the woods of Grurie, has been driven back toward the north of the Varennes, la Harazee, Vienne-la-ville line.

"In the Woevre district and upon the heights of the Meuse our progress is always slow, but continuous.

"In the Belgian field the Germans are bombarding the front southeast of the Antwerp position without yet being able to produce any considerable effect upon the works. They have delivered many infantry attacks which have been repulsed.

"In the Russian field a strong German army of four corps has taken positions between the frontier of East Prussia and the River Iiemen. Its left wing has been thrown back upon Mariampol and Suwalki. At the center the city of Augustovo has been taken by the Russians.

"In Galicia, the rear guard of the Austrians has retreated in disorder as far as the Vistula.

"In Bosnia, Serb and Montenegrin columns are advancing upon Sarajevo.

Berlin Reports No Decisive Results

BERLIN, Oct. 3, via Amsterdam and London.

"The right wing of the German army in France has repulsed renewed efforts on the part of the French to outflank it. To the south of Roye, the French have been dislodged from their positions.

"German troops advancing in the Argonne region have won substantial advances in a southerly direction.

"East of the River Meuse, French troops from Toul undertook energetic night attacks, but were repulsed.

"Before Antwerp, Fort Wavre, St. Catherines and the Redoubt Borpevelvt, with the intermediate works, were assaulted yesterday at 5 o'clock. Fort Waelhem has been invested.

"In the eastern arena of the war, an advance of Russian forces across the Nieman River against the Germans in the province of Suwalki seems imminent."

Battle May Continue Many Days Without Definite Outcome

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Roye, the little town on the main road from Amiens to Noyon, the heights around which have been alternately occupied by the French and the Germans during the past week, is still the center of a battle of great violence. The Germans, who are fighting stubbornly to protect their flank at this point, have brought up reinforcements, but according to the French official communication issued this afternoon, all their attacks have been repulsed.

The action, however, still is proceeding and upon it much depends, for if the Germans are beaten, their line of communication at Tergenier will be seriously threatened.

Of other operations on this front, which extends as far north as Arras, nothing has been disclosed since the French themselves announced that their force, which was debouching from Arras had fallen back slightly on the east and north of that town.

Germans Zealously Guard Flank.

There is evidence from other sources that the Germans are making preparations to protect their flank, should a retirement become necessary. They have evacuated West Flanders the westernmost province of Belgium, and their attack on Antwerp is believed by many to be designed to keep the Belgians busy and prevent them from operating on what would be Gen. von Kluck's left should he fall back through Belgium.

But the battle is not yet over, though it is now in the 23d day, and it

GERMANY WELL PREPARED TO CARE FOR ALL HER NONCOMBATANTS

Except for the forces absolutely needed elsewhere, the Germans are maintaining their strength in France and besides fighting off the French efforts on their right, themselves are remaining on the offensive on the French right. The army of the Crown Prince, which has been in the thick of the fighting since the Germans began their invasion of France, has made an attempt to slip through the woods of LaCrurie, but the French report says, was thrown back to the north of the Varnenes la Harazee-Vienna la Villa road. This road pierces the northern part of the Argonne forest, so that the French must have made a considerable advance in this region and quite straightened out the line from the north of Verdun to the north of Rheims.

Ground Gained on the Crown Prince.

This attack of the Crown Prince's army doubtless is what the Germans referred to in their report of Friday's date, to the effect that the troops advancing in the Argonne had gained ground in a southerly direction.

In the Woevre district and on the heights of the Meuse the French claim that their progress, though slow, continues. There apparently has been some hard fighting further south, for the German report speaks of vigorous sallies from Toul having been repulsed.

Along the center comparative calm still reigns. The Germans have been keeping up a heavy artillery fire on the British and French forces entrenched in front of them, but the British accounts say little damage has been done.

The real work is being done on the two wings and the troops in the center, who have had much fighting, are being given a respite, until the moment comes for them to move again. This, of course, depends upon the success or failure of the out-flanking operations.

The German attack on Antwerp, which does not appear to have been a serious one thus far, apparently has not had any effect on the Belgian forts of Lierre, Waelhelm, Wavre and St. Catharines. At any rate the Belgians say the forts are intact and that the Germans have been driven off with heavy losses to their side.

This battle already has taken its place as the longest in history. The battle of Mukden lasted 20 days, while that of Liao-Yang continued for nine days. Both these were in the Russo-Japanese War.

Big Battle Likely in Poland.

The operations between the Russians and the Austrians and Germans grow in interest. These armies are fighting along a tremendous line, extending from the neighborhood of Cracow, in Galicia, along the frontiers of Poland and East Prussia, almost to the Baltic Sea. There is no news from the southern field, but the Germans and Austrians, instead of waiting on the line between Cracow, Czestechow and Kalisz for the Russians, have advanced further into Poland. Their outposts have been reported as far east as Pictrkow (90 miles southwest of Warsaw), in the north, and Stopnica (32 miles southeast of Kieloe) in the south.

A big Russian army is gathering to meet them, and a great battle probably will be fought in Poland, instead of on the border of Poland and Silesia.

In the north, if the reports are to be believed, the Russians seem to have checked the German invasion from East Prussia and have compelled the Germans to retrace their steps, except on the right wing, which still is fighting around Ossowetz.

The latest report on the movements of the German Emperor is that he has left Breslau from which point the invasion of Poland was launched, for Thorn, West Prussia.

MAYOR OF BERLIN GUEST OF AMERICAN BREAKFAST CLUB

He Points to Food as Answer to Tales That Germans Are Eating Their Zoo Animals.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 1, via The Hague and London, Oct. 3.—The American Breakfast Club assembled today for the first time since the outbreak of the war. The meeting was attended by 150 persons, including the personnel of the American embassy and consulate and leading American business men.

The Lord Mayor, who was the guest of honor, asked those present to deny stories appearing in the foreign papers regarding famine, rioting and unemployment in the German capital. He urged dissemination of the fact that order prevailed in the city and that there was no lack of food, "of which this breakfast is certainly the best answer, despite tales abroad that the animals of the zoological gardens are being eaten."

Ambassador Gerard, in a brief address, thanked the Berlin banks for the assistance they had given Americans during the crisis, and President Wolff of the American Chamber of Commerce announced that Americans in Berlin soon would open a free kitchen for the benefit of the poor. He declared that in three days enough money had been collected to care for 300 persons during the entire winter. This action was to reciprocate courtesies shown Americans in Germany.

Stories appearing in the foreign press asserting that Prince Adalbert, the third son of Emperor William, had died in Brussels, are declared to be untrue. Prince Adalbert is in the naval service and when last heard of was acting as navigation officer aboard the dreadnaught Prussia. Prince Joachim has been wounded and Prince Oscar suffered an attack of heart trouble.

Russia to Import American Mine Products by Steamers

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.—The board of the Russian volunteer fleet has decided to operate an extensive transpacific service between Vladivostok and Western American ports. In consequence it has asked for and has been granted a reduction in railroad tariffs within Russia on many classes of imports from America, such as nickel, tin, copper, lead, saltpeter and wadding. Such commerce is destined to enjoy the greatest development, in view of the practical stoppage of commerce between the Baltic and the Dardanelles, and the winter closure of the port of Archangel.

A project is on foot for the holding of a conference which would be attended by representatives of Russia, England, Sweden and Norway to study questions relating to commerce between Russia and England over the northern route.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Six hundred thousand fleece-lined cotton garments for European armies have been ordered from knitting mills in New York State.

WAR COSTS FRANCE $7,000,000 A DAY; DEPOSITS INCREASE

Minister of Finance Says Loan Could Be Had, but Is Not Necessary.

PARIS, Oct. 3, 6:10 p. m.—The war is costing France $7,000,000 a day. Minister of Finance Alexander Ribot announced today that the outlay for the first 60 days of the conflict has been $420,000,000.

M. Ribot gives an interview to the Temps on the situation in the Bank of France, which has not published regular statements since the war began. He says that on Oct. 1 the bank had $812,400,000 in cash, which was $63,800,000 more than it had on the eve of the war.

"Loans and discounts," the Minister of Finance said, "are $895,200,000, an increase during the last week of $17,500,000. This shows that the bank has made some discounts, and I hope it will make more.

Have Renewed Convention.

"The advance made to the Government on Oct. 1, after two months of the war, reached $420,000,000. The credit balance on the same date in the treasury was $59,200,000 and therefore we are far from having exhausted the amount provided by our convention with the bank.

Besides, we have just renewed the convention to assure the resources necessary in case the war should be prolonged beyond the date now foreseen.

"The total bank bills in circulation Oct. 1 amounted to $1,845,800,000, this being $57,400,000 less than the preceding week. This is explained by an increase in the deposits which, on Oct. 1, reached $435,400,000, an increase of $41,800,000 over the preceding week, and it can be seen that France is far from having exhausted reserves, and when the hour comes she will find the money for a new loan, which at present is unnecessary."

Reopening of Bourse.

Discussing the projected reopening of the Paris bourse, M. Ribot said:

"I think there is an interest in doing so without delay, but it is necessary to take into consideration that the exchanges in London and New York still remain closed. There is no hurry anywhere to give too great facilities for the negotiations of foreign securities, in fear of seeing money go abroad, and if the bourse reopens we would have to take precautions in this direction.

"In any case," the Finance Minister added, "a resumption of negotiations on the bourse would necessitate the liquidation of operations made before the war and this could not be done without certain advances to the market. I am trying myself to put into shape measures that may soon be applied."

"Above all," said M. Ribot in conclusion, "have confidence and preach confidence. We have the best reasons for being optimistic and if optimism is a virtue in times of great crisis we have not much difficulty in practicing it at this time."

BAVARIANS LOST 25 TO 50 PER CENT IN EARLY BATTLE

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN, Sept. 14.—Losses reaching half of their strength were suffered by some of the contingents of the First Bavarian army corps in the battle at Saarburg, in the middle of August, and "borne without wavering," according to a detailed report of this battle issued by the general staff.

It was the intention to issue detailed reports of the various operations regularly, to supplement the necessarily brief contemporaneous telegraphic reports, but the course of events has been so headlong that the present report is the first of this kind the General Staff has been able to give out. It says:

"After the daring invasion of French territory in which the First Bavarian army corps, unassisted, had fought its way beyond the line of Blamont-Badonviller, the corps had to fall back behind the Saar River, the leaders having planned to offer here an energetic defense against the superior French forces.

General Attack Ordered.

"The French advance guards followed close upon the heels of the corps, the mass of the French army opening in their rear its great offensive movement into Lorraine. On Aug. 18 the corps again reached Saarburg, where it had been detrained ten days earlier, and reluctantly saw itself obliged to abandon this town temporarily, since its position for the coming battle lay to the north and east of the city.

The morning of the 19th two French cavalry divisions appeared before Saarburg, moving out in mass formation without any cover. A few shots from our heavy artillery which landed in the midst of their ranks forced them to scatter. The French infantry that afternoon and during the night pushed gradually on. Saarburg and the woods to the left filling up more and more with hostile infantry. It later developed that the entire Eighth and part of the Thirteenth Army Corps were facing the First Bavarian Corps.

"The orders for the First had been that it was to defend decisively its position betwen Rommelfingen and Rieding. In the night of the 19th came the joyfully received new order for a general attack along the whole front at 11 a. m on the 20th.

Artillery Opened at Dawn.

"It was plain that this attack would be difficult, for it required an advance over open territory before the Bavarians' own positions. But the enemy was massed and in attacking distance.

"Beginning with the first gray light of the mornig the artillery of both sides bombarded each other very heavily. The infantry which lay in trenches under the extremely heavy fire of the French artillery, and the infantry at the rear, which covered itself skillfully behind the natural defense of the field, arranged formations for the coming attack and awaited eagerly the hour of its beginning. The corps had prepared its formation for the attack without the enemy becoming aware of it.

"The heavy batteries of field howitzers and mortars remained in the rear. The cavalry was with the artillery. The balloon of the field airships department had ascended near Kirchberg. To its observation is to be credited in great part the accurate marksmanship of the heavy artillery.

"The attack began with great vehemence at the stroke of 11 with an advance of the first line. The neighboring corps of the left, the Badenese, joined in. The dust clouds thrown up by the artillery projectiles showed how the enemy's lines were breaking up. The French artillery, which was stationed north of Saarburg and in the woods west of Saaraltdorf-Finstingen, was completely surprised by the attack.

Attack Slow Against Artillery.

"The German artillery, which had cleared the way for the infantry attack by shelling the enemy's positions in the woods, had, as was learned afterwards, a devastating effect on the French infantry, which had massed itself there. The heavy artillery had a like effect on every visible French battery. It was employed against the hostile infantry, where a few shots sufficed to mow down whole companies. The effect of the enemy's artillery and machine guns, however, was such that the attack itself went but slowly.

"By 5 o'clock in the afternoon Volfingen, the forests west of Saaraltdor and the southern part of Saarburg had been taken, and the enemy was going backward everywhere. By evening the second infantry division, which had been joined to the third brigade, had taken Langd-Zittersdorf and the second division had taken the heights by Hof. Saaburg and the heights of Rebenberg.

"In Saarburg itself the infantry bodyguard regiment was still fighting the remnants of the enemy, who were firing upon them from houses, towers, etc., with machine guns. As darkness came the enemy attempted a counter attack against the left wing of the first infantry division between Saarburg and Buhl, but was splendidly repulsed by the first infantry brigade. Generally the battle ceased during the night.

French Guns Demolished.

"It was felt at evening that the enemy had been defeated, but the extent of the victory became clear the next day, when one could estimate the losses of the French, the great number of captives and of guns taken, 31 in all. Nearly all these guns had been demolished by the Bavarian artillery, and their gunners had been either shot or had fled. The Eighth and Thirteenth French Army Corps had suffered heavily in the battle at Saarburg, and in the pursuit to the Meurthe and had been badly demoralised. This latter fact was proved by entries in diaries found on the dead and wounded.

"The losses of the Bavarian corps were, like their victory, great. Losses up to 25 per cent and even to 50 per cent were borne by the troops without wavering. The conduct of the troops was beyond all praise."

German Socialist Deputy Insists That Belgium Shall Be Free

LIEGE, Sept. 14.

A MOST interesting spectator during an inspection trip of the dismantled forts was Dr. Earl Liebknecht, the Socialist Deputy whom the foreign press reported executed early in the war. He enjoyed the special favor of the army officers in charge of the party.

Dr. Liebknecht will not hear of the annexation of Belgium or any part of it, a condition of peace on which the superpatriots have already set their hearts. "The minute any attempt is made to incorporate Belgium or any part of it in Germany, that minute the boasted unity of German parties will disappear," he said to the representative of the General Staff who accompanied him in the automobile ride around the fort girdle.

Rumania's King Worse; Some Call Illness Political Step

ROME, via London, Oct. 3.—A dispatch to the Giornale d'Italia from Sofia, Bulgaria, says the condition of King Charles of Rumania has suddenly become worse. The doctors' bulletin yesterday declared that he must have absolute quiet in order to save his life.

The well-informed, however, according to the dispatch, believe the King's illness is really a political step whose aim is to end the popular agitation to have Rumania join forces against Germany.

GERMANY CAN'T BE STARVED OUT, SAYS VICE-CHANCELLOR

Minister of Interior Tells How Country Is Solving Its Unemployment Problem.

By Associated Press.

BERLIN, Oct. 2, by way of The Hague and London, Oct. 3.—Germany's position economically and financially is such as will enable her to carry the war to a successful conclusion, in the opinion of Vice-Chancellor Clemens Delbrueck. The country cannot be starved out, declared the Vice-Chancellor in a long interview which he granted today.

The unemployment was steadily decreasing, with from 5,000,000 to 6,000,000 men in the field, he said. Many industries were working overtime on war orders, and measures had been taken to divert labor from idle branches to busy departments until now the unemployed numbered only from six to seven per cent of the working men in the country. Measures have been taken also to put the finances and the credit of trade and industry on a war footing, and these have been so thoroughly successful that a general moratorium undoubtedly will be warded off during the war, said Herr Delbrueck, placing Germany in a far better position after the war than that of the states whose industrial life is affected by a moratorium.

War Loan Institutions.

Vice-Chancellor Delbrueck, who also holds the office of Imperial Minister of the Interior, referred to the unanimous demonstration by representatives of labor, agriculture, commerce, industry and trade of Sept. 28, and of the determination of the German people to see the war through to a successful conclusion.

Herr Delbrueck described the loan institutions, where funds may be obtained on negotiable securities, such as special war banks which have been loaning to mortgage holders, small tradesmen and artisans until now no class is without an opportunity of adequate credit.

The Vice-Chancellor, referring to the unemployment after mobilization, said the provincial employment agencies then were merged in an imperial employment bureau, with the immediate result that the question of employment was solved by putting the man and the job together.

Harvest Is Being Gathered.

"Labor and capital, conservative, socialist and liberal trade unions have worked hand in hand in the interests of the Fatherland, with the imperial labor bureau as an efficient intermediary," he said. "The bureau has obtained harvest workers, who are gathering Germany's promising harvest. The same is true in the mining and shipbuilding industry. In the case of the textile industries, the hours of labor have been shortened. Of the 16 000 men sent to East Prussia at the opening of the war to labor on fortifications, not a single man proved unfit.

"Behind battling armies we must have only contented people. Communities must take steps to have the population employed despite the war, not allowing suffering and distress, and providing employment on various public works, such as railroad and canal building and the draining of swamps. The latter employment is resulting in the conversion of waste land, which means that the year 1915 will see instead, flourishing fields.

"Unemployment since the outbreak of the war has been steadily decreasing. All industries supplying the army are working to their utmost capacity. Our production of anthracite coal generally is meeting the demands of Germany, Austria and several neutral countries. Other industries which are natural world monopolies, such as dyestuffs and potash, are necessary to neutral countries, who, I suppose, will buy them during the war.

"There is a certain difficulty regarding raw materials. One of the first steps taken when the war began was to form an organization to institute a careful stock-taking and take over necessary materials, the same to be later served out to the industries in need of them. We found the supplies greater than had been expected, and certain articles have been obtained in considerable quantities in countries occupied by our armies.

Potatoes Converted Into Meal.

"I do not doubt that neutral countries in their own interest will endeavor to create markets for their goods, particularly the United States for her cotton.

"Our population can be starved out as little as can our industries. Germany produces almost the whole of her own consumption of breadstuffs and meats. Certain deficiencies in fodder supplies we are prepared to counteract by a rational use of our large crops, particularly potatoes."

Herr Delbrueck described one method of converting potatoes into meal that can be used in making bread or fodder, and gave credit for the use of potato meal as a constituent of bread to the United States. Germany, he continued, was now abundantly supplied with food that would last until the next harvest.

Herr Delbrueck said the general situation was due largely to Germany's centralised organization, economic as well as political. Wherever it was necessary to take steps in any branch of industry, trade or commerce he needed only the little group of interested ones with whom to discuss the matter, knowing that their decision would be binding upon the entire industry.

"In short," he said, "we watch affairs, confidently and placidly. I have been a minister nine years and have perfect knowledge of the economic and moral powers of my country. I am persuaded that we are in a position to conduct this war, which has been forced upon us, to a successful conclusion also in an economic sense."

Swiss Military Men Believe Germany Has 4,260,000 Soldiers

LONDON, Oct. 3.

IN Swiss military circles, according to a Central News Dispatch from Berne, it is estimated that Germany now has actually under arms 27 army corps of her regular troops and an equal number of reserves. Of these 24 army corps are in France, six in Belgium and Alsace, 13 in East Prussia and 11 between Thorn and Cracow.

There are, in addition, the dispatch adds, what is assumed to be 1,500,000 men of the Landsturm and volunteers serving in the interior, while 600,000 fresh recruits are reported to be in training sufficiently advanced for them to be ready for service in November. A German army corps embraces 40,000 men. The total men under arms, then, would be $4,260,000.

German Paper Says Grand Duke Deceived Czar Into War Order

BERLIN, Oct. 3, via The Hague and London.—The Thorne Gazette contradicts the dispatch from Petrograd which asserted that the Zeppelin which recently dropped bombs into Warsaw was later captured by the Russians. The paper says that the German aircraft returned to its home port intact.

The Coburg Gazette publishes an account dealing with the latter days of July, in which it asserts that Emperor Nicholas and his supporters had reached an open rupture with Grand Duke Nicholas and the latter's followers, because of the peace attitude of the Russian monarch, who was anxious to avoid war at any cost.

Several other Grand Dukes, the Minister of Agriculture and Empress Alexandra, the article says, did their best to convince the war party that their course was pregnant with grave developments. Meanwhile Grand Duke Nicholas had ordered the mobilization without the consent of the Emperor.

When the latter heard of troops marching west, he was told that the Germans had invaded Russian Poland and instigated a general revolt among the Poles. The Emperor then, according to the Gazette's article, reluctantly signed a mobilization order.

British Sea Mines Will Be Inactive if Moorings Break

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The Admiralty's announcement of its decision to lay mines in certain areas in the North Sea is regarded as the most important development of the day. The Chronicle says:

"No one can blame Great Britain in this matter. She has only resorted reluctantly and after a very long delay to a method of warfare which she always disliked and deprecated. But it has become evident that no abstention from mine laying on our part will lead the Germans to abstain, and in view of their submarine activities it would be Quixotic any longer to neglect this defense which our enemy employs so lavishly. One may be sure that British mines will be anchored and will be so constructed that if their moorings break they will become inactive."

The mine fields now being developed block for defensive purposes the Straits of Dover and the mouth of the Thames, with a course of sufficient channels left clear to enable neutral and allied shipping to pass safely under pilotage.

The Daily News says: "It is regrettable that we should be compelled to take this course, since it exposes neutral commerce to some risk. It has, however, been forced upon us by the enemy."

U. S. Will Protect Naturalized Sailors Upon the High Seas

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—One of the most delicate questions that has arisen as a consequence of the European war relates to the status of foreign-born sailors on American ships who either have become naturalized American citizens or have taken out preliminary papers.

Several cases have arisen which have led to an exchange of views between the State Department and British officials.

Th State Department is understood to take the position that where the sailor is fully naturalized there can be no question of his exemption from arrest. In cases where the sailor has taken only the preliminary steps towards naturalization he will be protected on the high seas certainly, and probably even in a British port, providing he does not land from his ship.

2 British Aviators Believed to Have Lost Life in North Sea

KIRKWALL, Scotland, via London, Oct. 3.—Lieuts. Vernon and Ash, aviators attached to the Royal Flying Corps, went for a short flight in a hydro-aeroplane on the North Sea Tuesday afternoon. They have not been seen since. It is feared both have perished.

Two German Airmen in Water 14 Hours Saved by Swedish Ship.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch to the News from Copenhagen says the Captain of the Swedish steamer Rima, from Gothenburg to Loebeck, reports rescuing from the sea two German airmen who had been in the water 14 hours.

British Steamer Sunk by Mine in North Sea; Nine Missing

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A Lloyd's dispatch from Ostend says that the British steamer Dawdon (234 tons), from Hull for Antwerp, is reported to have been sunk last night by a mine in the North Sea.

Masonic Hospital Cornerstone Laid.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., Oct. 3.—Many prominent Masons of Illinois assembled at Sullivan today to lay the cornerstone for the new Masonic Hospital to cost $50,000, an adjunct to the Home for the Aged Masons and orphaned children. Grand Master H. T. Burnap of Alton had charge of the ceremonies.

GERMANS TREAT PRISONERS WELL IN BERLIN CAMPS

By HERBERT B. SWOPE,
A Staff Correspondent of the New York World and Post-Dispatch.
(Copyright, 1914, by Press Pub. Co.)

BERLIN, via Holland and London, Sept. 29 (Delayed in transmission).—According to a Berlin official statement, both officers and men among the prisoners of war are being taken care of in the same way as are soldiers of equivalent rank in the German army.

An examination of the great prisoners' camp at Durboritz bears out this assertion. Each of the captured staff officers has a room, while those of lesser rank either have a room apiece or are doubled up. The noncommissioned officers and men live in tents in an encampment, where they shift largely for themselves.

The cost of providing for each of these men averages about 15 cents a day, and so far as possible their wishes are followed as to the food they desire and the work they prefer to do.

Correspondent Sees Prison.

Despite many difficulties thrown in his way by the military authorities, the Post-Dispatch correspondent, through the courtesy of the German Foreign Office, has had an opportunity of seeing the prison camps.

It must be said that all of the captured are well provided for. Ambassador Gerard has at his disposal a large amount of money sent from England. He is using it for the immediate necessities and small comforts of the British soldiers and officers, and is providing them, where needed, with heavy clothing and other supplies.

The German Red Cross is looking after the military invalids closely, and the American Red Cross is expected in Berlin shortly. The American Red Cross will report to Prince Hatzfeldt, head of the German Red Cross, and will be joined here by two men who are well know in the United States—Prince Helie Talleyrand Perigord and Baron Albert Goldschmidt Rothschild.

Prince Helie had visited America several times, and Baron Rothschild was formerly an attache of the London Embassy at Berlin.

The American Red Cross will be divided into two separate parties—one for the German and the other for the French or Allies' wounded. Prince Helie will go to Russia, as the representative of the Germans and to offer his services as an interpreter there, while Baron Rothschild will devote himself to the same offices for the French wounded.

German Cruiser Damages Two Warships Off Oregon Coast

NANAIMO, British Columbia, Oct. 3.—Wounded French and British marines are in a hospital, as the result of a recent naval engagement off the Oregon coast between the Canadian cruiser Rainbow and the French cruiser Montcalm and the German cruiser Leipzig. The allies' vessels were badly damaged.

The Rainbow was no match for the German ship, but the Montcalm was in the Leipzig class. When the engagement was first reported it was passed along as only a Pacific Ocean thunderstorm.

German Ammunition Ship Said to Have Run Japanese Blockade

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A Hamburg-American Line boat has succeeded in running the Japanese blockade and has reached Tsingtau, the seat of the German concession of Kiaochow, with a cargo of ammunition, according to information contained in a message from Tientsin, China, by the Weekly Dispatch.

PARIS, Oct. 3.

FOUR superior officers were among a detachment of 535 German prisoners who passed through a station near Paris today on their way south.

These officers had presented themselves at Rheims during the bombardment of the cathedral and demanded the surrender of the place. As they did not have their eyes bandaged and came without a white flag, they were not considered envoys and were held as prisoners of war.

LONDON, Oct. 4.—A Paris dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph Co. says numerous German prisoners passed through various French stations Friday night. The convoys comprised 1245, 1310 and 980 prisoners respectively. They were taken from Juvisy to Versailles. They included almost an entire regiment of the Prussian Guard, with band and staff officers. Several additional trains with prisoners are expected to arrive soon.

SENATE COMMITTEE TO RETAIN BANK WAR TAX

Straight and Industrial Insurance Eliminated Levy on Theaters to Be Graded.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Retention, despite general and vigorous protests from bankers, of the proposed tax of $2 a thousand on bank capital and surplus, and elimination of the proposed taxes on straight and industrial life insurance; were determined upon by Democratic members of the Senate Finance Committee today in their deliberation on the war revenue bill which passed the House.

Proprietors of moving picture theaters and small amusement places will profit by the action of the committee which substituted for the flat tax of $100 on all theaters proposed in the House bill a graduated tax of $25 for theaters with a seating capacity of 300 or less, $50 for seating capacity up to 600, $75 up to 1000 and $100 for seating capacity over 1000. The committee expects to finish its work Monday.

The committee still has under consideration the elimination of casualty insurance, including fire, accident and damage insurance.

GERMANY ALMOST NORMAL

Music Teacher Reaches Home and Tells of Conditions.

Miss Clara Meyer of 1921 Virginia avenue, a music teacher, who returned from Germany Friday night, said yesterday that conditions seemed almost normal in most of the German cities in which she had been. Opera houses and other places of amusement were open, she said, and she attended the opera several times in Berlin and Charlottenberg after the war began. She said they experienced few difficulties either in Germany or during their trip home.

Miss Meyer was accompanied by her mother, Mrs. Louise Meyer, and a sister, Miss Mina, a teacher at McKinley High School. They returned home through Holland and England, sailing from Liverpool, Sept. 19, on the Philadelphia of the Holland-American line. The Meyers not only arrived home without difficulty, but they have received all of their baggage.

NO LASTING PEACE IF TREATIES FAIL TO BIND, LORD BRYCE DECLARES

Former Ambassador Says Nations Must Combine to Coerce Violators of Agreements, Declaring Smaller States Must Find Safety in Honor of Greater.

NEW YORK, Oct. 4.—The New York World and the New York Times, under arrangement with the London Chronicle, print this morning a signed article on "Neutral Nations and the European War" by Viscount Bryce, who as James Bryce recently was the British Ambassador at Washington, but who for many years was and is now best known as the author of his history of the American Commonwealth.

The keynote of the article is "There can be no lasting peace if treaties fail to bind threatening breakers of them."

In part, the article follows:

"The present war has had some unexpected consequences. It has called to the attention of the world outside of Germany some amazing doctrines proclaimed there, which strike at the root of all international morality, as well as all international law, and which threaten a return to primitive savagery, when every tribe was wont to plunder and massacre its neighobrs.

Opinion of Bernhardi's Book.

These doctrines may be found set forth in a widely circulated book of Gen. von Bernhardi, entitled "Germany and the Next War," published in 1911, and professing to be based mainly on the teachings of the famous professor of history, Heinrich von Treitschke.

"To readers in other countries, and I trust to most readers in Germany also, they will appear to be an outburst of militarism run mad, the product of a brain intoxicated by the love of war and by a superheated national self-consciousness.

"They would have deserved little notice, much less refutation, but for one deplorable fact, viz: that action has recently been taken by the Government of a great nation (though as we hope and trust without the approval of that nation) which is consonant with them and seems to imply a belief in their soundness. This fact is the conduct of the German Imperial Government in violating the neutrality of Belgium, which Prussia as well as Great Britain and France had solemnly guaranteed by treaty.

"Into the causes which so suddenly brought on this war I will not enter. Many others have dealt with them.

Not a War for Commerce on England's Part.

"One thing, however, I can confidently declare. It was neither commercial rivalry nor jealousy of German power that brought Great Britain into the field, nor was there any hatred in the British people for the German people nor any wish to break their power.

"So far as Britain was concerned, it was the invasion of Belgium that arrested all efforts to avert the war and made the friends of peace themselves join in holding that the duty of fulfilling their treaty obligations to a weak state was paramount to every other consideration.

"To return to the doctrines set forth by Von Bernhardi and apparently accepted by the military caste to which he belongs. The most startling among them are the denial that there are any duties owed by the State to humanity, except that of imposing its own superior civilization upon as large a part of humanity as possible, and a denial of the duty of observing treaties, which are only so much paper. To modern German writers the state is a much more tremendous entity than it is to Englishmen or Americans; it is the supreme power, with a sort of mystic sanctity a power conceived of, as it were, self-created; a force altogether definite from and superior to the persons who compose it.

"But a state is, after all, only so many individuals organized under a government; it is no wiser, no more righteous, than the human being of whom it consists, and whom it sets up to govern it.

Concerning the Morality of a State.

"If it is right for persons united as citizens into a state to rob and murder for their collective advantage by their collective power, why should it be wicked for citizens, as individuals, to do so? Does their moral responsibility cease when and because they act together. Most legal systems hold that there are acts which one man may lawfully do which become unlawful if done by a number of men conspiring together. But now it would seem that what would be a crime in persons as individuals, is high policy for those persons united in a state. Has a state, then, no morality, no responsibility?

"In the Middle Ages, when men were always fighting, they appreciated the blessings of war much less than does Gen. Bernhardi, and they valued peace, not war, as a means of civilization and culture. They had not learned in the school of Treitschke, that peace means decadence and war is the true civilizing influence.

"The small states whose absorption is now threatened have been potent and useful, perhaps most potent and useful, factors in the advance of civilization. It is in them and by them that most of what is most precious in religion, in philosophy, in literature, in science and in art has been produced.

"The first great thoughts that brought man into the true relation with God came from a tiny people inhabiting a country smaller than Denmark. The religions of mighty Babylon and populous Egypt have vanished; the religion of Israel remains in its earlier as well as in that later form which has overspread the world.

The Greatness of Small States.

"England had in the age of Shakspeare, Bacon and Milton a population little larger than that of Bulgria today. The United States in the days of Washington and Franklin and Jefferson and Hamilton and Marshall counted fewer inhabitants than Denmark or Greece.

"In the most brilliant generation of German literature and thought, the age of Kant and Lessing, and Goethe, of Hegel and Schiller and Fichte, there was no real German state at all, but congeries of principalities and cities, independent centers of intellectual life in which letters and science produced a richer crop than the two succeeding generations have raised, just as Great Britain also, with eight times the population of the year 1600 had no more Shakespeares or Miltons.

"No action is more palpably contradicted by history than that relied on by the school to which Gen. von Bernhardi belongs—that culture, literary, scientific and artistic, flourishes best in great military states.

"Although the great states are stronger and more populous, their peoples are not necessarily gifted and the extinction of minor languages and types would be a misfortune for the world's future developments.

"We may not be able to arrest the forces which seem to be making for that extinction, but we certainly ought not to strengthen them. Rather we ought to maintain and defend the smaller states and to favor the rise and growth of new peoples.

The Appeal to History Is Answered.

"Gen. Bernhardi invokes history, the ultimate court of appeal. He appeals to Caesar, to Caesar let him go. 'Die Weltgeschichte is das Welgericht' (world history is the world tribunal). History declares that no nation, however great, is entitled to try to impose its type of civilization on others. No race, not even the Teutonic or the Anglo-Saxon, is entitled to claim the leadership of humanity. Each people in its time has contributed something that was distinctively its own and the world is far richer thereby than if any one race, however gifted, had established a permanent ascendancy.

"We of the Anglo-Saxon race do not claim for ourselves any more than we admit in others, any right to dominate by force or to impose our own type of civilization on less powerful races.

"The United States has twice withdrawn its troops from Cuba which it could easily have retained. It has resisted all temptations to annex any part of the territories of Mexico in which the lives and property of its citizens were for three years in constant danger.

"So Britain also, six years ago, restored the amplest self-government to two South African republics, having already agreed to the maintenance on equal terms of the Dutch language. The citizens of those republics which were in arms against her 13 years ago have now spontaneously come forward to support her by arms under the gallant leader who then commanded the Boers and I may add that one reason why the Princes of India have rallied so promptly and heartily to Britain in this war is because for many years past we have avoided annexing territories of those princes, allowing them to adopt heirs when successors of their own families failed and leaving to them as much as possible of the ordinary functions of government.

Bigness Is Not Greatness.

"It is only vulgar minds that mistake bigness for greatness. For greatness is of the soul, not of body.

"The world advances not as the Bernhardi school supposes, only, or even mainly, by fighting. It advances mainly by thinking and by the process of reciprocal teaching and learning, and by continuous and unconscious co-operation of all its strength and finest minds. Each race Hellenic, Italic, Celtic, Teutonic, Iberian and Slavonic has something to give, each something to learn, and when their blood is blended, the mixture may combine the gifts of all.

"Let me disclaim once more before I close, any intention to attribute to the German people the principles set forth by the school of Treitschke and the Barnhardi school, which teach hatred of peace and arbitration, disregard of treaty obligations and scorn for weaker peoples.

"We in England would feel even deeper sadness than weighs upon us now if we could suppose that such principles had been embraced by a nation whose thinkers have done so much for human progress and who have produced so many shining examples of Christian saintliness.

"But when those principles have been ostentatiously proclaimed, when a peaceful, neutral country which other belligerent countries had solemnly and repeatedly undertaken to respect, has been invaded and treated as Belgium has been treated, and when attempts are made to justify these deeds as merely incidental to a campaign for civilization and culture, it becomes necessary to point out how untrue and how pernicious such principles are.

"We are told that armaments must be reduced, that the baleful spirit of militarism must be quenched, that peoples must everywhere be admitted to a fuller share in the control of foreign policy, that efforts must be made to establish a sort of league of concord—some system of international relations and reciprocal peace alliances by which weaker nations may be protected, and under which differences between nations may be adjusted by courts of arbitration and conciliation of wider scope than those that now exist.

"All these things are desirable, but no scheme for preventing future wars will have any chance of success unless it rests upon an assurance that states which enter into it will loyally and steadfastly abide by it and that each and all of them will join in coercing by their overwhelming united strength any state which may disregard the obligations it has undertaken. The faith of treaties is the only solid foundation on which the temple of peace can be built up."

Military Experts See Little Hope for an Early End to the War

By a German.

AMSTERDAM, Oct. 2, via London, Oct. 3.—A dispatch from the German capital says that the Berliner Tageblatt prints a significant article by its military correspondent, Major Moraht, who, while asserting confidence that there will be a fresh German advance on Paris, is careful to add:

"But there is another possibility which must command the conscientious attention of calm observers of the fluctuating struggle. What would be gained by the allies if they force back our right wing to the Belgian frontier? Nothing but the passing success, which would be the beginning of the end of the Franco-British presumption of victory."

Major Moraht then explains that the further tho allies move from Verdun and Toul, which, he says, form their last great strongholds, the longer is the distance they must travel back when the stress of German armies, broad and unhindered, flows westward from Lorraine.

By an Englishman.

LONDON, Oct. 3.

THE military expert of the Times today says:

"However much we may bend back the German right wing and relieve Antwerp, whatever confidence we have that the shock of the Russian masses in the East will prove decisive, we must not entertain the slightest illusion regarding the hard and trying conditions which awaits all the allies in the future in operating against Germany reduced to the defensive.

"Germany is still united. Her resources grow. All her arsenals are working at full pressure. Her fleet will strike when the hour comes, probably in co-operation with the army.

"The line of the Aisne when forced may prove to be only one of many similar lines prepared in the rear of it. It may take a very long time for the allies to compel Germany to feel a weakness. It, therefore, devolves upon the allies to look forward to a long war."

2 GERMANS PASS FRENCH LINE, BLOW UP ROAD, ESCAPE

BERLIN, Oct. 3.—A daring deed of two German officers attached to the Twenty-fourth Pioneers resulted in the dynamiting of a railroad line on which the French were transporting ammunition and reinforcements greatly needed by them to resist the Germans. Details of this occurrence have just been made public here.

The two officers penetrated the French lines by swimming across the Meuse and making their way through swamps and over canals. They passed the French outposts and bivouacks and finally reached the railroad embankment, which they blew up with dynamite. After this they cut an underground telegraph wire and then returned in safety to their own lines. The following details are given by a lieutenant, who was one of the participants in the daring enterprise:

"The night of ——, the wind was blowing a hurricane. Part of the ground was familiar to us, particularly the near side of the Meuse, and the location of some of the French outposts, but nothing was known of the other side of the river, except the location of the railroad that had been marked for destruction.

Canals Crossed by Swimming.

"The first part of the journey was comparatively easy. Going forward quietly, we soon came to the canal on the left bank of the Meuse, which was closely guarded. Finally we arrived at a bridge. Here we killed the French guard, making no noise about it.

"After this we descended into a bog along the river, and going farther we crosed several canals by swimming. Our teeth chattering with the cold, we finally reached the banks of the Meuse, which was here about 55 yards wide. We laid aside our sabers and I tried to swim across, but the current was too strong. We then divested ourselves of our shoes and all other weights that would retard us in swimming, keeping with us virtually nothing more than the explosives. In this shape we managed to swim the river.

"On the other side another difficulty awaited us. There was a swamp, and we could find no place to land.

"We floated down stream until finally we were fortunate enough to get a footing.

In Mud Above the Knees.

"We plowed ahead, in mud often above our knees, exercising the greatest caution. It was the hardest kind of going. Finally we reached the spot selected for destruction. We laid our mine and set and lighted the time fuses, which we had carried up to this time tied in our hair. We were waiting for the explosion, but in the meantime we were still in danger of detection by French troops not far away.

"The fuse worked, and the explosion came on time. At once a French cavalry patrol dashed up and began firing into the swamp where we were hiding. This swamp was now a good ally. We eluded pursuit and got away.

"Later we came to a village, and at the point of our revolvers we requisitioned a horse and wagon. Then began a wild ride back to our lines."

The two officers have received the decoration of the Iron Cross for their exploit. Another lieutenant and a corporal who started on this trip evidently lost their lives by drowning.

GERMAN GENERAL STAFF FINDS LIEGE FORTS WERE SERIOUSLY DEFECTIVE

REASON FOR SPIES IN TIME OF PEACE SHOWN AT LIEGE

IS HALF THE BATTLE

Germans, Restoring Belgian Fortress, Explain Value of Knowing in Advance Gun Turret Locations.

Correspondence of Associated Press.

LIEGE, Sept. 14.—Surprise is often expressed that so much money and effort are spent in getting plans of fortresses in time of peace and that the vigilant efforts are made to prevent espionage in fortified places when general outlines and weak spots of a fortress must be disclosed as soon as a serious attack is launched against it in time of war.

A visit to the battered and shell-rent forts of Liege, under the guidance of German artillery and engineer officers now engaged in restoring the Belgian fortress, indicates one reason at least for this mystery. This is to prevent the enemy from learning in advance the location of the gun turrets. Liege proved that these turrets, despite the heaviest armor and many feet of cement wall protection, are vulnerable to modern artillery once their exact location is established.

Great Devastation Is Seen.

Each fort visited showed scenes of titanic devastation and destruction. Great, gaping holes were opened in the earth wherever the shells from the big siege mortars landed. Debris of stone and cement fragments littered the surface within the forts' inclosure to a depth of a foot or more, the cement walls of the revolving gun turrets were battered, cracked and smashed, and their armor-plate roofs showed great dents where shells had landed, but with few exceptions the turrets were still intact, despite the heavy bombardment. The guns were put out of action not by shells penetrating the turrets, but because the turrets themselves jammed on the side opposite the trenches, making the aiming of the cannon impossible.

The German shells, even those of the dreaded 16½-inch "surprise" mortar, had bounded off the armored roofs, leaving deep marks and splashes where they had exploded, but without penetrating, but those striking the concrete casing had cracked off fragments which filled up the space between turret and casing, effectively jamming the turning machinery.

German artillery experts declare that the gun turrets in German fortresses have the same general construction and the same weakness, but point out that in case of attack much time would be spent in locating the turrets, for which hidden positions are skillfully chosen. At Liege the forts were located on the summit of ridges with the gun positions in plain view for miles, so that the German artillery, even without the assistance of their maps of the fortresses, could drop their shells upon the turrets as upon the bull's eye of a gigantic target.

Bad Defects Are Noted.

The German experts pointed out as another serious defect the absence of observation posts from which the fire of the forts could be directed and controlled. In each forth was a species of conning towers, serving also as searchlight turrets, but so low-lying as to be useless in directing the fire.

The forts themselves, in the opinion of the German officers, were well laid out and well designed for forts of their age—24 to 26 years—but the Belgians since then had done little to keep them up to date. Only of late had they awakened to the necessity of modernizing the forts by putting in a better system of fire control, more telephones, etc., and had placed orders with German firms for the necessary electric wiring and for additional cannon. These are now being installed by the Germans with the aid of the original fortress plans captured when Liege fell.

SHARON, Pa., Oct. 3.—The stimulating effect of the European war on local industries has already made itself felt. Running for several months at full capacity, the Driggs-Searbury Ordnance Co., which for the past two years has been manufacturing automobile frames and bodies, today received an order, said to be from the French Government, for 2500 auto frames, to be delivered within the shortest possible time.

The specification which accompanied the order called for a strong steel frame of light weight. All of the machines are to be of one type, thereby facilitating their quick delivery.

Officials of the company, when asked for the full details of the order, demurred, saying that for the present they had been requested to say nothing about it.

Turkey Closes the Foreign Postoffices, Raises Duties

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Constantinople says:

"In view of the abolition of the capitulations, the foreign postoffices were closed Thursday. Import duties on foreign products have been raised from 11 to 15 per cent advalorem. Egyptian's exports pay 12 per cent.

An income tax is being applied to foreign subjects, but foreigners' judicial proceedings amongst themselves continues to be amenable to the Consuls' Courts."

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.

TWO wounded soldiers, a Russian and a German, each a school teacher in his own country, were brought here from Warsaw in a hospital train yesterday. They were unconscious when picked up side by side on the battlefield, near Tomadoff, Russian Poland.

The Russian regained consciousness in a field ambulance, which carried him and the German back from the firing line. He recognized the seemingly dying man beside him as the German infantryman with whom he had engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle. The Russian remembered, too, that at the moment when he felled his advarsary with a sword thrust, a bullet fired by another German soldier had hit him.

Moved by pity for the man he had wounded, the Russian addressed the German, expressing regret. At first the German made no reply, but the Russian persisted in his friendly overtures, and at length the German yielded. They began to talk about what they had been before the war took them away from their homes.

"I was a school teacher," said the German.

"That's strange," remarked the Russian. "I was a school teacher, too."

The German recalled that he had been in towns in Russia's Baltic provinces. The Russian said he also had visited these places. The two were like friends by the time the ambulance had transferred them to the train. In the hospital they occupy adjoining beds.

"War is war," said the German, speaking excellent Russion, "but I never dreamed that the Russians were such nice, generous people. I cannot help loving them now after the kind treatment I have received at their hands. We are fighting with them in vain."

Men and Woman Found Robbing Soldiers' Bodies on Field

BORDEAUX, Oct. 3.—A convoy of German prisoners has arrived here from Issoudun. Their uniforms were in rags and their boots were full of holes. They had no hats or caps. The prisoners included five infantry officers.

Behind them, chained together, marched slowly eight men and a woman. They were surrounded by gendarmes with loaded rifles. These persons had been caught rifling the pockets of dead soldiers on the battlefield. Six of the men were Prussians and the woman a Bavarian.

When they were searched, it was found that one woman had rings on her toes and a long gold necklace was rolled around her body.

Two of the men had their pockets full of gold and French and German decorations. The entire party will be tried by courtmartial.

Von Voights-Rhetz Is New German Quartermaster-General

Germany Tried to Bind Britain to Neutrality

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Addressing a recruiting meeting at Cardiff last night, Premier Asquith said:

"In a communication to the German Government in 1912 regarding her future policy, Great Britain declared she would neither make nor join in any unprovoked attack on Germany. But that was not enough for German statesmanship. Germany wanted us to go further and pledge ourselves to absolute neutrality in the event of Germany being engaged in war. To that demand there was but one answer, and that was the answer which the Government gave."

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 3.—The thirty-third list of killed has just been issued by the German authorities, and it is a formidable one. There is no mention of wounded as the list appears in the Berliner Tageblatt.

Only the names of the regiments ar given, and the number of officers and men killed, but the list occupies about four columns. One regiment alone is recorded as having lost 400 killed, presumably in one action.

RUSSIANS' 'PUSH' SURPRISES BERLIN MILITARY LEADERS

Czar's Forces Were Expected to Await Attack, but They Began Aggressive Campaign.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN Sept. 14.—Now that the Germans have succeeded in clearing East Prussia of the Russians, German army officers are giving their views as to the fighting qualities of the Russian Emperor's soldiers and officers.

This East Prussia campaign, it may be remarked, is the most remarkable on record for the number of prisoners taken in so short a time and in field fighting. In less than three weeks, according to official statements, Gen. von Hindenburg made prisoners of nearly 150,000 Russians.

The first surprise the Russians gave the German military leaders was the aggressive way in which they pushed this campaign. It had been supposed in military quarters here that they would occupy strong defensive positions behind the Vistula and other streams and await the attack of the Germans and Austrians. Instead, however, they pushed into East Prussia in great numbers at a very early stage of the war, and they are still moving forward in Galicia.

From this fact it is inferred here that Russia's mobilization was very far advanced and other preparations for war begun long before the St. Petersburg Government admitted that even one soldier had been called to the colors.

Russian Tactics Modernized.

The next surprise was that the Russian generals no longer send their troops into battle in close formation, as in previous wars, but have modernized their tactics and try to utilize all the advantages of the ground.

The shooting of the infantry, however, was found to be still very ineffective. This is no wonder, if prisoners told the truth in saying that they had had no target practice whatever and had only used their rifles shooting with blank cartridges in maneuvers.

With the field artillery the case is quite different. Its firing is remarkably good. The accurate Russian gunnery was considerably neutralized, however, by the large proportion of shells which failed to explode, a fact which soon found a legendary explanation in the report that many shells contained sand instead of explosives. Artillery experts find a more probable explanation in the marshy nature of the terrain in many places along the Russian frontier, the shells burying themselves in the soft earth without exploding.

Growth of War Rumors.

This origin and development of rumors of the enemy's defects has been an interesting study of war. A report, for instance, that French prisoners had been captured wearing patent leather shoes would appear in some local paper. It would be taken up, tossed from newspaper to soldiers and from soldiers back to newspapers, until in a few days the entire French army was marching into battle in dancing pumps.

The Cossacks have again proved that they are of little value, according to German officers, either for reconnaissance work or in fighting. On the other hand, the German officers speak much more favorably of the regular Russian cavalry.

The conduct of the troops in the invasion of East Prussia, when in large units, appears to have been in general excellent. They appear to have respected private property and paid for supplies requisitioned, even if payment was only in Russian script. Small detachments, on the contrary, seemed to have looted and burned.

Captured General Wept.

The Russian officers have by no means impressed the German military men favorably. In many cases it was remarked that they failed to grasp the most elementary tactical points in situations on the battlefield. It was also frequently charged in newspaper accounts and letters from soldiers and officers, that many Russian officers lacked courage.

It is pointed out that among the 92,000 prisoners taken in the great battle near Allenstein—the Germans call it the battle of Tannenberg—hardly a third of the normal quota of officers was found among the prisoners. The 17 Generals captured in this battle were quite broken in spirit, and one wept like a child. The higher officers are much too old for their work, according to views prevailing in the German officers' corps.

JAPAN TELLS CHINA RAILROAD SEIZURE IS JUSTIFIABLE

PEKING, Oct. 4.—Japan's reply to China's protest against the Japanese occupation of the railway line from Tsingtau to Tsinan was delivered today.

Japan says in effect that it is planning the complete destruction of the German base at Tsingtau and so is justified in taking possession of the railway which constitutes an inseparable portion of the German leased territory in China.

In the first place the Japanese argument says the railway is German-owned, directly controlled by the German Government, based on an imperial charter and has the character of a public property.

In the second place the railway cannot be regarded as neutral property and Japan's seizure of it does not constitute a violation of China's neutrality. The Chinese proclamation defining the limitations of the war zone does not alter the status of the railway.

Thirdly, it is stated that the Chinese Government insists that there has been no connection between Tsingtau and the railway since the Japanese invested Tsintau and so Germany is unable to utilise the road, but from a Japanese military standpoint it would be dangerous to leave a section of the railway in the rear of the Japanese forces, in the hands of the enemy. Indeed, it would be strategically impossible.

The argument concludes with the assertion that instances are not lacking to prove that the Chinese Government is unable to restain the Germans from utilizing the railway for war-like preparations and operations.

American Is Trying to Obtain Food in London for Brussels

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Millard Shaler, an American residing in Brussels, is in London endeavoring to arrange for a food supply for Brussels. England has placed an embargo on the exportation of food to any country during the war, but it would probably furnish food for Belgians if satisfactory guarantees were given that the supplies would reach Belgians.

The food must go by way of Holland and through German territory to a point near Liege, whence motor trucks could carry it to Brussels. Salt, flour and rice are the three staples especially required immediately.

A visit to the battered and shell-rent forts of Liege, under the guidance of German artillery and engineer officers now engaged in restoring the Belgian fortress, indicates one reason at least for this mystery. This is to prevent the enemy from learning in advance the location of the gun turrets. Liege proved that these turrets, despite the heaviest armor and many feet of cement wall protection, are vulnerable to modern artillery once their exact location is established.

Great Devastation Is Seen.

Each fort visited showed scenes of titanic devastation and destruction. Great, gaping holes were opened in the earth wherever the shells from the big siege mortars landed. Debris of stone and cement fragments littered the surface within the forts' inclosure to a depth of a foot or more, the cement walls of the revolving gun turrets were battered, cracked and smashed, and their armor-plate roofs showed great dents where shells had landed, but with few exceptions the turrets were still intact, despite the heavy bombardment. The guns were put out of action not by shells penetrating the turrets, but because the turrets themselves jammed on the side opposite the trenches, making the aiming of the cannon impossible

The German shells, even those of the dreaded 16½-inch "surprise" mortar, had bounded off the armored roofs, leaving deep marks and splashes where they had exploded, but without penetrating, but those striking the concrete casing had cracked off fragments which filled up the space between turret and casing, effectively jamming the turning machinery.

German artillery experts declare that the gun turrets in German fortresses have the same general construction and the same weakness, but point out that in case of attack much time would be spent in locating the turrets, for which hidden positions are skillfully chosen. At Liege the forts were located on the summit of ridges with the gun positions in plain view for miles, so that the German artillery, even without the assistance of their maps of the fortresses, could drop their shells upon the turrets as upon the bull's eye of a gigantic target

Bad Defects Are Noted.

The German experts pointed out as another serious defect the absence of observation posts from which the fire of the forts could be directed and controlled. In each forth was a species of conning towers, serving also as searchlight turrets, but so low-lying as to be useless in directing the fire.

The forts themselves, in the opinion of the German officers, were well laid out and well designed for forts of their age—24 to 26 years—but the Belgians since then had done little to keep them up to date. Only of late had they awakened to the necessity of modernizing the forts by putting in a better system of fire control, more telephones, etc., and had placed orders with German firms for the necessary electric wiring and for additional cannon. These are now being installed by the Germans with the aid of the original fortress plans captured when Liege fell.

SHARON, Pa., Oct. 3.—The stimulating effect of the European war on local industries has already made itself felt. Running for several months at full capacity, the Driggs-Searbury Ordnance Co., which for the past two years has been manufacturing automobile frames and bodies, today received an order, said to be from the French Government, for 2500 auto frames, to be delivered within the shortest possible time.

The specification which accompanied the order called for a strong steel frame of light weight. All of the machines are to be of one type, thereby facilitating their quick delivery.

Officials of the company, when asked for the full details of the order, demurred, saying that for the present they had been requested to say nothing about it.

Turkey Closes the Foreign Postoffices, Raises Duties

LONDON, Oct. 3.—A dispatch to Reuter's Telegram Co. from Constantinople says:

"In view of the abolition of the capitulations, the foreign postoffices were closed Thursday. Import duties on foreign products have been raised from 11 to 15 per cent advalorem. Egyptian's exports pay 12 per cent.

An income tax is being applied to foreign subjects, but foreigners' judicial proceedings amongst themselves continues to be amenable to the Consuls' Courts."

PETROGRAD, Oct. 3.

TWO wounded soldiers, a Russian and a German, each a school teacher in his own country, were brought here from Warsaw in a hospital train yesterday. They were unconscious when picked up side by side on the battlefield, near Tomadoff, Russian Poland.

The Russian regained consciousness in a field ambulance, which carried him and the German back from the firing line. He recognized the seemingly dying man beside him as the German infantryman with whom he had engaged in a hand-to-hand struggle. The Russian remembered, too, that at the moment when he felled his advarsary with a sword thrust, a bullet fired by another German soldier had hit him.

Moved by pity for the man he had wounded, the Russian addressed the German, expressing regret. At first the German made no reply, but the Russian persisted in his friendly overtures, and at length the German yielded. They began to talk about what they had been before the war took them away from their homes.

"I was a school teacher," said the German.

"That's strange," remarked the Russian. "I was a school teacher, too."

The German recalled that he had been in towns in Russia's Baltic provinces. The Russian said he also had visited these places. The two were like friends by the time the ambulance had transferred them to the train. In the hospital they occupy adjoining beds.

"War is war," said the German, speaking excellent Russion, "but I never dreamed that the Russians were such nice, generous people. I cannot help loving them now after the kind treatment I have received at their hands. We are fighting with them in vain."

Men and Woman Found Robbing Soldiers' Bodies on Field

BORDEAUX, Oct. 3.—A convoy of German prisoners has arrived here from Issoudun. Their uniforms were in rags and their boots were full of holes. They had no hats or caps. The prisoners included five infantry officers.

Behind them, chained together, marched slowly eight men and a woman They were surrounded by gendarmes with loaded rifles. These persons had been caught rifling the pockets of dead soldiers on the battlefield. Six of the men were Prussians and the woman a Bavarian.

When they were searched, it was found that one woman had rings on her toes and a long gold necklace was rolled around her body.

Two of the men had their pockets full of gold and French and German decorations. The entire party will be tried by courtmartial.

Germany Tried to Bind Britain to Neutrality

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Addressing a recruiting meeting at Cardiff last night, Premier Asquith said:

"In a communication to the German Government in 1912 regarding her future policy, Great Britain declared she would neither make nor join in any unprovoked attack on Germany. But that was not enough for German statesmanship. Germany wanted us to go further and pledge ourselves to absolute neutrality in the event of Germany being engaged in war. To that demand there was but one answer, and that was the answer which the Government gave."

ROTTERDAM, Oct. 3.—The thirty-third list of killed has just been issued by the German authorities, and it is a formidable one. There is no mention of wounded as the list appears in the Berliner Tageblatt.

Only the names of the regiments ar given, and the number of officers and men killed, but the list occupies about four columns. One regiment alone is recorded as having lost 400 killed, presumably in one action.

RUSSIANS' 'PUSH' SURPRISES BERLIN MILITARY LEADERS

Czar's Forces Were Expected to Await Attack, but They Began Aggressive Campaign.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

BERLIN Sept. 14.—Now that the Germans have succeeded in clearing East Prussia of the Russians, German army officers are giving their views as to the fighting qualities of the Russian Emperor's soldiers and officers.

This East Prussia campaign, it may be remarked, is the most remarkable on record for the number of prisoners taken in so short a time and in field fighting. In less than three weeks, according to official statements, Gen. von Hindenburg made prisoners of nearly 150,000 Russians.

The first surprise the Russians gave the German military leaders was the aggressive way in which they pushed this campaign. It had been supposed in military quarters here that they would occupy strong defensive positions behind the Vistula and other streams and await the attack of the Germans and Austrians. Instead, however, they pushed into East Prussia in great numbers at a very early stage of the war, and they are still moving forward in Galicia.

From this fact it is inferred here that Russia's mobilization was very far advanced and other preparations for war begun long before the St. Petersburg Government admitted that even one soldier had been called to the colors.

Russian Tactics Modernized.

The next surprise was that the Russian generals no longer send their troops into battle in close formation, as in previous wars, but have modernized their tactics and try to utilize all the advantages of the ground.

The shooting of the infantry, however, was found to be still very ineffective. This is no wonder, if prisoners told the truth in saying that they had had no target practice whatever and had only used their rifles shooting with blank cartridges in maneuvers.

With the field artillery the case is quite different. Its firing is remarkably good. The accurate Russian gunnery was considerably neutralized, however, by the large proportion of shells which failed to explode, a fact which soon found a legendary explanation in the report that many shells contained sand instead of explosives. Artillery experts find a more probable explanation in the marshy nature of the terrain in many places along the Russian frontier, the shells burying themselves in the soft earth without exploding.

This origin and development of rumors of the enemy's defects has been an interesting study of war. A report, for instance, that French prisoners had been captured wearing patent leather shoes would appear in some local paper. It would be taken up, tossed from newspaper to soldiers and from soldiers back to newspapers, until in a few days the entire French army was marching into battle in dancing pumps.

The Cossacks have again proved that they are of little value, according to German officers, either for reconnaissance work or in fighting. On the other hand, the German officers speak much more favorably of the regular Russian cavalry.

The conduct of the troops in the invasion of East Prussia, when in large units, appears to have been in general excellent. They appear to have respected private property and paid for supplies requisitioned, even if payment was only in Russian script. Small detachments, on the contrary, seemed to have looted and burned.

Captured General Wept.

The Russian officers have by no means impressed the German military men favorably. In many cases it was remarked that they failed to grasp the most elementary tactical points in situations on the battlefield. It was also frequently charged in newspaper accounts and letters from soldiers and officers, that many Russian officers lacked courage.

It is pointed out that among the 92,000 prisoners taken in the great battle near Allenstein—the Germans call it the battle of Tannenberg—hardly a third of the normal quota of officers was found among the prisoners. The 17 Generals captured in this battle were quite broken in spirit, and one wept like a child. The higher officers are much too old for their work, according to views prevailing in the German officers' corps.

JAPAN TELLS CHINA RAILROAD SEIZURE IS JUSTIFIABLE

PEKING, Oct. 4.—Japan's reply to China's protest against the Japanese occupation of the railway line from Tsingtau to Tsinan was delivered today.

Japan says in effect that it is planning the complete destruction of the German base at Tsingtau and so is justified in taking possession of the railway which constitutes an inseparable portion of the German leased territory in China.

In the first place the Japanese argument says the railway is German-owned, directly controlled by the German Government, based on an imperial charter and has the character of a public property.

In the second place the railway cannot be regarded as neutral property and Japan's seizure of it does not constitute a violation of China's neutrality. The Chinese proclamation defining the limitations of the war zone does not alter the status of the railway.

Thirdly, it is stated that the Chinese Government insists that there has been no connection between Tsingtau and the railway since the Japanese invested Tsintau and so Germany is unable to utilize the road, but from a Japanese military standpoint it would be dangerous to leave a section of the railway in the rear of the Japanese forces, in the hands of the enemy. Indeed, it would be strategically impossible.

The argument concludes with the assertion that instances are not lacking to prove that the Chinese Government is unable to restain the Germans from utilizing the railway for war-like preparations and operations.

American Is Trying to Obtain Food in London for Brussels

LONDON, Oct. 3.—Millard Shaler, an American residing in Brussels, is in London endeavoring to arrange for a food supply for Brussels. England has placed an embargo on the exportation of food to any country during the war, but it would probably furnish food for Belgians if satisfactory guarantees were given that the supplies would reach Belgians.

The food must go by way of Holland and through German territory to a point near Liege, whence motor trucks could carry it to Brussels. Salt, flour and rice are the three staples especially required immediately.

CAMPBELL LEFT NO CHILDREN, SUIT TO BREAK WILL SAYS

Nephews and Nieces Assert Late Millionaire's Testament Is Invalid Because Additions Were Made After It Had Been Witnessed—Undue Influence in Bequest to St. Louis University Also Alleged.

The suit filed yesterday to break the will of James Campbell, late St. Louis multi-millionaire and public utilities magnate, reveals that colateral heirs hope to profit by proving that Campbell left no child or children, and that his will was made when he was subject to undue influences. The plaintiffs are heirs of John P. Campbell, deceased brother of James Campbell, chief of whom is Mrs. William H. Harrison, a Cincinnati woman.

It was a matter of common knowledge that there was no social intercourse between James Campbell and his Cincinnati relatives.

In a statement given out by the Mercantile Trust Co., executors of the will, is a declaration that the defendants have prepared documentary evidence to show that Mrs. Elzy G. Burkham, who, until Sept. 15 was Miss Lois Campbell, is the daughter of James Campbell, as he declared in the will. Among these documents are the marriage certificate of Mr. and Mrs. James Campbell and birth and baptismal records from New York declaring Lois their daughter. The executors declare that they submitted these evidences to former attorneys for the contestants when they first learned such a suit was contemplated.

Importance of Parentage.

The importance of establishing Mrs. Burkham's parentage is apparent under the Missouri law. If it could be shown that the will was made through undue influence and it should be set aside, no co-lateral heirs would profit so long as Campbell had a lineal heir. In that case his entire fortune would go to his child, except for the widow's dower third.

The widow might elect, instead of her dower, to take a child's share. That is to say, if Mrs. Lois Burkham is shown to be a direct heir of James Campbell, his $16,000,000 property might be divided equally between her and her mother, if the will were shown to be invalid, and other relatives would get none of it.

If, however, it can be shown that Mrs. Burkham was not James Campbell's daughter, and the will set aside, the widow could still claim her dower share, but the rest of the property would revert to the co-lateral heirs, among whom are the plaintiffs.

Campbell's will left the wife and daughter what amounts to a life interest in his estate. Upon their death, except for incidental bequests to any children Mrs. Burkham may have, the vast property will go to St. Louis University.

In support of the allegation necessary to every will contest—that the will was procured by undue influence—the petitioners charge that Campbell was in feeble health when he made the testament, and that "by reason of incidents in his business and social life and his fear of death and future punishment," he was imposed upon and influenced to leave his fortune ultimately to the University, a Catholic institution.

The validity of the will is further attacked on the ground that alterations in the text of the will were made after it had been signed and in the absence of the witnesses whose signatures are affixed to the document.

L. Frank Ottofy, attorney for the petitioners, announced that he will soon ask the Probate Court to appoint an administrator pen dente lite. If this were ordered, the property would be taken out of the hands of the Mercantile Trust Co. and handled, until the suit is settled, by an administrator appointed by the court. This administrator would receive as his fee 5 per cent of all disbursements made under his administration.

Five Are Plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs of record in the suit are Mrs. Harrison, Mamie C. Spargo, James G. Campbell, Archie W. Campbell and Genevieve Baker, nephews and nieces of James Campbell. Mrs. James Campbell, Mrs. Burkham, St. Louis University, the Mercantile Trust Co. are named as defendants.

Campbell died June 12 last. The will was dated Dec. 19, 1913. The plaintiffs' charge that officers, employes and clergymen connected with the university convinced Campbell that the salvation of his soul depended upon the dedication of his fortune to religious and charitable purposes.

Nowhere does the petition expressly deny that Mrs. Burkham was James Campbell's daughter. It contents itself with the allegation that he died intestate and left no child or children.

Mrs. Campbell told a Post-Dispatch reporter that she had understood some such suit was being talked of. She said she couldn't unerstand the motives of those back of the action and declared there was no truth, "as everybody knows," in the allegations.

She referred all other matters of discussion to her personal attorney, Morton Jourdan. Mr. Jourdan pointed to a typewritten statement prepared by W. F. Carter, vice-president of the Mercantile Trust Co., and declared he unequivocally indorsed it.

Trust Company Statement.

The statement follows:

"Some time ago we learned of a proposed contest of the Campbell will. Upon ascertaining the grounds of said contest this company made a complete and thorough examination as to the facts, and while it has been the universal custom of the Mercantile Trust Co. not to discuss its affairs or litigation in the courts, it is due Mrs. Campbell and Lois, and the memory of Mr. Campbell, that this statement be made.

"The contestants charge the will is void, first, because it was not executed according to the law and in the presence of subscribing witnesses. Proof, upon the probating of the will in the Probate Court, showed conclusively that this was not true; that the will was executed in legal form as required by the statute.

"The second charge is that Mr. Campbell died without leaving child or heir, thus, in effect, charging that Lois was not the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell. No question is raised as to the marriage, that being an admitted fact by the contestants. In addition to the overwhelming oral proof that this statement is absolutely false and untrue, we sent to New York and have secured not only certified copies of the birth record showing her birth in New York on March 17, 1893, but a certified copy of the baptismal record showing her baptism by Archbishop Corrigan at St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York, on March 24, 1893.

"A certified copy of the marriage record shows the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell in New York City long prior thereto. These certified copies of the records were submitted to the contestants' former attorneys prior to the institution of the suit. The reason it is alleged that Lois is not Mr. Campbell's daughter is that under the laws of descent and distribution, whether Mr Campbell left a valid will or not, she (being his daughter) and her mother would take the entire estate. Consequently, the plaintiffs in this suit would have no interest whatever unless they charged other irregularities.

The third charge is that on Dec. 19, 1913, the date on which Mr. Campbell executed the will, he was of feeble mind and was influenced by his fear of death by the Jesuit priests and induced and over-influenced to make the will and to devise the property finally to that institution.

"To the citizens of St. Louis who knew Mr. Campbell, this allegation is as ridiculous as it is absurd. In December, 1913, he was in excellent health; he died in June, 1914, after a short illness of some weeks, due to a carbuncle and blood poisoning. After the execution of the will, Mr. Campbell put through in New York two of the most gigantic financial deals and transactions of his active financial life.

"To say that Mr. Campbell was influenced by anybody or set of persons is not to have known him, and it is due his memory and to the wife and daughter that the public at this time be asked to suspend opinion upon this statement of facts until the matter can be investigated and determined in the courts.

"While this proceeding is to be regretted, it is now sufficient to say that it will be contested by Mrs. Campbell and the daughter, who have already retained counsel, to the fullest extent under the law. No question of compromise, settlement or adjustment, will be considered."

In his will Campbell left his entire fortune in trust with the Mercantile Trust Co. which was empowered to manage it. He provided that one half the net income should be paid to Mrs. Campbell and so much of the remaining half as might be designated by Mrs. Campbell should be paid to Lois Campbell. In event of the death of the mother or daughter, the survivor was to have the entire net income.

If the daughter should die leaving a child, or children, $1,000,000 was to be set aside for them and the income of this should be paid to them during their minority and until 21 years after they had reached their majority. At the end of that time the estate was to go to St. Louis University, to be used for hospital and medical school purposes.

There was a provision that if Mrs. Campbell were to attempt to set aside the will, all bequests to the daughter, Lois, should be regarded as inoperative and the daughter should be cut off with a legacy of $1. She has filed her acceptance of the will.

In front of a great many of the stores the merchants had booths containing displays of articles for sale. Nearly all of them were in charge of young women. A carnival spirit prevailed with the crowd, and confetti and many kinds of noise producers were much in evidence. The merchants along Broadway have contributed 1000 prizes to be given away during the carnival. Another feature of the carnival will be a voting

RESIGNATION OF CARRANZA BEFORE SOUTHERN CHIEFS

Question of Accepting His Proposal to Quit as Head of Constitutionalists Debated Hotly Until Late Hour Last Night in Conference.

NO VOTE IS TAKEN; MEETING IN TURMOIL

MEXICO CITY, Oct. 3.—Gen. Venustiano Carranza placed his resignation as first chief of the Constitutionalists before the delegates to the general conference of Southern chiefs shortly before 8 o'clock tonight.

From that time until a late hour tonight the question of whether the resignation should be accepted was fiercely debated with no immediate prospect of a vote.

Orators opposed to the acceptance of Gen. Carranza's withdrawal were repeatedly cheered by delegates and spectators.

A motion was made that the first chief be informed that it would be impossible to accept his patriotic act of abnegation, but the hours passed without a vote being taken on the motion owing to the turmoil in the chamber.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Advices to the State Department today further assured administration officials that a peaceful settlement of Mexico's latest difficulties would result from the Aguascalientes conference, to convene Oct. 5.

Consul Silliman, personal representative of President Wilson, telegraphed from Mexico City that the situation there was much improved. The conference of Generals now in session at the Mexican capital, he said, would adjourn to hold open caucus with representatives of Gen. Villa at Aguascalientes beginning Oct. 5.

NACO, Sonora, Mex., Oct. 3.—Gov. Maytorena, supporter of Gen. Villa, attacked the Carranza troops under Gen. Benjamin Gil shortly before 4 o'clock today. The attack was launched on the front and the western side of the town. American troops patrolled the border line.

Maytorena's troops advanced from all sides earlier in the afternoon. Sixty thousand cartridges and two more machine guns were received today by Gen. Gil from the American side for the defending garrison.

The American commander has been instructed not to permit Mexican wounded to be taken across the boundary. American surgeons, however, if needed, will treat wounded on Mexican soil.

A report reached here today that Gen. Domingo Arrieta defeated Gen. Urbina in Durango, and that Urbina and many of his men were wounded and carried to Torreon. Gen. Arieta is a Carranza supporter.

LOOT, DIRT, GRAFT NOW REIGN IN THE MEXICAN CAPITAL

By ROBERT H. MURRAY.

Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.—Special Correspondence.

VERA CRUZ, Sept. 24.—One returns from Mexico City saddened by the changes which revolution has produced in the life and appearance of that beautiful capital.

To one who has known the city in better days and grown to love it, the capital in its present aspect suggests those fair, unfortunate belles, dames of the French aristocracy in the Reign of Terror, stripped of their silks and satins, disheveled, smudged with mud hurled at them by the sans culottes as they jolted over the cobbles in tumbrels to the guillotine, but proud, haughty, scornful-eyed and still beautiful despite their stress and misery.

Mexico City, fallen upon evil days, is still the lady. Bedraggled but beautiful, she queens it yet, with her attendant bodyguard of snow capped volcanoes and forest-clad mountains standing watch and ward in solemn state while the city and the cowed, spiritless people patiently wait for better times. Only the wonderful climate of the tableland which the capital dominates and the constant sun, which warms and makes radiant the entrancing Valley of Mexico almost every day in the year, are unchanged.

Looting Confined to Officers.

Up to the present the city has not been given over to sack. Already the soldiery which streamed after Carranza into the city are grumbling because the three days pillage which they say was promised them for their support of the cause has been withheld. None of the treasures of the rich capital, money, jewels, sumptuous apparel, unstinted liquor, pretty women, in which they revelled in anticipation, as they fought starved, thirsty, in the northern desert country, has been permitted the common soldiery.

The jefes—colonels, majors, captains, lieutenants—are looting and taking to their hearts' content. There is not even the consolation of drunkenness allowed the private for all the cantinas and pulque shops have been closed, a strict embargo has been placed upon the sale of intoxicants in bottles and unofficial looting by the privates has been stopped by the summary execution of soldiers caught pilfering.

The Constitutionalist authorities thus far have kept excellent order in the capital. One may move about without fear of molestation, day or night, unless he is a Mexican and suspected of affiliation in former times with Diaz or Huerta, or possesses a house, automobile or other property Diaz or Huerta, or possesses a house, automobiles or other property which some Constitutionalist jefe covets.

But the city in its outer aspects presents ample evidence of governmental slackness, of almost complete paralysis of executive functions.

Processions of Stolen Autos.

The pavements, excepting along the Pasco de la Reforma, Avenida Juarez, Avenida San Francisco and a few other principal thoroughfares, have not been cleaned for weeks. They are littered with an unimaginable accumulation of filth. This, coupled with the collapse of activities of the departments of health and public hygiene, would long before this have bred epidemics were it not for the rains and the prophylactic energy of a daily shining sun.

Gone are the old-time gay processions of motors and carriages and sauntering pedestrians in Chapultepec and along Avenida San Francisco in the afternoons and early evenings. The processions are still there. But they are different. What few of the aristocracy and members of wealthy Mexican families have not fled the city are prudently and sedulously secluding themselves.

Their carriages and motors are in line during the driving hour, but their occupants bear little resemblance to those who formerly belonged in them. Lolling on the cushions of English victorias and French limousines are revolutionary jefes of all ranks, unclean, unshaven, with dirty boots, greasy uniforms—men, some of them, who less that a year ago were lucky if they could command a burro over which to throw a leg. And with them are women tricked out in the gaudiest of the contents of the closets of the wives and daughters of the fled aristocracy.

Around and around the park, and up and down San Francisco avenue they career, as grotesque a procession as can be imagined. In their progress about the city, in their stolen motors, the Constitutionalists drive like Jehu, furiously. If a car breaks down or is damaged in a collision it is tossed aside, given away. A motor more or less amounts to nothing to a jefe of the triumphant army. It is a humble and unambitious Carranza officer who has not at least three motors in his garage.

Immediately upon coming to town the army leaders swarmed like locusts upon the real property of the aristocracy, former cientificos, members of the old inner circle of the old Diaz regime, followers and friends of Hurta and Felix Diaz, anyone, in fact, who had a house, motor and anything else which the victors wanted. Carranza quartered himself at first in a second-rate hotel. Pretty soon he transferred himself to Chapultepec Castle, which he now occupies.

Houses, veritable palaces in their spaciousness, sumptuousness and beauty, belonging to Joaquin Casasus, Diaz's former Ambassador to Washington; Enrique Creel, who once filled the same post and is the most hated of the Northern cientificos; Pedro Lascurain, Madero's Minister of Foreign Relations; Don Guillermo de Landay y Escandon, an intimate of Diaz and former Governor of the Federal District; Ramon Corral, Vice-President under Diaz, and to scores of other wealthy men, most of whom have fled the country, were seized and portioned out among Carranza's officers. Not only did they take the houses, but they issued orders upon the representatives here of the absentee owners that they would be obliged to pay for the upkeep, including food and liquors and servant hire.

Huerta Cashed in Property.

Diligent search was set afoot for large numbers of houses which Huerta was said to have purchased with a portion of treasury loot.. Deep curses were heard when investigation showed that the canny Huerta, who had indeed bought much property at his own price, had, before leaving Mexico, sold it all to the Government at inflated figures and collected in cash.

Gen. Obregon, notoriously an American hater, quartered himself in the magnificent residence in the Paseo of Senora Tomas Braniff, widow of an American and herself an American citizen. The senora had fled to Vera Cruz, leaving servants in charge, who did not have the keys to some of the more private apartments. At Obregon's orders soldiers smashed in the doors with the butts of their rifles. Obregon commanded that dinner be prepared. After dining he summoned the servants.

"This dinner was very bad, indeed," he said, "tomorrow see that I am better served, with better food."

"But my General, I have no money," protested the unfortunate majordomo.

Valuable Books Sold.

Casasus, a scholarly man, had a valuable library. His books have been sold at 25 cents each to whoever would buy. In his house and in scores of others officers scarcely above the degree of peon in education and personal refinements are daily served from cut glass and silver, drink vintage wines and rare cognacs, hold nightly orgies with women and their compadres, shoot their revolvers through stained glass windows and paintings, defile rugs, carpets and upholsteries worth thousands of dollars and turn drawing rooms and boudoirs into veritable pigsties. Below stairs, among the servants and bodyguards of these valliant warriors conditions are unspeakable.

One passing the city residence of Jose Yves Limantour, Diaz's Finance Minister, the other day, heard a discordant blare proceeding from the drawing room. Through the open windows he saw and heard one of the ragamuffin bands of the Constitutionalist army practicing.

Widows' Houses Also Taken.

No one's house and property is safe from seizure, if it happens to fall under the eye of a covetous Constitutionalist officer. Even widows of wealth who bear names detested by the Constitutionalist are not spared. The residence of Senora Julio Limantour was taken because her husband, who had been dead for years, was a brother of the former Finance Minister. Senora Martinez dal Campo, whose husband was one of the great lawyers of the country, was compelled to give up her house.

There is a Mexican dying in the capital who has been known to Carranza since he was a child. Caranza has had him on his knees, played with him, been a guest at his father's house. This man is bedridden, dying of consumption. His wife's motor was commandeered, despite a personal protest to Carranza.

Pedro Lascurain, against his will, was induced to accept the foreign ministry portfolio in Madero's last cabinet. That is the only semblance of political activity he has ever given. His affiliation with Madero logically would be presumed to give protection to his property, but his house has been confiscated.

Graft in Captured Dynamite.

Loot—furniture, rugs, books, pictures, jewelry—are being offered for sale at bargain prices. In the Ciudadela an officer has established a sort of clearing house for the vending of loot. Officers in quest of pocket money take articles from the houses where they are quartered and send them to the Ciudadela for sale. Recently an officer sent several furniture vans to the residence of Eduardo Tamariz, who for a time had one of the portfolios in Huerta's cabinet. The house was stripped. When the vans were filled they drove away, where, no one knows.

There is a scarcity of dynamite in the republic, which is a serious obstacle to resumption of work in what few mines can safely be operated. Huerta accumulated in the capital nearly 3000 cases of the explosive. It was believed he intended to blow up the public buildings if the rebels besieged the capital.

This dynamite was sold recently by a Constitutionalist jefe to several mining companies. Two bills were made out, one at which the dynamite was charged at the regular price. So much of the proceeds were turned into the public treasury. But, in addition, under another bill, the companies paid a premium of seven pesos over and above the regular price, which went into the pocket of the jefe.

Every railway station is a fortress, garrisoned heavily, with artillery and machine guns ready for instant use. When an incoming train arrives the exit gates are closed until a gap is left only wide enough for a single person. Two files of filthy soldiers form a lane leading to the gap. At the gate stands an officer. As passengers approach each is halted and searched for arms.

Foreigners are not exempt. Horses are as much in demand by the Constitutionalists as motors. Every livery establishment and scores of private stables have been raided and cleaned out. Even if owenrship of horses is proved by Americans and other foreigners the owners are told to file a claim against the Government.

Recently the favorite riding horse of Paul May, the Belgian Minister, was commandeered. May, who was ardent in his espousal of Huerta's cause, protested to Carranza, who was sympathetic, but the Minister's horse is still missing.

All Business Stagnated.

Business is almost at a standstill. Stocks in rail shops and in most wholesale establishments have been allowed to run down owing to uncertainty of commercial conditions and the possession of the Vera Cruz custom house by the Americans. Scores of shops have closed. Those that remain open are not anxious to sell in return for the depreciated paper currency, which forms the only medium of exchange.

Hard money has vanished almost entirely. Even fractional currency is being hoarded and one seldom receives even a silver dime in change. One man offered a $2 bill in payment for a 25-cent cigar on a recent day. In change he received two Constitutionalist vales for 25 cents and an assortment of other vales, ranging from those issued by restaurants, to street car tickets, but not a centavo in real money, copper or silver.

Millions of pesos are being printed off weekly from the Constitutionalist presses. There is not a centavo back of the paper except the Provisional Government's promise to pay. If the next Constitutionalist Government legalizes them these fiat issues may be worth something in hard money.

HOW TO TEST YOUR EYES

A SIMPLE TEST FOR NORMAL EYESIGHT.

An eye test that costs but five cents and is worth the price aside from the value of the test is a moving picture show. If you can sit through the average program without your eyes aching or feeling dry and tired and without feeling an inclination to open and close them frequently, and if an hour later, or the next morning, your eyes feel perfectly smooth and easy, there is nothing much the matter with them. If, however, after such a program your vision is dim, your eyes feel dry or irritated or burn or itch or ache or feel overworked, try this prescription:

Optona 5 Grains (1 tablet).
Water 2 ounces.

Dissolve the tablet in the 2 ounces of water and use as an eye wash from two to four times a day. This application relieves the tired feeling, seems to lessen the stress or strain and makes your eyes feel smooth and fine. It is a boon after an evening at the moving pictures or after a hard day's work where you have used the eyes incessantly. Irritation, inflammation and many minor eye troubles are greatly benefited and sometimes wholly cured by the use of this prescription. If you wear glasses, try it. You may, to your own surprise, find that you do not need them. Glasses bought at cheap stores without scientific adjustment to the eyes, or glasses worn too long without readjustment, are oftentimes not only absolutely unnecessary, but positively injurious. The use of this prescription may give you a favorable opportunity to judge whether or not you need glasses. It is a simple home remedy that has been used by hundreds of thousands, and among its users many regard it as an indispensable part of their daily toilet.—ADV.

SHURTLEFF TEAM IS CRUSHED BY PIKEWAY MACHINE

Coach Edmunds' Gridders Run Up Another Top-Heavy Score of 62-7.

COACH EDMUNDS' 1914 model Pikeway scoring machine won its second top-heavy victory of the season at Francis Field yesterday afternoon, when the Shurtleff College eleven up Upper Alton, Ill., was defeated 62 to 7.

The visitors' lone tally came in the third quarter when Capt. Moore intercepted a forward pass and, with a clear field before him, ran 45 yards for a touchdown. Moore also kicked the goal.

The Pikers, as a whole, showed a much improved game as compared with their exhibition in the opening contest, especially as regards the offense. Their almost perfect interferen[illegible] was responsible for their man[illegible] gains and the number of f[illegible]ade were few. The forwa[illegible]ever, still seems to be th[illegible]ers' bugaboo. Out of numerou[illegible]es, Edmunds' boys executed but th[illegible] successful passes, while all of Shurtleff's gain, totaling about 100 yards, were made by means of the open game, and by no means a perfect open game at that.

Passes Worry Pikers.

The Alton team, seeing at the outset of the game, that straight football would make but scant headway against the heavier opposing line, early resorted to a passing game, which, in the second period especially, gave the locals a good deal of trouble.

Capt. Potthoff and Milford proved the Pikers' individual stars, each being credited with three touchdowns, and making the majority of Washington's gains by wide end runs and returns of Shurtleff's kicks. Edmunds seems to have found the correct combination in shifting Gray behind the line, as the big boy hit Shurtleff's line with a vengeance while Martin made himself noticeable at his new tackle job. The coach's successful substitutions of Hetlage, Davis, Coleman, Hewitt and Martin, in the backfield also goes to show that he has more than an eleven man "varsity" to send against "Mizou" this year. Capt. Moore proved to be Shurtleff's mainstay, as besides scoring the total of his team's points, his kicking and passing were brilliant.

Lewis Scores First.

Washington's first score came five minutes after the initial kickoff. Shurtleff kicked to Washington and recovered the ball when Berry fumbled. On the next play, however, Lewis caught Shurtleff's forward pass and Washington started down the field. After a series of line plunges Lewis went over from the 4-yard line, but he failed to kick the subsequent goal.

The second touchdown was a repetition of the first, Gray scoring after a cross buck for 10 yards and Lewis making the score 13—0 by kicking the goal. Potthoff scored the third after plunging through the line and getting away for a spectacular run of 40 yards. This brought W. U.'s total up to 20 at the end of the opening quarter.

The Altonians' best showing was made in the second period when they not only held their opponents scoreless but, by means of a passing game, put the ball on Washington's 20-yard mark. Here Moore failed on a try at a field goal and Lewis, by a pretty 45-yard run on a fake kick, put the ball back in Shurtleff territory. But Shurtleff held twice on their 15-yard mark and the score remained unchanged.

Washington worked two perfect passes in the third quarter, one Lewis to Berry for 35 yards, and the other Milford to Berry for 10 yards, resulting in a touchdown, but another attempt resulted disastrously in Shurtleff's score. Milford also scored in this quarter on a line plunge for 25 yards.

The Alton aggregation seemed to lose all their fight at the close of the game, and the Pikers scored their 28 points almost at will. Milford went over twice, once on a beautiful 50-yard return of Moore's punt, while Capt. Potthoff added two more to his total. The first came after breaking through the line for a 60-yard run, and the second followed a perfect pass for 30 yards, Lewis to Meyers. Poge Lewis kicked 8 of the 9 goals, making his record for the season 17 out of 18.

Washington (62)		Shurtleff (7)
Wetzell	Center	Brandle

Missouri Loses to Miners; Field Goals Win Game

Freeman Boots Ball Over the Goal Bar Three Times—Tigers Can't Score.

COLUMBIA, Mo., Oct. 3.—Rolla for once had something up its sleeve and beat Missouri when Freeman kicked three field goals today. The score was Rolla 9, Missouri 0.

Chifeds Bunch Hits in Sixth, Terriers Lose

Davenport Has Five Good Ones, Followed by Two Bad Ones, Score, 5 to 1.

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Fielder Jones' Terriers and Joe Tinker's Chifeds hooked up today in the final game of the season but one, which will be played here tomorrow. Tinker was eager to win and hold his lead at the top of the Federal League. He sent in Hendrix to do the twirling while Jones picked Davenport to oppose the Chicago star. It was a pitchers' battle for six innings. Then Davenport "blew;" final score 5 to 1.

A crowd of 3500 witnessed the contest, although the White Sox and Browns had a double-header in opposition.

GEE WHILLIKENS! MILLIKENS ROUT POOR BILLIKENS!

The God of "Things as They Should Be" Sleeps While St. Louis U. Loses, 13—7.

COLORS ARE CONFUSING

The St. Louis University football eleven, known as the Billikens, unexpectedly met a Tartar when it bucked up against James Milliken College of Decatur, Ill., yesterday afternoon at the St. Louis U. campus and ignominiously went down to defeat, 13 to 7. Yesterday's game was the first on the Billiken schedule and, incidentally, it was the first time that all but two of the gridders had played a game of college football.

The visitors also made their bow of the season yesterday and claimed to have an entirely new team.

The Billikens got off to a bad start and really played poor football in the opening half. It looked a great deal like stage fright. Several times Coach Keogan's charges ran in the wrong direction with the ball and tackled their own men. Interference was entirely absent.

However, they braced up in the second half, after a strong intermission talk administered by the coach and played real football. Milliken failed to even approach the blue and white posts after the second quarter, when they scored both touchdowns.

The locals failed to show a punch in the offense, and if they had it would have been a different story. Time after time they were in scoring distance, but lost opportunities by fumbling or using the wrong playing tactics.

Thomas a Star.

Thomas, quarterback of the team, was the individual light. He was everywhere at the right time. It was his pretty tackling that cut off a number of likely looking long runs. He also scored the single touchdown by receiving a punt in midfield and running through the entire Milliken team to the five-yard mark, from where he bucked line for the remaining distance. He then kicked the subsequent goal after touchdown.

Milliken's first touchdown came in the second period on a series of brilliant line plunges, followed by a 12-yard dash for a score. A few moments later, Devore shook off some six tacklers and ran 18 yards for a touchdown. Captain Hessler then kicked goal.

MISS LAURIE KAISER

MRS. E. LANSING RAY

MRS. LANSING RAY WINS GOLF HONORS FROM MISS KAISER

Favorite in City Championship Final Beaten 4 Up and 3 to Play.

Consistent playing, which has characterized all of her matches in the present tournament, won the women's city golf championship yesterday for Mrs. Lansing Ray of the Bellerive Club, over Miss Laurie Kaiser of Glen Echo, in the final round on the Normandie Golf Club links.

Miss Kaiser was off her game and several of her drives either fell short or were wide. Mrs. Ray, although at times outdone in brilliancy by her opponent, was steady throughout the match. She averaged about the same as in her previous matches during the event.

She made the first nine holes in 46, where she was 3 up on her opponent, who played a 51 for the first half. Mrs. Ray's score for the final six holes was 26, which is only three above par.

Miss Kaiser won the first hole, 5 to 4, after starting with one of her characteristic long drives. On the second, however, she topped her drive and lost the hole. The next was halved and Mrs. Ray won the fourth, seventh and ninth. The fifth, sixth and eighth holes were halved.

Miss Kaiser Wins Applause.

Miss Kaiser saved the third and fifth holes by remarkable putts which brought applause from the large gallery which followed the play. On the former she made an eight-foot putt which halved the hole, and on the fifth she tied Mrs. Ray by holing out with a 15-foot putt. On both the eighth and ninth holes Miss Kaiser drove off the tee into the lake.

In the second half Miss Ray took the tenth and fourteenth holes, and was conceded the twelfth when her opponent drove into a bunker. Miss Kaiser took the eleventh and thirteenth and the fifteenth was halved.

The tournament just closed was the second in which Mrs. Ray has played this season and her coolness during her matches was considered remarkable.

This is Miss Kaiser's second year as a city championship semi-finalist. She was defeated in the finals last year by Miss Grace Semple, who did not compete this year.

Following is the detailed score of the match:

Out—
Mrs. Ray ....5 4 6 5 4 5 5 6 6—46
Miss Kaiser ....4 6 6 7 4 5 6 6 7—51
In—
Mrs. Ray 4 4 4 5 4 5
Miss Kaiser 5 3 5 4 5 5

OTHER RESULTS.

Mrs. T. S. Stephens of the Algonquin Club defeated Miss Ruth Brown, Triple A, 1 up in 19 holes, in the consolation finals. Miss Brown won the first four holes and halved the fifth, but Mrs. Stephens took the next four and tied the match. Mrs. Stephens was 2 up with 2 to play, but her opponent won the next two and forced the match into extra holes.

Mrs. G. E. Sweitzer kept the Class A trophy at Normandie by defeating Miss V. Brown of Triple A 3 up and 2. The match was tied at the thirteenth hole, but Mrs. Sweitzer took the next three. This is Mrs. Sweitzer's first tournament.

Mrs. H. Boeckler of the Country Club won the Class B championship from Mrs. F. R. Ellis of Algonquin, 6 up and 5 to play. The winner was 5 up on the first nine holes, and maintained her lead the rest of the way.

MICHIGAN WIN RECALLS POINT-A-MINUTE DAYS

ANN ARBOR, Mich., Oct. 3.—Bringing back memories of the point-a-minute days, when the Wolverines were in the Western conference the University of Michigan football eleven overwhelmed Case, 69 to 0, today. The visitors had only one chance to score. That came in the second quarter, when Capt. Parshall took the ball on a fake punt and raced 40 yards into Michigan territory before he was downed by Hughitt, the last line of defense.

Yeatman's First Game in 5 Years Results in Rout

North Siders Beaten by Heavier Manual Eleven, 14 to 6, in Snappy Game.

The heavier and more experienced Manual Training School football eleven proved itself superior to the Yeatman High team yesterday morning defeating the North Enders 14—6, on the Manual campus.

Yesterday's game was the first gridiron contest in which Yeatman High has been represented for five years. They were outweighed by the Training School boys eight pounds to the man. In spite of this they put up a plucky fight at all times and gave Coach Thomas' team a hard scrap.

Capt. "Tex" Shanley suffered a broken nose on the first play. He was kicked in the face trying to stop a center line plunge. This will probably keep him out of the game for remainder of the season, which should crimp Yeatman's hopes for a winner.

Alvin Baum, halfback, starred for Manual both on the offense and defense. He scored both touchdowns, besides making a number of brilliant tackles. Cox scored Yeatman's only touchdown by making a 65-yard run through the entire Manual team.

KIRKWOOD ELEVEN EASY FOR FAST SOLDAN TEAM

The Soldan High School football eleven opened its 1914 season by annihilating the Kirkwood High team, 47—0, at Kulage's Park yesterday morning. The county lads were no match for the West Enders owing to their inferior weight. Capt. Swingley, Morrison and Johnson played stellar roles for the local lads, rolling up most of the points. Soldan meets East St. Louis High next Saturday morning. The lineups were as follows:

Soldan.		Kirkwood.

Principia Defeats Alumni, 27—0.

DOUBLE VICTORY ASSURES BROWNS OF FIFTH PLACE

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—A crowd of 6000 witnessed the double-header at Comiskey Park between the Sox and the Browns, today. It was the last bargain attraction of the season and the final game but one for the season.

Sunday's game between the two teams will windup the American League season for both teams. By winning both games today the battle for fifth place and leadership of the second division was decided and the Browns now hav that distinction.

The city championship flag of 1913 celebrating the Sox victory over the Cubs last year was raised before the start of the game and was the means of much rejoicing by the Sox fans.

Benz and Wellman were the opposing pitchers in the first game, but the Browns got to Benz in the seventh inning and knocked him out. He was replaced by Lathrop, who pitched the eighth inning when he in turn was replaced by Jasper, who twirled the final inning. Score: Browns 7, Sox 1.

In the second game Scott was in for the Sox, opposed by Baumgardner. The Browns won and the battle for the leadership of the second division in the American League was settled, St. Louis winning that distinction. The score of the second game was 4 to 0.

WISCONSIN WINS EASILY; PLAYERS WEAR NUMBERS

MADISON, Wis., Oct. 3.—The University of Wisconsin began her gridiron season here today with an easy victory over Lawrence College. The score, 21 to 0, was perhaps not indicative of Wisconsin's full strength, as a dozen substitutes gave the reserves a chance to show their mettle. Fumbles were frequent.

Stavrum and Bellows for Wisconsin and Capt. Tippett for Lawrence were individual stars. The numbering of players was tried here for the first time with general satisfaction to spectators.

GRINER PITCHES HUG'S MEN INTO A $15,000 BONUS

Victory in Second Game of Double-Bill Cinches Third Place—Wilson Out on Unusual Play.

By W. J. O'Connor.

DAN GRINER etched a three-hit, 2—0, victory into his 1914 record yesterday afternoon at the expense of the Cubs and President Schuyler P. Britton of the Cardinals forthwith started on a check-writing Marathon. Schuyler must turn out at least 25 checks, payable to his divers and sundry athletes, the same being the bonus which he promised his men for finishing "one-two-three."

Griner's victory over the Cubs cinched third place for the Cardinals as it is mathematically impossible for Chicago to pass the Cards in the three remaining battles. The victory, according to an official of the Cardinal club, cost Britton between $13,000 to $15,000, as the Cardinal club's payroll runs around $75,000. Some of the second string men will not share in the bonus proposition.

A Dash of Ivory Here.

An unusual play marked the second game, a play that savored of ivory on the part of either Lee Magee or Chief Wilson. It happened in the last half of the eighth inning. Magee was on third and Wilson on second, with two hands down, when Wingo bumped what should have been a triple off the right-field wall.

Magee loafed in from third base while Wilson high-tailed it from second with his head down. Nearing the plate, Wilson passed Magee, who vainly tried to pull the Chief back. The minute Wilson put foot in front of Magee, Umpire Quigley called him out. That retired the side, robbing the Cardinals of two runs.

The fans as well as the occupants of the press box were somewhat confused as all eyes were focused on Wingo, who was thundering into third when the mix-up happened at the plate. However, after the game Umpire Eason explained, as follows:

Quigley's Decision Right.

"Umpire Quigley had no alternative but to call Wilson out as he was the runner who violated the rules although I don't care to say it was entirely his fault. Magee had ample time to score.

"The question is whether to give Wingo a single, double or triple. I want to say here that Wingo didn't touch second base and Zimmerman called my attention to it. Had the ball been thrown to second I would have called Wingo out, giving him only a single. However, that play didn't come up and I believe Wingo should be given only a single inasmuch as Wilson automatically retired before Wingo passed second base. It was the first time I ever saw such a play in the major leagues and the Cards are fortunate it didn't lose the game for them."

The Cards had previously salted the game away. In the third inning Griner walked, moved up on Dolan's out and took third on Hug's single. Magee's double scored Big Dan.

Huggins Steals Home.

In the ninth with one gone, Hug walked. So did Magee. They advanced on Miller's out, Zim to Saier, and then pulled a double steal, Hug scoring while Casey Hagerman was delivering the ball to Hargrave, who had replaced Bresnahan, banished.

The game was essentially a pitching duel betwen George McConnell, a former Yankee, and Griner. The Cubs combed only three hits off Griner, one a triple by Zim. Bresnahan got a clean single while Sweeney scratched an infield hit through Huggins. McConnell pitched a four-hit game for seven innings, retiring in favor of Pinch-hitter Bues in the eighth.

The first game saw Perdue opposed by Jim Lavender and the Gallatin Squash took the count, 4—1. In the eighth the Cards filled the bases with one out, but failed to score. Wilson popped to Zim while Wingo lifted to Schulte. Three double plays nipped Cardinal rallies at different times.

Zim Is Winning Factor.

Zimmerman's double produced a run off Perdue in the first inning while singles by Good and Zimmerman and Schulte's double netted two more in the third. Schulte's walk, a sacrifice, Zim's walk, his dash for third on a sacrifce and a long fly by Derrick brought over the final run in the ninth. Cruise's single scored Wilson with the Cards' only tally.

BRAVES, DECLARED OUTCLASSED, MAY DEFEAT MACKMEN

Athletics Have Great Reputation, but Boston Has Better Than an Outside Chance to Win.

By John E. Wray,
Sporting Editor Post-Dispatch.

OVERSHADOWED by a reputation! That, in brief, seems the situation in which the Boston Braves find themselves today, with reference to the world's series, which opens next Friday at Philadelphia. Fans simply cannot "see" them. Even in Boston, almost riotous from enthusiasm over the National League flag winners, fans refuse to let loose any betting money at odds of less than 2 to 1.

But ARE the Athletics such giants, and the Braves such pygmies by comparison? Have the Braves a chance to capture the title from the "greatest team that ever existed?" Will the heavy artillery of Baker, Collins & Co. batter down Boston's pitching defense? Will the hurling of the Braves' "big three" render impotent the big sticks of the world's champions? Will the untried nerve of the Bostonians falter when the real test comes?

These and many other questions must be answered by fans before they can presume to name a winner of the most interesting world's series since the Cubs of Frank Chance succumbed to the Athletics in 1910. Unfortunately there is not one of the questions that can be answered definitely, and thus the picking of the winner is a mere matter of tossing a coin.

Figures Fail to Answer.

Facts and figures can be marshalled to show this and that conclusion; but history tells us that figures have been swept away inexplicably, when world's series battles are on. Men who are lions during the scheduled season, dwindle away to lambs, on world's series occasions: while out of the ruck of mediocrity frequently flashes some Rohe, to shine a brief moment, win the series, and then fade away into oblivion, like the star of the 1906 games.

Personally, the writer is inclined to give the place of chief importance in all world's series to temperament. Given the right kind of "stuff" in the men, and a fair team is a good bet against a temperamental but brilliant club.

Unfortunately for Boston, this line of reasoning brings up a black outlook for the Braves since the Philadelphia team, admitted on every hand to be the individual superiors of Boston, has shown in three recent world's series tests that it is made of the right stuff—the kind that is there with the punch in the pinch.

Thus in the Athletics we find that to admittedly superior playing talent is linked reliability—a combination hard to beat.

Boston (the class of whose players even now cannot be "seen" by any of the experts of the country), besides being individually inferior, is UNTRIED IN A WORLD'S SERIES.

Thus, to support the Braves, one must back a bunch of inferior players, from a weaker league and untested in the BIG ORDEAL, against proven men of superior ability from a stronger organization.

Braves Have More Solid Ground Than the "Breaks" for Expecting to Win

THIS is no brief for the Athletics—it is a plain statement of facts which cannot be denied and which must be explained, or compensating facts shown, before the Braves can be made to measure up in strength to the Athletics.

Were the guns of the Athletic supporters to be wadded with figures, the Boston club would be shot full of holes. Briefly, every argument, individual and team, wherein figures are concerned, shows the superiority of the Athletics—save only in the matter of pitchers.

But baseball is NOT AN EXACT SCIENCE and figures can never be made absolute, in indicating team strength, especially in one series. Before this we have seen the spectacle of the "greatest team on earth"—the Cubs of 1906—succumbing to a club it outclassed not only individually but in team-hitting and pitching as well, not to mention having set a record, which still stands, by winning 116 games in one season. That was when the White Sox, after a dash of less imposing length and sustained power, finished by winning the world's title from the N. L. team at odds of 2 to 1 against.

Braves a Freak Team.

That instance is one of many to show that baseball idols can fall, and fall hard, when it comes to the supreme test. Yet it is unfair to the Boston team to suggest that its SOLE chance of victory over the Philadelphians depends on the breaks of fortune.

As pointed out in this column before, the Boston team presents a mathematical freak, in that collectively it performs to a higher figure than its individual units average up.

There are indeed many arguments to be urged for the Boston club, some of which lead to the conclusion that THE BRAVES HAVE A GRAND CHANCE TO WIN THE TITLE! Connie Mack Admits it. (Sh-h-h-h! Say it soft or you'll draw a laugh.) The Boston club has the following facts in its favor:

It has three pitchers of top-notch value, able to work in the entire series, even though it should last seven games. Connie Mack has but two reliables, one of whom has been knocked out of the box thrice in his last four outs.

The club came from last place July 4, per centage .394, to first place at the finish, per centage when the pennant was clinched .614 a GAIN OF 220 POINTS in this period.

During this period IT AVERAGED .800 FOR THREE MONTHS, a sustained high average never attained by the Athletics for a similar period. It rounded out its last month by WINNING 24 OF 28 GAMES, PER CENTAGE .857, just to show that its speed was not slipping.

In the three months its steadiness under fire was proven. Three clubs by turns challenged it and each was outgamed by the Braves, when failure meant pennant defeat. THREE TIMES THE BRAVES OUT-PLUCKED THE CARDS AND CUBS, TWICE THEY LOOKED THE GIANTS DOWN, at critical times!

Now, what are you going to do with a club that owns a record for wonderful team performance and equally wonderful steadiness under fire? Throw it out, just because the enemy has a big reputation?

Well, hardly, Bo.

Gameness of the Braves Tested in Gruelling Wind-Up of the N. L. Race

PAST performance indicates that, while the Braves have not been tested in world's series games, the tremendously trying race in the National League, with the many bids for first place made by three rivals, TESTED THE TEAM'S STEADINESS AND PLUCK EVEN MORE THAN THE WORLD'S CHAMPIONSHIP GAMES MIGHT. If there were any mongrel in the club, surely it would have shown in the trying stages of the N. L. finish, supporters justly argue.

As to the team's ability, it requires no great stretch of imagination to believe that, granting the American League is stronger than the National, not even the Athletics could play against the N. L. clubs for three months and achieve better than an .800 average for the period.

Pitching Stands Test.

And as to the pitchers, well—it's guessing to figure how efficient they might be against American League hitting. The best the writer can say is that he took the pains to figure out their average performance against the 20 best hitters of the National League for the past three months, and found that they yielded an average batting percentage of .226, with Tyler best .200, Rudolph next .212, and James last .256. It's a pretty fair record and indicates they will be reliable against the big stickers of the Philadelphians.

The pitching of the Boston team is the one concrete asset that stands out as superior to that of the Mackmen. Some dopesters figure that it will offset the hitting and superior speed of the Mackmen, and it may.

Although a weak-hitting team, being fifth in the National League, the Braves have shown a punch in the pinch, OUTCLASSING THE EFFICIENCY OF THE FAMOUS HITLESS WONDERS OF FIELDER JONES.

Betting Now Is 7 to 5.

It will be seen, therefore, that the Braves are not without arguments of a sound sort, when the nose is poked into the figures. The situation has enough elements of doubt in it to make THE BOOKIES LAY THE MODERATE PRICE OF 7 TO 5 against the Braves.

Three months ago the man who suggested the Braves might win the National League pennant would have been confined in a sanitarium. As late as four weeks ago it was the universal opinion among baseball men of tried judgment that the Boston club LACKED THE INDIVIDUAL CLASS to even win the flag in the weakened National League.

Yet so persistently has the team accomplished things that today it is only a few points out of even money in the betting against the "greatest team ever assembled!"

Explain it IF YOU CAN—it's too much for this Bo!

Cleveland Wins First Battle of Amateur Series

St. Louisans' Errors Cost Them Victory in National Title Game.

CLEVELAND, Oct. 3.—The Telling-Strollers of Cleveland got a flying start towards the final round of the amateur championship of the world by taking the first game of the semifinal series from the Hellrung and Grimm team of St. Louis, 6 to 2.

An eleventh hour change in the Cleveland lineup was made necessary through the fact that Pitcher Saxe and Third Baseman Prosser of the local team refused to play unless they received compensation for their services. The officials of the Cleveland Amateur Baseball Association refused to comply with their demands, and as a result both players were thrown out of the lineup. Bellahoubek, the Tellings' extra pitcher, was pressed into service, and Young replaced Prosser at third.

The game was one of the best seen on a local diamond until the seventh, when the Clevelanders put the game on ice by scoring four runs. The quartet of tallies came after two were out, and were due to a wild throw by Mahener, the Mound City third baseman.

D. Schreiner singled, and both he and Kirby were safe, when Lang failed to tag Kirby on the latter's grounder along the first base line.

All After Two Were Out.

Young sacrificed and Hoffman made a pretty catch of N. Schreiner's foul. Krupitzer then sent a grounder to Mahener, who threw high to first, D. Schreiner scoring. Raus tripled over Goetz's head, scoring Kirby and Young. Raus also scored on a passed ball.

The St. Louis boys scored the first run of the game in the second inning. Hoffman doubled and scored on O. Mueller's single, their other run came in the ninth. Goetz beat out a hit to Kirby, went to second on the shortstop's wild throw, took third on an out, and scored on Jasper's single.

The Tellings also scored in the second, and Mahener's error gave them one in the fifth.

The teams play again tomorrow. Wank and Timmerman will be the probable pitching selections.

Willie Hoppe Defeats Inman In Cue Match

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Willie Hoppe of this city, champion balk line billiard player of the world, won the international combination English and balk line match tonight, beating the world's champion at English billiards, Melbourne Inman of Twickenhan, England, by a total score of 4285 points to 3703.

The match consisted of five 600-point games at the English style and six 500-point sessions of 18.2 balk line. Each man scored 3000 at his own style of play, but Hoppe proved more expert in playing the game that was foreign to him than Inman was at balk line. Hoppe in the five English games scored 1285 points, while Inman made only 703 caroms in six balk line contests.

Each showed during the week here that he was worthy the world's title at his own game. Hoppe on three occasions gave brilliant exhibitions, the best of them being a run of 193 in tonight's game. He nursed the ivories at the top of the table for this run, during which he resorted only three times to a drive of either object ball the length of the table for position. He was making an effort to make the high run of the match, but slipped up when he made a count, but failed to get either ball out of balk.

The high run of the match—221—was made by Inman on the English table last night, when he played top-notch English billiards and scored hazards to the side and top corner pockets with deadly accuracy.

The match just ended is the first of a series of five, which will be continued at Chicago and three Canadian cities within the next five weeks.

RUSSELL'S PLAY FEATURES CHICAGO'S VICTORY, 34—0

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Chicago's champions routed Indiana, 34 to 0, in the opening game of the football season today. The Hoosiers, except for a brief period in the first quarter, were outclassed, and only the utter failure of Quarterback Russell's attempts at forward passes kept the score from being more one-sided.

Russell's 75-yard run for a touchdown thrilled the Maroon stand in the third quarter, and Coutchie, a few minutes later, shook off the Hoosier tacklers for a run of 30 yards and another touchdown.

In the fourth Gordon took Russell's place as Chicago's field general, and in the only successful forward pass of the day shot the ball to Huntington as the latter stepped over the goal line. The final touchdown came on a series of old-fashioned plays. Lineup:

Oakes' Team Wins in Twelfth, 2—1.

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct. 3.—Pittsburg today won a 12-inning contest, 2 to 1. Russell Ford held the visitors runless and hitless for eight innings, when a double by Lennox, an out and a sacrifice fly tied the score. Pittsburg won in the twelfth, Savage crossing the plate on two errors by Smith and a single by Lennox. Score:

The tourney is for the Post-Dispatch trophy, now held by Miss Alice Prendergast, who has already won the cup two years. The winner of this year's tourney will meet her in the challenge round.

Brickley Kicks First Field Goal of Season; Harvard Wins, 44—0

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 3.—Blocking of fan unusually open and diversified attack Harvard defeated the Springfield Y. M. C. A. College in the stadium today by a score of 44 to 0. In the last period the visitors gained the Crimson four-yard line with a first down, but fumbles robbed them of the honor of scoring.

Fumbles by the visitors, line plunges and some well-hurled forward passes by Harvard, with a field goal by Brickley, his first of the season, accounted for the Crimson scoring in the remaining periods. Line-up:

Tigers Find a Stubborn Foe in Bucknell, but Win, 10—0, in Fast Game

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 3.—Bucknell lost to Princeton today, 10 to 0. The visitors proved unexpectedly strong, offering a stubborn resistance to line attack, a good defense against the forward pass and in addition, worked the open game with better success than the Princetonians.

Only in the fourth quarter, when she carried the ball over for a touchdown in four plays from the 40-yard line, did Princeton show a semblance of expected form. A forward pass, Eberstad to Law, netted 18 yards, a line plunge one, a rugby pass, Law to Boland, added 10 more and the score was made by Eddy on a forward pass from Boland. Lineup:

National League Champions, However, Win First Game of Double-Header.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—New York divided the last double-header as well as the season's series with Boston when it won the second game today by a score of 1 to 0, after the new champions took the first game, 4 to 1. Boston made 15 hits in the first game and bunched them for runs in the fourth and ninth innings, and Hess was also effective in the pinches.

The second game was a brief affair, as Marquard made the only New York hit, but Crutcher forced in the only run of the game in the fourth inning when he passed four men. Marquard returned to form and shut out the champions with five scattered hits.

Golf Champion Limberg, Plays in City Tourney

Forty golfers competed yesterday afternoon in the qualifying round of the Municipal golf championships being held on the municipal links in Forest Park. The best score was an 81, made by W. L. Gilliam, with E. A. Limberg, the city champion, running a close second with a card of 83. This is the second annual tournament held on the public links under the direction of Park Commissioner Davis and in charge of a committee composed of F. H. Behring, F. W. Nixon, F. S. Bach and R. E. White.

Anyone may enter upon the payment of $1 entrance fee. The prizes will be cups bought with the money collected as entrance fees.

F. W. Hixson, who was keeping tab for the golfers yesterday afternoon, said that he expected 40 or 50 more entries today, but that they all had to be in by 3 p. m. in order that the committee might make up the qualifying list. The scores made Saturday are:

Princeton to Number Players.

PRINCETON, N. J., Oct. 3.—It was announced here last night that in the football games this fall the Princeton players will be numbered. Large figures will be sewed on the backs of the Jerseys. This, it was pointed out, will enable the spectators to distinguish the players by referring to the list which will be given them. The custom will be inaugurated Saturday against Bucknell.

Rowing Banished at Wisconsin.

MADISON, Wis., Sept. 28.—Participation in inter-collegiate rowing contests by the University of Wisconsin crew was ordered discontinued today by the faculty as a result of an investigation by the medical faculty showing that a large number of crew candidates had developed hypertrophied hearts. Twenty-eight of 56 freshmen and 20 of 23 "W" men show this condition.

ILLINOIS MACHINE RUNS OVER C. B. C.; FINAL SCORE 37-0

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., Oct. 3.—Zuppke's Illini football machine swamped C. B. C. of St. Louis, 37 to 0, this afternoon, on Illinois Field. Illinois' charging backs were too much for the defense offered by the visitors while their bulldog defense permitted the St. Louisans to get into full swing but few times. Capt. Shea, Shanks and Rogers did good work on the secondary defense, while little Gallagher handled his passing well.

Zuppke, for the first time as coach at Illinois, introduced the open style play for which he is famous. Diversifying straight line bucks and old football, the Illinois men used many open formations and uncorked some exciting passes. Most of the passes were Macomber to Clark, while the combination of Macomber to Wagner, and Clark to Macomber, worked for long gains.

Pogue Again Stars.

Pogue, who played such a sensational game at quarter last year, was seen in his new role at left half, where he has been groomed by Zuppke. Playing to old form, he broke loose repeatedly for long gains, one of which, a 55-yard return of Rogers' punt, was the longest gain of the game. Clark exhibited skill in open field running, while the veteran Schobinger made gains of from 10 to 15 yards on line plunges.

Zuppke's lineup was lighter than he had expected, averaging but 173 pounds. His heavier weights did not get in because they would not scrap. He so informed them last night.

Because of the strong showing made by the orange and blue aggregation today, Illinois backers are entertaining visions of a championship team, and will start grueling work Monday for the first conference game with Indiana here next Saturday.

The lineup:

Pfeffer and Alexander pitched the first game and the score was 3 to 2. In the second game Brooklyn had the large end of a 5 to 4 score. Dooin sent in Baumgardner, Mayer and Rixey in an attempt to stop the Dodger batters.

The Brooklyns overcame the four-run lead of the Phillies with two runs in the fourth and six in the fifth.

ANTI-TUBERCULOSIS DELEGATES FROM 41 CITIES COMING

Visitors to Convention Here This Week Will See Veiled Prophet's Ball.

The legislative problems confronting anti-tuberculosis organizations throughout the Mississippi Valley will be the chief topic under discussion during the three days session of tuberculosis workers at the Planters Hotel this week. Delegates from 41 cities, representing 15 states out of the 25 in the Mississippi Valley have engaged hotel accommodations. The largest delegation comes from Indiana. The extreme southern states will have the second largest delegation. The northwestern states will be third.

The Conference is to be held in co-operation with the National Association for the Relief and Control of Tuberculosis. Its chief object is to get uniform laws passed throughout the entire Mississippi Valley, dealing with the prevention and relief of tuberculosis.

The St. Louis Society for the Relief and Prevention of Tuberculosis will have direct management of the Conference. A general committee, of which, Hugh McK. Jones, president of the local organization, is chairman, has arranged the details for entertaining the guests. This will include tickets to see the Veiled Prophet Ball, an automobile trip around the city, and a river trip.

Dr. M. J. White, United States Public Health Service representative and medical director of the local society, will have charge of the pathological section. Philip P. Jacobs, secretary of the National Anti-Tuberculosis Society, will preside at the organization section Dr. Theodore B. Sachs, president of the Chicago Tuberculosis Institute, and Sherman C. Kingsley, director of the Elizabeth McCormick Memorial Fund, will have charge of other sections. Gov. Major and Mayor Kiel will deliver the addresses of welcome, while Rev. Jno. W. Day, vice-president of the local society, will give the response.

The Red Cross Christmas Seal, the chief source of revenue of every anti-tuberculosis society throughout the United States, will come in for its share of discussion at a general meeting on Thursday. A. W. Jones, Jr., secretary of the local anti-tuberculosis society, will be chairman of the meeting.

A pay-as-you-enter luncheon at the Planters during one day of the days will be devoted to a discussion of local problems. This discussion will include the necessity for a hospital for incipient cases in St. Louis, and the advisability of a bond issue to carry out the plans.

Mr. Horace S. Rumsey is chairman of the ladies' reception commitee. This committee will receive the guests at the Planters Hotel on the afternoon of the first session. Hugh McK. Jones, president of the local society, as chairman of the men's reception committee, will entertain the delegates after the Veiled Prophet's ball.

2000 EXPECTED HERE AT JOVIAN CONGRESS

Organization of Electrical Workers Has 16,000 Members in 33 States.

Members of the Jovian order, an organization of men connected with the electrical business, will hold their annual congress in St. Louis Oct. 14 to 16. The call has been issued by W. N. Matthews of St. Louis whose title as head of the order is "Jupiter."

The St. Louis League of Electric Interests, Jovian Order, with 750 members, has completed arrangements for an elaborate convention program. J. H. Pettengill is president. It is expected more than 2000 delegates will attend, many of them accompanied by their wives. Special arrangements have been made for the diversion of the women, because sessions of the Congress are executive and all the entertainments except the Avrenim dinner at Sunset Inn will be for the men delegates only.

There are 16,000 members in the National Jovian Order. Thirty-three states in the Union and nine Provinces of Canada will send delegates to the congress.

Through the order an employment bureau has been established, which is virtually an international clearing house for positions and men in the electrical industry. The service is free to Jovians. The order has created an Electrical Speakers Exchange for the promulgation of exact information among civic bodies relating to the importance of the electrical industry. It has organized the Jovian Efficiency Course for the Jovians who need training in salesmanship and Central Station practice. The order has established a chain of Jovian Luncheon Leagues in every large city where the Jovians are welcome.

Over a Thousand Positions for Workers

HARRISONBERG, Va., Oct. 3.—David Reid, a Confederate veteran, hunting bear through the Allegheny Mountains near here today, thought he had his quarry up a tree and fired. To his horror, Price Lilly, 23, fell dead from the boughs where he had been gathering chestnuts.

Distracted with grief, Reid attempted to kill himself, but was prevented from doing so by the dead man's cousin, who was near by.

SALE OF REPLICAS OF IRON CROSS AT FETE NETS $10,000

Thousands Attend Festival at Delmar Garden for Benefit of War Sufferers.

Thousands of persons attended the opening yesterday of the two-day festival at Delmar Garden to raise funds for the wounded German and Austrian soldiers and those made widows and orphans by the war in those countries.

Those in charge of the festival declared the spirit the St. Louisans of German descent are showing in attending the affair assured the success of the venture and the raising of the desired $100,000. Only $50,000 is to be raised at the festival, as half of the $100,000 has already been pledged by individuals.

The many booths in the garden, decorated with American, German and Austrian flags, were besieged all day by men and women who spent money freely to aid unfortunate persons in the countries at war.

Small souvenirs in the form of replicas of the Iron Cross, were sold by girls and $10,000 was taken in by them during the day. Albert Von Hoffmann started a spirited contest for the first of a few special crosses offered for sale. It was made of gold and set with a small diamond. He bid $100 for it. Other bidders entered the field and the price offered shortly before midnight was $175.

Everything sold on the grounds was donated.

Kersting Denounces English.

Henry A. Kersting, president of the St. Louis section of the German-American Alliance, was the only one of several speakers to violate the "neutrality" suggestion of President Wilson. He made a speech in which he declared the French and English were guilty of "barbarous atrocities" in pitting Indian and African troops against men of their own color.

"Almighty God will surely send down the shafts of lightning a— thunderbolts to destroy such damnable people," Kersting cried at the conclusion of his address.

He read excerpts from an address by Lord Chatham made to the House of Lords during the American Revolution, in which the statesman scored his countrymen for permitting the English in America to enlist the aid of the savage Indians in their attempts to conquer the rebellious colonists.

"The English are less humane now than they were then," he said.

Other speakers were former Judge Hugo Muench, Emil Frei, the Rev. J. Balzer and Dr. J. Schwegel, Austrian Consul.

The festival was arranged by the Citizens' Relief Committee, of which Emil Frei is chairman.

Dancing at Night.

Entertainment was furnished in the evening by members of the various singing and turning societies of the city in folk songs and dances. A military play was presented in the theater by the German Stock Company, followed by a patriotic tableau showing the Emperors of Germany and Austria clasping hands with the spirit of Columbia. E. E. Krug impersonated the Kaiser and Theodore Lang the Austrian Emperor.

Among the speakers who will address the crowds at the festival today, are Mayor Kiel, Conway Elder, Dr. Carl Barck, C. Porter Johnson, Thomas D. Cannon, the Rev. Joseph Lubeley, the Rev. E, Richter and Charles Hertenstein.

A Remedy for All Pain

"The efficiency of any drug," says Dr. C. P. Robbins, "is known to us by the results we obtain from its use. If we are able to control pain and disease by means of any preparation, we certainly are warranted in its use. One of the principal symptoms of all diseases is pain, and this is what the patient most often applies to us for, i. e., something to relieve his pain. If we can arrest this promptly, the patient is most liable to trust in us for the other remedies which will effect a permanent cure. One remedy which I have used largely in my practice is Anti-kamnia Tablets. Many and varied are their uses. I have put them to the test on many occasions, and have never been disappointed. I found them especially valuable for headaches of malarial origin, where quinine was being taken. They appear to prevent the bad after-effects of the quinine. Anti-kamnia Tablets are also excellent for the headaches from improper digestion; also for headaches of a neuralgic origin. Two Anti-kamnia Tablets give prompt relief, and in a short time the patient is able to go about as usual." These tablets may be obtained at all druggists. Ask for A-K Tablets. They are also unexcelled for headaches, neuralgia and all pains.—ADV.

Bishop Charles W. Smith will preach at the morning service, and the Rev. George P. Eckman of New York City, editor of the Christian Advocate, will conduct the evening service.

President Expected to Attend Peace Services Twice Today.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Prayers that the great war in Europe soon may come to an end will be offered in churches of all creeds in the capital and throughout the nation tomorrow. President Wilson has set the day aside by formal proclamation as peace Sunday and appealed to all God-fearing persons to join in beseeching the Almighty to stop the conflict.

The President himself will attend peace services in the morning at the Central Presbyterian Church, and in the afternoon he probably will be among the thousands gathered for open-air services around the "Peace Cross" on the site chosen for the new Episcopal Cathedral of St. Paul and St. Peter.

Special prayers will be said there for peace among the warring nations for the wounded soldiers in Europe and for President Wilson and "all others in authority."

French Officials, Under Law, Can't Call for Public Prayers

BORDEAUX, Oct. 3.—In the course of a Cabinet meeting today, Premier Viviani informed his colleagues he had received several petitions asking him to institute officially general prayers for the success of French arms.

To these he replied that all creeds were free to proceed in the matter within limits fixed by the law, but the same law precluded the authorities from participating officially in public worship.

This answer was approved by the Cabinet.

Peace Prayers to Be Offered in St. Louis Churches Today

THE following prayer is from the Mass for Peace that will be said in all of the Catholic churches:

O God, from whom are holy, right counsels and just works, give to Thy servants that peace which the world cannot give; that our hearts may be disposed to obey Thy commandments, and the fear of enemies being removed, our times, by thy protection, may be peaceful. Through our Lord.

O God, who sufferest not the nations who believe in Thee to be overwhelmed by any peril, vouchsafe to receive the prayers and offerings of Thy servants, that in Thy mercy, Thou wouldst grant peace to Christendom and make them secure against all their enemies. Through our Lord.

O God, the author and lover of peace, to know Whom is to live, to serve Whom is to reign; shield Thy suppliants from all assaults, so that we who trust in thy protection may fear no foe. Through Christ, our Lord. Amen.

Episcopal Prayer

BISHOP TUTTLE has authorized the use of the following prayer in the Episcopal churches on this day of intercession for peace:

O God, who hast made of one blood all nations of men to dwell on the face of the earth, who in Thy Holy Word has taught us that One is our Father, even God, and that all we are brethren.

We pray Thee, in this dark hour of international strife, that Thou wilt open the eyes of the people and those who in Thy Name are entrusted with the authority of governance, to see and understand their right and true relation to Thee, and, through Thee, to one another.

Teach them by Thy Spirit that hatred and violence are not strength, but weakness; that the true safeguarding of a nation is not to be found in the weapons of war, but in those eternal principles which make for righteousness and truth and brotherhood and peace.

Bring, we pray Thee, to a speedy end this international strife, and hasten the time when peace shall flourish out of the earth, and all shall dwell together in unity and love, and war shall be no more. We ask it in the Name of Our Saviour, Jesus Christ. Amen.

Jewish Prayer

RABBI SAMUEL SALE will offer the following prayer this morning in the Shaare-Emeth Temple, Lindell boulevard and Vandeventer avenue:

Grant us peace, Thy most precious gift, O Thou who art the eternal source of peace, and enable Israel to be a messenger of peace unto all the peoples of the earth. Bless our country that it may ever remain in the stronghold of peace and its advocate in the councils of the nations. May the time not be distant, O God, when Thy name shall be worshiped in all the earth, when unbelief shall disappear and error be no more.

We fervently pray that the day may speedily come when all men will invoke Thy name, when corruption and evil shall give way to purity and goodness, when superstition with hatred and envy will no more enslave the minds, nor idolatry and covetousness blind the eyes, when all the dwellers of the earth shall know that to Thee alone every knee should bend and every tongue give homage.

O, may all, created in Thine image, recognize and realize that they are brethren, so that they, being one in spirit and in fellowship, may be forever united in Thee. Then will Thy kingdom of righteousness and love come on earth, and the word of Thine ancient prophet be fulfilled: the Eternal shall rule forever and ever, and on that day the Eternal shall be one and His name shall be one.

Third Baptist Prayer

THE following prayer will be said by the Rev. William J. Williamson in the Third Baptist Church, Grand avenue and Washington boulevard, this morning:

Our Father, we approach Thee with gratitude that we have been made participants in Thy material bounty, and in the riches of Thy love. We humbly confess our weakness and our sin in that we have so misused both, bringing unhappiness to ourselves and to others.

Thou art not the God of confusion and war. By our sins we have set brother against brother, and nation against nation, until again and again the earth has been drenched with Thy children's bloods and sobs of mourning have hushed the notes of song.

We stand amazed at the marvelous exhibition of courage, heroism and self-effacement now being shown on the field of battle; we stand amazed at the marvelous disregard of life and property that their country's flag may be served. Oh, teach us, we humbly beseech Thee, after all these centuries of strife and wrong, how to exert the same passion and heroism and self-effacement in the promotion of the kingdom of God and the brotherhood of man. May the hearts of men become right in Thy sight, and may we put away our sins that it may be possible for wars to end.

Keep us from being lifted up with national pride, and from regarding Thee as a tribal God. We are no better than our suffering brothers across the sea. Help us to glory not in lands and material wealth, but may we seek supremely the will of God and as we find that will go forth in loving obedience to achieve it, for only as we serve Thee can we permanently have the victories of peace.

We ask Thy blessing upon the rulers of the world, that more and more they may regard themselves as stewards of a priceless treasure, the peace and true prosperity of their people. Especially at this time, do we thank Thee for the wisdom Thou has given our President, and pray that our nation may be worthy of being used of God in the advancement of the best interests of the whole world. Teach us the joy of burden-bearing. Thou art the gracious, compassionate, holy God. Make us merciful, loving, just and help us with complete abandonment of ourselves to hasten the day when we shall be a world of brothers; when injustice shall be unknown and when men shall have forever ceased to oppress the weak, and from every fireside and from every field and factory there shall ascend to God one anthem of joyous praise from a world of loving brothers. Humbled by our own sin, and yet finding hope in our increasing desire to know Thee, we offer our prayer. Amen.

HARVESTER TRUST ORDER TO DISSOLVE IS AMENDED

ST. PAUL, Minn., Oct. 3.—The decree of the United States District Court handed down last August ordering the dissolution of the International Harvester Co. under the Sherman anti-trust law, was amended in a decision given here late today by Judges Sanborn, Hook and Smith, the trial Judges, which alters the decree so that it does not apply to the foreign trade of the company and changes the original plan of dissolution.

Counsel for the company announced their intention to appeal to the United States Supreme Court from the dissolution decision of the court as amended.

The original decree required the company to lay before the court a plan for the separation of the company's business and assets into at least three distinct and separate corporations. Under the amendment the specific number there is eliminated, and the plan to be drawn is to provide for division of the company's interests "in such manner and into such number of parts of separate and distinct ownership as may be necessary to restore competitive conditions and bring about a new solution in harmony with law."

The company was given 90 days in which to file such a plan with the court.

Treat Tuberculosis With Lime

THE MEDICAL RECORD (New York) of December 18, 1909, contains an exhaustive discussion of "The Treatment of Pulmonary Tuberculosis Based on the Assumption That the Dietetic Cause of the Disease Is Lime Starvation," written by Dr. John F. Russell.

In the course of this article Dr. Russell says: "The condition which is recognized as preceding the active development of tuberculosis in the adult may be considered as due to lime starvation, * * * Among inorganic substances, lime salts appear to be of special physiological importance * * * but if the salts are not in organic combination, it is difficult to suppose that the cells can appropriate them for food."

Years of widespread use have confirmed us in the belief that the marked success of Eckman's Alterative in cases of pulmonary tuberculosis (consumption) and chronic throat and bronchial troubles is due in large measure to its content of lime, which is so combined with other remedial ingredients as to be easily appropriated by the cells.

Doubtless this method of compounding a vital element with other valuable agents has had much to do with the results obtained in many cases of these affections, which appear to have yielded to Eckman's Alterative. In any event, its administration has seemed to secure the desired result—and without causing digestive disturbance or discomfort.

As it contains no opiates, narcotics or habit-forming drugs, it is safe to try. Your druggist will order it for you if he is out of it, or you can send direct to the sole manufacturers.

$5213 OF $15,000 NOW PLEDGED TO SAVE ORCHESTRA

Symphony Executive Committee to Meet Tomorrow to Take Stock of Donations.

LETTERS OF APPRECIATION

Form for Subscription to Symphony Orchestra

The undersigned hereby subscribe for the benefit and use of the St. Louis Symphony Society, the sum of .... Dollars for the season 1914-15, payable on or after Jan. 1, 1915.

Please fill out and mail to Arthur J. Gaines, manager, 1323 Central National Bank Building.

Contributions may be made in cash or subscriptions, payable on or after Jan. 1, 1915. Any amount within the means of the donor will be gratefully received.

The Executive Committee of the St. Louis Symphony Society, at a meeting at noon tomorrow at Faust's Cafe, will go over the pledges in response to an appeal for $15,000, to enable the orchestra to present its regular program of popular and symphony concerts the coming season.

Up to yesterday afternoon, the third day of the campaign to save the Symphony Orchestra from disbanding, $5213.25 had been pledged, according to Arthur J. Gaines, manager. It is expected the bulk of pledges will be received tomorrow, which it was announced is the day the Executive Committee must decide whether it can present the concerts.

The following pledges were received yesterday: Will Le Beaume, $15; Charles W. Moore, $25; Victor Ehling, $25; Mrs. E. H. Long, $3; George L. Bridge, $5, "Music Lover," $2; St. Louis Orchestra Club, $10; A Friend, $15.

Many Letters of Appreciation.

The Symphony managers express gratification at the letters of appreciation that accompany nearly every donation. They regard this sentiment as the best indication that the orchestra has endeared itself to its patrons sufficiently to insure its surviving any financial crisis.

An example of the spirit in which lovers of the Symphony Orchestra are coming to its rescue, even when their means are limited, is this letter from an elderly woman who sent her moderate contribution:

"I see by the papers that you are receiving small subscriptions for our loved Symphony and I venture to send mine, hoping it may help a 'little bit,' for I do not see how we can get along without it."

For the greater part of its 36 years' existence, the Symphony Orchestra was maintained almost entirely by substantial contributions from those wealthy citizens who were interested. With the adoption of the Sunday popular concerts in 1905, the orchestra began to grow closer to the people in ordinary walks of life, and today is patronized by all classes.

Guarantee Fund Falls Off.

A fund of $30,000 was guaranteed by subscribers of means in 1908, to make up the deficit of that amount which each season produced. Most of the donors agreed to give the same contribution each year for a long period, but deaths, removals and expiring pledges have reduced the guarantee fund to about $17,000 this year. The directors are confident that the appeal they have made to the orchestra's patrons, many of whom are not in a position to contribute more than a dollar or two, will bring sufficient pledges to enable the orchestra to continue.

Contributions in cash or subscriptions payable Jan. 1, 1915, or after, are being received by Manager Gaines at 1323 Central National Bank Building, the office of the Symphony society.

JUDGE HAS COTTON BELT CASE UNDER ADVISEMENT

Circuit Judge Fisher yesterday took under advisement the suit of employes of the St. Louis & Southwestern (Cotton Belt) Railway Co. to enjoin officers of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, Firemen and Enginemen from calling a strike of its members in the service of the Cotton Belt. A vote in favor of a strike was taken after the railway officials had refused to reinstate a conductor who was dismissed for alleged violation of the rule against being intoxicated while on duty. Before the union officers could call the strike a temporary restraining order was issued in the Circuit Court, which prohibited their taking immediate action in the matter.

The trial just concluded was on the question of continuing the injunction in force. The defendants allege that the discharged conductor had not violated the drinking rule. It was claimed he had been sick with malaria and indigestion and had taken medicine, which accounted for his condition when he was thought to have been drunk.

Will Lecture on Religion.

Courage, Prudence, Aggression, Needs of Business, Says E. H. Gary

"MORE courage is business need of the hour," says Elbert H. Gary.

"What this country needs now more than ever is more courage. This is not the time for Americans to be 'quitters.' It is the time for prudence and economy, but not for hysterical economy. There is danger that some of our business men in their over-caution will wreck the mechanism of their own organizations, and injure everyone else.

"We need the public spirit that has been manifested in the countries that are at war, where the newspapers at the outset of hostilities laid emphasis upon the desirability of every person continuing to live as he always had lived and to buy as he always had bought, so that labor may not be unemployed and business brought to a standstill.

"There are many hopeful signs. There are many men who see that this is the day of great opportunities, who are going straight ahead charting their business course for the future, knowing that the war can't last forever and that prosperity will return.

"These are the days when men of courage and resourcefulness may lay the foundation of great success. We should be cautious and prudent, but aggressive."—Elbert H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel Corporation, in an interview with a correspondent for the Post-Dispatch.

STEEL DOWN TO 45; 8000 SHARES SOLD ON CURB MARKET

Pessimists Say It Will Go to 25 —Optimists Say Bottom Is Reached.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The week's activity in curb trading in steel, with its drop from 51 7-8, the July closing price, to 45, with a rally of nearly a point, centered speculative discussion on the future of that recognized trade barometer. Indications are that toward the end of the week 8000 to 10,000 shares of steel changed hands on the curb market which has sprung up in New street in the last fortnight.

There is no way of telling whether the selling was for foreign account or for hard-pressed American investors, or how much of it may have been speculative short selling. There is, no doubt, apprehension that steel will go lower; pessimists say to 25, while optimists see it now at the bottom.

A reduction or suspension of dividends is what is feared, since dividends have been paid out of surplus during dull times, in the expectation that this fall would see a return of prosperity. Admitting that prosperity is on the way for America, war or no war, there is still the question, "will it arrive before Steel dividends have to be cut?"

Gary to Protect Stockholders.

If the Steel corporation had a different man at its head the stockholders might well expect their dividends to be cut. They may be certain, however, that the persistent, consistent optimism and courage of Judge Gary will save them from any unnecessary curtailment.

It is well known that Judge Gary regards it as one of the duties of corporation management to protect stockholders, small and large, against unwarranted fluctuation in the value of their securities; and with that end in view he will favor dividends from surplus so long as such a course is consistent with sound business management and safety, notwithstanding he invariably declines to commit himself for the future.

"The volume of business here has decreased during the last six weeks, and the prospects for the future are not entirely satisfactory," said Judge Gary, speaking of general business; "but the situation is far from hopeless. Our basic conditions are sound and healthy. The country is rich in money and other material properties. Its exports should be largely increased during the next year, and this will necessarily benefit many lines of industry."

More Courage Needed.

"What this country needs now more than ever," said Judge Gary, "is more courage. This is not the time for Americans to be 'quitters.' It is the time for prudence and economy, but not for hysterical economy. There is danger that some of our business men in their over-caution will wreck the mechanism of their own organizations and injure everyone else.

"There are many hopeful signs. There are many men who see that this is the day of great opportunities, who are going straight ahead charting their business course for the future, knowing that the war can't last forever and that prosperity will return.

These are the days when men of courage and resourcefulness may lay the foundations of great success. We should be cautious and prudent, but aggressive."

OHIO ELECTRIC SALES COMPANY HAS NEW HOME

Building Has Been Erected on Delmar Avenue for Salesroom and Garage.

The building erected at 5143-45 Delmar avenue for the Ohio Electric Sales Co., of which A. E. Archer is manager, establishes the center for the sale and garaging of electric cars in the district between Academy and Union avenues on Delmar boulevard. Two of the largest electric automobile salesrooms in the city are located in this block. Archer, after thoroughly canvassing the city, decided that this location on account of its convenience to the purchasers of electric cars, was the best obtainable for the Ohio people.

The building was erected under the supervision of the Watts Realty Co. by E. A. Wagner, builder, plans being drawn by William A. Brasher Jr., architect. The building is one of the most striking of those used for automobiles in St. Louis. It is an expression of modern Italian, characterized by extreme simplicity and frankness. Salesrooms and office are 50x25, with a garage in the rear, size 50x145.

The Ohio Electric Sales Co. has leased the building for a term of five years.

WASHINGTON HEIGHTS APARTMENTS ARE SOLD

Buildings at 5841 Nina Place Said to Have Brought About $15,000 to Owner.

A three-story apartment building at 5841 Nina place was sold yesterday by Barngrover & Specht, representing Emma Hammel, to Thomas H. Whitehill. The price paid, it is understood, was about $15,000.

The building comprises three apartments of six rooms each, finished in hardwood and having tile and marble baths.

The purchase was made as an investment. The apartment house is one of the most attractive in Washington Heights.

REALTY MAN GOES FISHING

Dealers along real estate row are looking forward with hopes of big fish dinners to the return this week of Richard C. Spackler, vice-president of the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co., who departed a week ago for a 10-days fishing trip to the Big Piney.

No bulletins have been received from Spackler's party and the hopes of the real estates are based entirely on the advance notices and promises.

John C. Heman of the Heman Construction Co. yesterday completed the purchase of City Assessor Frank W. Schramm's 11-room house at the southwest corner of Washington boulevard and Wellsley avenue, in University City.

The consideration, it is said, was approximately $20,000. The house is finished throughout in hardwood, has a conservatory and two marble baths and is pronounced one of the best built houses in this section. The lot is 60x210 feet.

Schramm built the house to live in, but when he was elected to office in St. Louis he necessarily had to change his plans. Heman is a brother of Mayor Heman of University City.

University City is one of the most active sections of the St. Louis realty market. With the opening of the Ames tract it will be given new impetus. Handsome entrances to this subdivision have been erected on Pennsylvania avenue and at Waterman and Berlin avenues contracts for erection of these entrances were awarded to the George F. Bergfeld Real Estate Co. The Bergfeld company has bought sites in this tract for several houses, work on which will begin soon. The Mississippi Valley Trust Co. is the exclusive agent for the sale of Ames place lots, which were laid out under its supervision.

REALTY MAN RETURNS FROM TRIP TO EAST

Robert D. Kaime, president of the J. E. Kaime Real Estate Co., returned yesterday from a month in the East. Boston and New York were his headquarters.

As compared with conditions in those cities, St. Louis, he declared, occupies an enviable position.

As to the outlook in the St. Louis real estate market, he takes an optimistic view, predicting an active winter, especially in high-grade investment property in the business district.

TRANSFER COMPANY TO HAVE FIREPROOF STATION

Building Will Be 152x200 Feet of Steel and Concrete, Three Stories High.

Plans are being prepared by Frederick C. Bonsack, architect, for a fireproof transfer station and depot to be erected on the southeast corner of Twelfth and Spruce streets, for the Columbia Transfer Co. The building is to be of steel frame, fireproofed with concrete. The floors, beams and inside walls are to be reinforced concrete and the exterior will be faced with brick and trimmed with terra cotta.

The building will occupy a lot 152 feet on Spruce street and 200 feet on Twelfth street. A loading platform 12 feet wide will run the entire length of the building on Spruce street and will be covered with an ornamental glass and iron canopy

Storage space on the ground floor, 152x100 feet, will have a central alley 60 feet wide spanned by heavy steel girders, eliminating all column obstructions. The general office harnessmakers' room, toilet rooms and shower baths will be located on the second floor. The main entrance to the office will be from the new Twelfth street viaduct.

All windows will be of iron and steeel and glazed with wired glass. A concealed ventilating fan system will be used. The third floor will be used for feed and general storage.

These Men Were Cured of Catarrh By Peruna

You will note that these men whose words are before you represent four different states. Maryland, Colorado, New York and Wisconsin. The east and the west are equally represented. These men perhaps never heard of each other. And yet all testifying with a wonderful unanimity to the same fact. This fact is that Peruna is an excellent remedy for catarrh.

If they had a chance they would tell you that Peruna is a splendid medicine to have in the house; that it works wonders in many cases seemingly incurable by the usual remedies.

Peruna has probably cured more cases of catarrh than any other remedy in existence. Catarrh nearly always depends upon a depressed nerve center. Peruna invigorates the nerve centers and in this way leads to an effective and lasting cure. We have thousands of unsolicited testimonials to prove these statements beyond all cavil.

Catarrh of Stomach — Low Spirits Loss of Flesh — Lost all Faith in Medicine

Mr. George W. Close, No. 12½ Nevada Bldg., Denver, Col., writes: "I have all the faith in the world in your medicine, as it cured me of catarrh of the stomach.

"I was in a most distressing condition and life looked dark indeed. I could not eat. My food did not do me any good. I gradually lost flesh and was thin and emaciated.

"I was glad indeed to find that the first bottle of Peruna was doing me good, and so I kept on using it, with a gradual increase of appetite and strength.

"Three months after I first began using it I was a well man, and all the credit is due to Peruna. I recommend it to all who are in need of a medicine for catarrh."

If you have any reason to doubt the statements of either one of these gentlemen whose faces accompany this article, just drop them a line enclosing a stamp and see if you do not get a prompt reply verifying and reiterating the words that we have quoted from them. Remarkable statements they are, too. There are five million people in the United States more or less affected with catarrh, who ought to read these words and act upon them.

Mr. R. R. Baer, 114 West Laurent St., North Topeka, Kas., writes: "For three years I suffered with ulcers in my stomach. I could eat nothing without being in pain, and could scarcely sleep at all. I could get nothing to help me until I began the use of Peruna. I took four bottles and I am entirely cured."

Catarrh of Bronchial Tubes — Exposed to Cold Drenching Rains

Mr. George A. Douglas, No. 49 East 131st St., New York, N. Y., writes: "As my work compels me to spend a large part of my time out of doors, I have often been drenched by sudden rains, chilled by extreme cold, and I soon found that I had a bad case of catarrh of the bronchial tubes. I tried plasters and medicine, but nothing I did seemed to help me until I took Peruna. This splendid medicine took right hold of me, drove every bit of the disease out, and built me up until I felt stronger than I had for years. Whenever I have been exposed now a couple of doses always restores me. Peruna is an ideal protector in all sorts of weather."

This is a typical case of bronchial catarrh. It is very prevalent, winter and summer. Peruna is a recognized standard remedy.

Stubborn Cough — Cold on the Chest — Thick Yellow Sputum

Mr. H. E. Waterman, Brooklyn, Wis., writes: "I had a very peculiar cough for several months, the result of a cold on my chest, and I finally became aware that I had catarrh of the bronchial tubes. Every night and morning I would cough and raise a thick, yellowish matter which was very disagreeable. I took medicines which were prescribed for me, with little or no effect, and as my trouble grew worse and worse I became very much discouraged. The druggist advised Peruna, and as I had noticed it advertised quite freely, I thought I would give it a trial. I soon found that it was doing me a great deal of good, and I took only a few bottles before I was perfectly well. I feel very thankful to Peruna."

This is also a typical case of bronchial catarrh. Many people are subject to chronic cough, caused by catarrhal bronchitis.

Headaches — Loss of Smell and Taste — Fever Nose Bleed — A Perfect Wreck

Mr. J. B. Reese, Habnab, Maryland, writes: "Two years ago I became a sufferer with catarrh, which continued to grow worse and made me miserable. I could scarcely smell at all, and my taste had almost left me. My head ached constantly, and at times had high fever and bleeding at the nose. I was a perfect wreck.

"I tried several doctors, but derived no relief. I read in one of your little booklets, called 'Ills of Life,' of Peruna being a remedy for catarrh, and procured a bottle at once. After the use of one bottle I felt some better, so I tried the second and the third, and now I am a well man.

"My health is much better than it has been for three years. All praise is due Peruna."

Catarrh of the head is the same disease as catarrh of the stomach. So far as the nature of the ailment is concerned, it matters little whether the catarrh is located in the throat or bronchial tubes, the treatment is the same.

The wonderful success of Peruna in curing these cases consists mainly of the fact that it is a natural invigorant that enables the system to overcome the catarrhal condition, which in many cases is so chronic that it has become a habit.

Peruna speaks for itself. Just give it a chance. Try a bottle of it. You will then know for yourself.—ADV.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKETS

DEALS ON LOCUST AND WASHINGTON LEAD IN REALTY

Plans Are Made for Erection of Handsome Business Block and for Downtown Improvements, but Details Have Not Yet Been Made Public.

REALTY MEN ENTHUSED OVER PARKWAY PLANS

Exchange Has Indorsed Proposal for Hotel and Grand Opera House at Each End of Proposed Boulevard Which Will Beautify City.

Several important deals in downtown property have been virtually closed, but until signed and sealed they will not be disclosed.

Two of the largest deals, if completed, will awaken, it is said, Locust street and Washington avenue, the former between Eighth and Twelfth streets and the latter between Eighteenth and Jefferson avenue. The Mercantile Trust Co. is conducting negotiations in the one and the Hildenbrandt & Noble Real Estate Co. in the other instance. The latter contemplates, it is understood, the erection of a handsome business block.

Comparatively few building projects are being submitted, owing to the indisposition of capitalists to consider ventures, the indications being that building operations in the business section on a large scale will be curtailed for awhile.

Enthused Over Busch Plans.

Capitalists as well as real estate agents are enthusiastic over the plans of August A. Busch, president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, to erect, at the east and at the west end of the proposed Central Traffic Parkview, a magnificent hotel structure and a grand opera house.

The project, embracing the parkway hotel and Grand Opera house, would, it is predicted, rejuvenate the city.

As proposed, the hotel will be 20 stories in height, and will occupy the entire half block on the west side of Twelfth street extending from Chestnut to Market streets. The construction and architectural treatment will be such as to enhance rather than to mar the beauty of the parkway, it is declared.

The block on the east side of Twelfth street, between Chestnut and Market street, is available for the hotel improvement, but now that the plans have been revealed, it could hardly be acquired at a reasonable price.

Exchange Approves Plan.

The directors of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, at a recent meeting, approved the Central traffic parkway plan without a dissenting voice.

St. Louis is the best liquidated city in the United States, according to J. B. Dobyn, a prominent attorney, who has just returned from a tour of Eastern cities, and who is a close observer of business conditions. This city, he declared, is on a more solid basis than any other city of the country, and by virtue of its central location is destined to become the commercial pivot of the United States. Dobyn was astonished to hear of the opposition to the proposed Adolhpus Hotel, which he declares will be an attraction to the city and which will accentuate the beauty of the proposed Central Parkway.

What St. Louis needs more than anything else is a hotel on the scale and grandeur of that proposed by August A. Busch, according to Joseph Griswold, owner of the Laclede Hotel business and site. The opportunity to secure th' magnificent improvement for St. Louis should not be overlooked.

$45,000 Sale Leads for Week.

The leading sale of the week was that of the northwest corner of Washington and Vandeventer avenues for $45,000. The purchaser was Samuel F. Meyerson, president of the Samuel F. Meyerson Printing Co., the seller, the M. Forster Real Estate Co.

The property consists of a three-story stone front building at 3901 Washington boulevard, including a store and eight rooms, seven dwellings at 3903-15 Washington boulevard, containing seven to 10 rooms, and a substantial two-story building at 611-15 North Vandeventer avenue, containing two stores and two five-room apartments. The site has 154 feet 10 inches on Washington boulevard by a depth of 150 feet along Vandeventer avenue.

The annual income of the property is $55,000.

Trust company deeds of trust were never in better demand. Gild-edged paper of this character is being sought in both large and small amounts, according to agents, the indications being that the demand soon will exceed the supply. The Hemmelman-Spackler Real Estate Co., the Haller-Lembrecht company and other agencies which make a specialty of loans are doing a flourishing business.

Sales of serial loans or mortgage notes at the Title Guaranty Trust Co. are also at high tide, according to James M. Rohan, its vice-president.

The loan department of the Mercantile Trust Co., which makes a specialty of serial first mortgage paper, is also running at full speed.

Realty Notes.

C. M. McDonald, president of the C. M. McDonald Real Estate Co., has been confined to his home for the past two weeks with a fractured knee, caused by his foot slipping while walking over Eleventh street, near Chestnut.

Is your home-owning hope strong enough to make the real estate ads the most interesting reading in the paper for you? If so, you'll own that home before long for Post-Dispatch real estate offers contain a variety from which almost any wish may be gratified.

SIXTEEN HOUSES CONTRACTED FOR IN WALNUT MANOR

50 HOMES TO BE BUILT

Business Establishments Will Be Erected on Corners, Realty Man Says.

Contracts were closed last week by the David P. Leahy House and Home Co. for the erection of 16 houses in West Walnut Manor.

The cost of each house, which will be on the bungalow order, will be $880, the terms of sale being $25 cash and $9.27 a month.

Altogether the Leahy company has closed contracts for the erection of 50 houses in West Walnut Manor at this price and on these terms.

The company, according to Leahy, is not seeking profit in the erection of the houses, charging only the actual cost of the building, plus the price of the ground.

In order that purchasers may see what they are buying, a sample house has been placed on exhibition at the Manor.

In addition six corner and six inside lots were sold by the Leahy company.

Business houses, it was stated, would be erected on the corner lots and small houses or bungalows on the inside lots. Only 10 corners now remain unsold here.

The subdivision, which is situated at Florissant and Hamilton avenues, is served by the Florissant or the Union avenue car line, in connection with the St. Louis and Jennings electric line.

$12,700,000 IS ADDED TO THE BANKS' RESERVES

Deficit of New York Institutions Is Reduced to $17,900,000.

EXCHANGE IS LOWER

Gold-Pool Fund Should Quickly Ease Foreign Credit Position.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighter weekly financial review, says:

"There was nothing in the day's news from Europe to attract attention, so far as the conduct of the war was concerned. But dispatches from London told of further headway that was being made in the effort to resume security trading on a restricted scale and prevent disturbance following the modification next week of the moratorium in Great Britain.

"It was evident that the bankers there were also doing what they could to assist in the restoration of normal conditions in the foreign exchange market. Private dispatches from London reflected the interest that was taken in the operations of the 'gold pool' here and the closeness with which the announcement of general policies was awaited.

"Although the sale of exchange by the gold-fund committee did not begin until yesterday, the formation of the pool has had marked influence upon foreign exchange rates. The committee received payment today for the first sales of exchange that it has made, and the formal demand will probably be made on Monday for the initial $25,000,000 installment which the banks will be asked to contribute.

Gold Fund Is Subscribed.

"It is possible that no further payments will be required, but this will depend, however, entirely on the attitude of London, and on the course of exchange rates under the new conditions which will prevail now that the gold-fund committee is actually selling exchange bills.

"But further installments will be called for if they are needed to accomplish the purposes for which the pool was formed. All but $5,000,000 of the $100,000,000 originally asked for has been subscribed, and there is no doubt that the balance will be forthcoming within a few days.

"The quotation on sight drafts on London has been depressed 5 cents in the pound sterling since the week opened, although the pool is only a few days old. But the willingness with which banks in all sections of the United States responded to the demand insured the success of the undertaking from the start, so that the sentimental influence was at any rate important.

"The very high rates which prevailed early in the week were due largely to the belated demand from those who had to make heavy payments abroad on Oct. 1. The remittances are always heavy at this season, but the situation was unusual this year, in that a great many engagements had to be covered which, under normal conditions, would have been arranged for two or three weeks ago. These had been deferred until the last moment, because of the very high rates for exchange and the uncertainty about the gold fund.

Money Market Is Easier.

"So far as the money market is concerned, conditions have not changed materially, except that the strain has lessened and there is no longer the broad demand for the currency remittances to the West which the banks here had to contend with a fortnight ago.

"Call money has been loaned in considerable volume at 6 per cent, except in cases where the borrower was not a customer of the bank or where the collateral offered consisted chiefly of highly speculative stocks.

"But within the last few days, 6 per cent has come to be the ruling rate charged for all loans, whereas in September the 8 per cent quotation prevailed much of the time.

"But the willingness of the large borrowers to pay 7 per cent for the corporation loans floated this week showed that that rate would prevail in cases where important note issues were offered. The one and two-year note is still the most popular form of investment in the market, and the extent to which these notes have been applied for of late by private and institution buyers suggests that the demand will broaden materially in the near future.

"Many interior banks have bought New York City notes for the purpose of maintaining a secondary reserve, such as in normal times is invested in loans made on call in Wall street.

"These investments have been prompted in part, too, by the desire of various banks to keep their money employed at remunerative rates, pending the paying over of the contributions later on for stock in the Federal reserve banks, and of that portion of reserve money which will be carried hereafter by regional banks.

"The naming this week of the Federal reserve bank directors in Class C, by the Federal Reserve Board, shows that the preliminary details of the new system are being rapidly worked out. But there is no great reason to suppose that any attempt will be made to start the new regional banks with full financial equipment, for some time to come.

Foreigners to Ask Loans.

"There are some indications that the banking community will have some opportunity to subscribe for new foreign loans in the near future. Two such propositions have been turned down, but there were reports today that a Norwegian loan would be taken up by important banking interests here within a few days. This statement was based apparently on a cable dispatch from Christiania, giving the views of the American Minister there, as to how a Norwegian loan would be floated.

"There have been various proposals for placing foreign loans in this market, but none have been taken up seriously, owing to the broad demand from our own corporations and municipalities. There are several cities which have to arrange for the renewal of note issues before the year ends.

"The chances are that such loans will be placed without much difficulty, since municipal notes are in demand at times when it is difficult to finance other demands. But the situation is not propitious for placing foreign loans in this market, except in the case of high-grade note issues running for short periods and offering an unusually generous return.

"The bank statement showed much the largest reduction in the deficiency of reserve since the situation in that regard began to improve four weeks ago. Through a gain of $9,000,000 cash for all institutions, and a curtailment of $34,500,000 on the loan account the deficit is lowered $12,700,000. It now stands at $17,900,000, as against the September maximum of $38,300,000. Since these are results by daily averages, and since cash receipts were very large in the last days of the week, the actual position is undoubtedly much stronger than the official statement shows. Its improvement must have been largely brought about through the unusual influence of the contribution by banks outside of New York to the first installment on the $100,000,000 gold fund; but there were other influences at work as well.

LONDON FIGURES ON OPENING OF STOCK EXCHANGE

London Exchange Plans to Trade in American Stocks.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—George W. Ely secretary of the New York Stock Exchange, today received the following cablegram from Edward Satterthwaite, secretary of the London Stock Exchange:

"The committee for general purposes have this date confirmed the following resolutions:

"Resolved that owing to the exceptional circumstances now prevailing, no member shall do a bargain in or negotiate a purchase or sale whether between members or nonmembers, in securities dealt in in the American market at a less price than the English equivalent of the New York closing prices of Thursday, July 30. That all bargain in such securities shall be for cash and no time bargains or options shall be allowed."

Immediately after this cablegram had been received and referred to members of the governing committee, Secretary Ely sent the following reply:

"The action of your committee will be a great help and is much appreciated by this exchange."

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The beginning of active and practical operations in the market for exchange, by the managers of your 'gold pool" is heartily welcomed. It will distinctly benefit our mutual commerce; indeed, an earlier adoption of the plan would have insured greater results to you, because it would undoubtedly have caused a more general policy of renewing maturing American obligations.

The probability is, that your people overestimated the power of your export trade to control the movement of exchange, and it was probably the cotton situation which deceived them. Aside from the question of price, that branch of exports can hardly look, so long as the war continues, for more than half the usual foreign demand.

London Traders Are Bearish.

Such considerations as these make us look somewhat cautiously at your situation from an investment point of view. London believes that all securities must go lower, including your own. In the longer view, however, a more favorable view is taken of your investments, on the ground that your country cannot fail to benefit by its neutrality.

Assuming no unfavorable military developments, the moratorium in our market will probaly expire peacefully at the allotted dates prescribed, ending Nov. 4. The chief problems are the Stock Exchange and the merchandise exporters. Concerning the one, a scheme is being definitely formulated subject to the Treasury's decision early next week, which if favorably received, may pave the way to gradual resumption of business in stocks. But the reopening of the exchange itself depends on developments in the war.

Exporters of merchandise involved with hostile countries must have State assistance, but the amount involved is small and the Treasury's favorable attitude is assured.

Bank Loans Increased.

The £6,000,000 sterling increase of loans at the Bank this week, after a month of steady reduction, was due to a new rush to discount "pre-moratorium" bills—not because of panic by holders, but through the Bank's desire to get them in. The general position is now being excellently handled. In our note circulation the net increase in the whole period of crisis is expressed by £28,000,000 currency notes, against which £5,000,000 sterling gold is already "ear-marked," in spite of which, the Bank's stock of gold coin and bullion is now at the maximum of its history.

Our Government has thus far borrowed at 3¾ per cent or lower, as against the 5½ per cent paid by Germany, and the German note circulation is up £100,000,000 sterling. Our own war expenses will probably continue to be financed on Treasury bills until the end of the year.

COTTON EXPORTS SHOW INCREASE DURING THE WEEK

Great Britain Buys More Than During Entire Preceding Part of the Season.

The notable feature for this week in the cotton market is the increase in exports There have been exported to Great Britain this week more cotton than during the whole of the preceding portion of the season, nearly two months. While exports to Great Britain are not yet large enough to be compared decently with the movement in former years, at the same time there is encouragement in the increase. The Continent is taking some cotton and Japan some. It is reported that a ship will leave Galveston for the latter country within the next few days with 12,000 bales of cotton, proceeding via the Panama Canal, and that this cargo will be followed by others for the same country.

The consideration of the figures covering exports of cotton during the present season must, more than ever, be considered in conjunction with the exports of cotton goods, and the takings by American spinners. In this connection it must be remembered that the export of cotton is part of the general movement and helps make up the visible supply of cotton. On the other hand, when the finished product is exported it affects the price of cotton only in an indirect way, showing the trend of business and the possibilities for further takings of cotton.

Credits Affect Trade.

The movement of cotton has not fairly begun, and figures are no guide to conditions. The lateness of the crop and the disturbance abroad have stopped everything. From now on the movement will be some guide as to probable prices. The enforced curtailment of consumption abroad will enhance the consumption in this country, but there are difficulties in the wa yof pushing the business to consummation. The matter of credits affects South American trade. The difficulty of distribution affects Red Sea trade, on account of danger to shipping and risk of loss through confiscation, etc. Trade with China is restricted by lack of funds among the merchants.

It is reported that several large orders for goods have been received from Europe by exporters in this country. One New York mill is said to have received orders for 500,000 sheets, another for a line of duck and khaki, another for cotton cloth for one purpose or another. It is sure that when these orders come from a belligerent country there will be much secrecy surrounding them. It is not unreasonable to assume that there have been orders of this character received by mills in this country and that the goods have yet to be made up, creating a better demand for cotton. Certain it is that sellers are a little more independent in making prices on forward shipments of goods and it is believed that the stocks of goods in mill hands are not large.

Manufacturers in this country occupy an unusual position; their supply of cotton is before them and competitive buying is reduced to a minimum; their home market for the finished product is freed of foreign competition; their export business is capable of extension beyond their previous expectations. Under the circumstances it is to be expected that there is a margin of profit in present transactions and that they will write off any losses incurred by the decline in prices following the beginning of the war, and make every effort to overcome the difficulties in the way of extension of their trade to foreign countries. Such an attitude will compel large purchases of cotton for nearly immediate use and do much to steady the cotton market.

Out of an apparently overwhelming supply of cotton a quantity may be taken that will reduce the surplus surprisingly. The movement in favor of a drastic curtailment of acreage next season gains strength. The price of cotton would advance if curtailment were assured. Financiers, backed by the Government's ready willingness to advance money on cotton, are not averse to carrying cotton for their clients for a year if need be, provided they have the assurance that their collateral is not awakened by another big crop. Every farmer should feel himself obligated to the people who help him not to plant largely to cotton next spring.

Cotton seasons overlap and part of the crop of this season is not used until next season; so it is that the possible future supply affects immediate prices. The war will not last forever, and there will be a market for all of this crop, provided it is properly picked, ginned and cared for; under no circumstances should the labor of months be allowed to go to waste; it should be remembered that it is not the quantity of cotton in existence that makes for lower prices; it is the quantity of cotton that is pressed for sale.

Acreage Too Large.

The two largest crops ever made proved this. In both those years in mid-season prices declined to a low level (in neither instance as low as present prices) and from the low level immediately began to climb and the very highest price of the season was registered at the very close of the season. Why was this? It was the result of heavy selling by dealers and manufacturers who saw what they thought was overproduction and oversold the market. There are many today who believe that present prices, however low, are too high, and overselling may result again. The Government report of conditions and ginning will probably be construed as bearish; just now there is hardly anything bearish in crop reports further than a confirmation of what we already know—that there is more cotton than can be immediately disposed of. Let no farmer regret that his long months of labor have been rewarded by a big crop. Let him hold tight and agree to curtail his acreage next season, and he will reap the reward of his labor during these past months and not waste it in the months to come.

The report on condition of cotton on Sept. 25 was more favorable than generally expected, although crop reports had for a long time been very flattering. The average of 73.5 for the United States was 5 points above the average condition for 10 years, and 2.4 above the condition existing in 1911 on the same date, and 9.4 above the condition last year. The estimated yield of lint cotton per acre was 200.2 pounds; the average production is about 192 pounds; in 1911 the production per acre was 208 pounds. Taking into consideration the increase in acreage over 1911, the difference in yield per acre is just about overcome and a crop nearly the same as the 1911 crop is indicated.

The ginning report showed that 3,381,864 bales had been ginned up to Sept. 25, compared with 3,246,655 last year, 3,007,271 in 1912 and 3,676,594 in 1911. With the crop admittedly late such a ginning may be compared to that of 1911, just as the condition report and estimate yield may be compared with that full crop.

Some notable features of the ginning figures are the heavy returns from Georgia and Alabama; in Georgia the ginnings were reported as 3421 bales more than 1911, Alabama 32,411 more than 1911; in 1911 these two states made very large crops. Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, ginned respectively 65,000, 21,000, 56,000 bales more in round figures than in 1911. With the exception of Tennessee, the other states ginned less.

CATTLE MARKET BAD FOR SELLING SIDE DURING WEEK

Few Prime Steers Offered and Supply of Medium Grade Stock Was Excessive.

Receipts National Stock Yards.

	This Week.	Last Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle	32,500	33,569	34,250
Hogs	53,000	55,593	48,884
Sheep	10,000	16,078	13,673
Horses and mules	1,500	1,486	4,819

Conditions which characterized the trade in cattle the past week were almost identical with those of the previous period. The runs were again of rather liberal volume, but there was a noticeable scarcity of prime steers, practically nothing that took on this aspect was received. Almost every factor of the week was adverse to the selling side, and the market was far from satisfactory to this contingent.

Excessive supplies of medium-grade stuff made these kinds particularly hard to dispose of, and it was impossible to place them at the previous week's values. Buyers were after concessions all week, using the liberal runs as an excuse, and they succeeded. Strictly prime beeves were nominally steady, but medium kinds were almost a flat quarter lower, and common grades 25@35c off. Nothing over $10.25 was received.

The trade in heifers was in many respects similar to that in steers. Supply was liberal and the large quota of medium to common heifers proved burdensome in that it was excessive. Packers showed plainly at the outset of the week that they did not want medium-grade heifers unless discounts could be secured, and local butchers offered little relief. Strictly prime, tidy weight heifers were steady, but medium to good grades were 15@25c lower and common grass heifers 25@35c under the previous week.

Vealers Steady.

Best cows above $6.25 reflected little change during the week, although toward the close there was some weakness. On cows between $5 and $6 it was largely a 25@35c lower deal, and they were slow. Canners opened steady, but later declined a dime. Best bulls were steady during the week; others, however, sold 15@25c lower. Vealers moved steady all week, with a top of $11. Trade in stockers and feeders was also considerably lower, due to the fact that farmers are now beginning the marketing of surplus cattle and preparing for winter feeding, consequently the demand from them was light. Best stockers and feeders looked close to steady, but others were a flat quarter lower in most instances.

Receipts in the quarantine division were fairly generous, although not nearly so heavy as the previous week. A good proportion of the runs came from Texas and Oklahoma, but canner territory was again well represented.

The steer supply proved slightly excessive, especially in view of the rather light demand from order buyers, and the market was slow, with prices largely 15@25c under the preceding week. No strictly good grass or fed steers weer offered. While the supply of canners and she stuff was of good volume, the demand was also good and the market was steady to a dime lower. Yearlings and heretics did not show much change.

Hogs Again Lower.

Another good supply of hogs was received and prices continued their downward trend and reached the lowest basis they have been on in the past two or three months. There was a general decline, but the plainer grades, such as have to go to the packers, found the markets the worst and suffered more than the better grades for which there was good outside competition from the shippers and butchers.

The top ranged between $8.60 and $9, while the bulk of the hogs went at $8.25@8.65. The range of prices is much wider than usual as there were lots of good hogs selling 75c under the top of the market. Rough packers went at $7.75@8, fair packers $8.15@8.40, and good ones $8.50@8.75, while the shippers and butchers paid $8.75@9 for most of their hogs.

The good pigs and lights were not bad, but the poorer grades were almost unsalable. Best grade of lights weighing less than 165 went at $8.50@8.80, fair grades $8.25@8.50, best pigs under 125 lbs. went at $8.10@8.50, fair grades $7.40@8 and the poorer kinds $6.50@7.35. Grass offerings of all weights were poor sellers at all times.

Lambs Are Stronger.

With but moderate supply of sheep and lambs on sale the market was active all week and prices on lambs showed a good gain, making an advance of around 25c on all kinds, but there was no improvement in the price of sheep, although they were extra good sales at all times, and none of the buyers were able to secure as many as they really needed to meet their demands for mutton.

The good quality fat lambs found sale at $7.75@8 as a rule, while the fair kinds went at $7.35@7.65 and the culls and others that were little or no better than culls went at $6@7.25. Buyers did not sort the lambs very deep, owing to the limited number on sale and the strong demand that prevailed for all kinds that could be used for slaughter.

Practically all of the mutton sheep went to the slaughterers at $5, with a few to the city butchers up to $5.10. Breeding ewes went at $5.25@5.75, but the demand was not as great as it has been. Best stockers and choppers went at $4@4.50, fair stockers $3.25@3.90, old culls $2.50@3, and bucks $4@4.25.

Light Runs of Horses and Mules.

Last week the run was again light and no material changes could be noticed in the trade. All army types that came up to requirements sold satisfactorally, but there were many complaints registered on other types. Southern purchasers were out of the market and only a few Easterners were on hand to absorb the supply, but they were only in the market for light supplies and the quality of all offerings taken by them wast strictly good.

There was no change in the mule trade and about the usual market was staged. There was a light call for miners and big mules, but aside from these there was little call for others and prices were only quotable in a steady range.

Local wheat futures advanced nearly 1c a bu Monday, after some light selling at the opening. Professional traders took the buying side, on the theory that the 6c decline of last week favored a recovery on the technical position of the market, if nothing else. There was little of importance in the war news, but Liverpool cables were about 1d lower and the visible supply caused some surprise by increasing 3,651,000 bu. Later in the week, however, selling developed on semi-official estimates placing the domestic wheat yield at considerably more than recent Government figures. Increasing primary stocks also caused selling.

On Saturday the market became oversold and figures showing record-breaking wheat exports for the week caused a 3c rally. Closing prices were firm.

Statistics were bearish. The domestic wheat visible supply increased 3,561,000 bu last week. Corn decreased 765,000 bu. Oats increased 310,000 bu.

Wheat Acreage Is Large.

The Price Current said:

Our reports verify the compilation of two weeks previous as to the acreage of winter wheat, which is again reported as follows: Ohio, 110; Indiana, 113; Illinois, 118; Missouri, 104; Iowa, 100; Nebraska, 103; Kansas, 105; Oklahoma, 117.

Crop Expert B. W. Snow wired:

"My reports are emphatic in their indication of heavy increase in the acreage of winter wheat. It is too early to put it in figures, but the increase promises to be one of the most pronounced changes in crop distribution that has ever been recorded. Rains at the end of August and since have put the ground in perfect shape for plowing and seeding, and the feeling that Europe's crop acreage next year must be materially reduced is the basis for the remarkable increase in area which is reported to me from every section of the winter wheat belt. Local returns of from 10 to 20 per cent increase in area are not at all infrequent, even in districts of heavy importance, while in localities where the area is ordinarily small the crop will be an important one next year."

Bradstreet's detailed showed:

Wheat—United States and east of Rockies, increase 8,445,000 bu; United States and west of Rockies, increase 788,000; Canada, increase 8,313,000; United States and Canada, increase 17,546,000; afloat and in Europe, increase 1,500,000; total increase 19,046,000.

Corn—United States and Canada, decrease 816,000 bu.

Oats—United States and Canada, increase 1,016,000.

Corn Crop Improves.

B. W. Snow's crop report, wired to A. C. Petri, local representative of Bartlett-Frazier Co., Chicago, makes condition of corn 72.0, or 3.5 points higher than last month. This improvement is the result of general rains which were received during the last week of August and which came immediately after the data for last month's report was gathered.

The Government report for Sept. 1 was gathered after this breaking of the drouth, and consequently recorded at that time the corn improvement which is here shown. Upon the basis of this final report of condition the crop this year should closely approximate 2,642,000,000 bu. Complaint of damage to quality from wet weather in September and from unusual activity of the corn worm is widespread.

Final thrashing returns on oats make an average yield of 29.1 per acre and a total crop of 1,114,000,000 bu.

Final thrashing returns for winter wheat make an average of 19.0 bu per acre, or practically what was indicated at the time of harvest. The total resulting crop is placed at 683,000,000 bu.

Spring wheat is thrashing out a slightly heavier yield than was indicated by earlier returns, the average being returned at 12.2 bu per acre. This makes a total of 220,000,000 bu. The total wheat crop aggregate 903,000,000 bu, the report says.

CHICAGO WHEAT IS HIGHER ON EXPORT SALES

CHICAGO, Oct. 3.—Wheat prices today took a decided jump. There was general commission house buying based largely on the huge exports shown to be in progress. The more radical bulls took the position that the surplus in the United States was not sufficient to fill the European demand and that values would go up whether or not there was an early peace. After starting ⅝c to 2⅝c higher, values scored a material further gain.

Corn rose with wheat and as a result of predicted wet weather the outlook was for little or no deliveries next week from first hands. Prices opened ¼c to 1⅝c higher, and seemed inclined to hold near the topmost level reached.

Shorts rushed to cover in the oats crowd. Big sales were reported as having been made to the seaboard.

Provisions climbed with grain and hogs. Trade, however, was light.

Fruits.

APPLES—Quality of the ben davis apples (which constitute the bulk of the receipts) usually satisfactory, size and color being good, exceptions of course when lots are well faced and the bottom of barrels showing fruit lacking quality and color, and speckled lots are also seen; gano, grimes and huntsmans favorite sell well; jonathan apples disappearing, and those coming are mostly dead ripe. Large lots straight packing sell to best advantage; small, irregular and mixed lots not in favor with best trade. 42 MEN AND WOMEN HELD AS "BOOTLEGGERS"

Raid Fills Decatur (Ill.) Jail After Secret Words By Detectives.

DECATUR, Ill., Oct. 3.—A big raid on alleged "bootleggers" was completed by the Decatur police department today when a total of 42 men and women were arrested.

Under the direction of State's Attorney Deck a squad of detectives had been at work here for the last week securing evidence. Everything was kept quiet until the warrants were sworn out and then the "bootleggers" were gathered in. They filled the city jail to overflowing.

When You Want to Laugh—Eat!

And if You Want to Eat Without Food Fears Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Each Meal.

Laughter, smiles and mirth never go with a "caved-in" stomach. Fancy a-man-afraid-of-his-food laughing! There is always that haunting feeling that a sick stomach is nothing to be mirthful about.

"My old grouchy days are funny to me now."

Just make up your mind to help nature help herself. Give your body a chance to make good. Heal the raw edges of your stomach and give your blood the tools to make digestive fluids with.

There is only one way to make the body well—give it the chance to make itself well. Harmful and strong medicines handicap the system. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets go into the stomach just like food. They are dissolved and there they strengthen the weakened juices of the digestive apparatus until the digestion is made normal.

There is nothing mysterious or magical about them. Science has proved that certain ingredients make up the digestive juices. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are these concentrated ingredients—that is all there is to it. One grain of a certain ingredient contained in Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets will digest 3000 grains of food. This illustrates how you aid nature to restore her worn-out materials. When a stomach which is filled with food receives a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet, it is more able to digest the food than it would be without it. The work is not so hard nor the task so long.

When the meal is finally assimilated the entire system absorbs more nourishment and harmful food effects are eliminated easily, quickly and with the maximum of benefit.

Every drug store carries Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. To anyone wishing a free trial of these tablets please address F. A. Stuart Co., 150 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich., and a small sample package will be mailed free.

BIG SECRET—IF YOU HAVE GRAY HAIR

You Can Restore It to Natural Color by the Action of Air. No Dye—Nature Does It.

Haven't you often wondered how friends of yours whom you know to be OLDER than you keep themselves looking YOUNGER by retaining the natural beauty and youthful color of their hair? More than likely they have discovered the virtues of Hay's Hair Health.

In no sense whatever is Hay's Hair Health a dye. It is a combination of ingredients recognized by the medical profession as being the best, stimulating the hair and creating a healthy scalp condition. Added to these is another wonderful element which so prepares each gray or faded hair that the AIR with which it comes in contact brings back the NATURAL color. It is harmless, yet positively SURE in its results.

The truth of this claim has been proved in hundreds of thousands of cases throughout the United States.

In addition to being a color restorative, Hay's is a truly wonderful hair and scalp tonic. It prevents dandruff; keeps the scalp clean; freshens dull, lifeless hair; restores its luster and softness.

If Hay's fails in your case, your druggist will return your money.

CHILD DIES AFTER BEING FOUND ON WALK UNCONSCIOUS

Concussion of Brain Thought to Have Killed Girl, 7, but Body Is Without Mark.

Pauline Burns, 7-year-old daughter of James P. Burns, an upholsterer of 4636 Margaretta avenue, died yesterday from a mysterious cause which physicians were unable to determine. They expressed the opinion that she suffered from concussion of the brain, but there was no mark on her body and no person was found who had known of an accident to her.

The child was playing alone in the yard of a neighbor at noon. A few minutes after her mother had seen her, the neighbor, Mrs. James Rader of 4645 Margaretta avenue, found the child lying unconscious on the sidewalk in front of her home.

She was carried home by a negro Mrs. Rader called, and physicians were summoned. They said the symptoms were those of a person suffering from concussion. The child died five hours later without regaining consciousness.

NEGRO THREATENS TO STAB STORE CLERKS

A big negro threatened to stab any person that came near him in the Scruggs-Vandervoort & Barney Dry Goods Co. store, when several clerks surrounded him yesterday afternoon after he had purchased a pair of shoes and tried to pass a check which they believed to be worthless.

He ran out of the Olive street entrance and east to Ninth street, where he was arrested. At the Central District police station he gave his name as George Johnson, 38 years old, living in Hannibal, Mo.

The check was made out for $12 to Will Jones and signed by W. Parker, who Johnson says is a cement contractor.

A short time before the arrest a negro entered the Power Shoe Co. store at 914 Olive street and bought a pair of ladies' shoes for $3. He gave a check for $12, signed by W Parker and got $9 in change. The police have received about 20 complaints from downtown merchants, who say they have received worthless checks for $12 signed by W. Parker.

LULL IN HOSTILITIES AT WAGONER FORTRESS

All was quiet last night at the Wagoner fortress, 4167 Lindell boulevard, where Mrs. Lulu Wagoner, the besieged, slept on the second floor while her husband, George C. R. Wagoner, slept in the quarters he had chosen for the siege on the first floor.

The policeman on his beat, passing the house at regular intervals, stopped and looked it over, rapped with his night stick and went on. Up to a late hour there had been no telephone calls to the Newstead Avenue Police Station and the indications were that the besieged and the besieger were having a quiet night.

There were no developments yesterday and apparently both parties had decided to let the situation remain in statu quo until Mrs. Wagoner's suit to oust her husband from his vantage ground on the first floor of their home is heard in Judge Fisher's court tomorrow.

WOMAN AND THREE CHILDREN BURN TO DEATH IN HOUSE

HAMMOND, Ind., Oct. 3.—A woman and three children were burned to death in a fire which destroyed a farm house ten miles south of here early today. Four other members of the family were saved by a boy.

The dead are Mrs. Elizabeth Stolly, 72, an invalid; Mary Stolly, 13; Fred Stolly, 9, and Tracy Stolly, 6.

The origin of the fire is a mystery. Joe Stolly, 13 years old, was returning from a party when he saw the flames burst from an upstairs window. He succeeded in awakening four members of the household who escaped by leaping from windows.

Following a farm house fire near Champaign, Ill., last Wednesday the body of Mrs. Bessie Stone and one child were found in the ruins. Three other children are missing and may have been burned to death. Scott Stone the dead woman's husband escaped. The Coroner's Jury returned a open verdict as to the cause of the deaths. DETECTIVE REPUDIATES DYNAMITE CONFESSION

Says He Made Charge Against Stockton Employers Out of Revenge.

STOCKTON, Cal., Oct. 3.—A. P. Emerson, a detective under arrest at Martinez accused of having high explosives in his possessioon, repudiated today a "confession" he made yesterday implicating representatives of the Merchants Manufacturers and Employers' Association of Stockton in an alleged conspiracy to discredit Stockton labor interests by "plants" of dynamite.

Emerson said that in bringing the charges against members of the association he had been actuated by a spirit of revenge because the association had not come to his assistance when he was arrested here 10 days ago in connection with the robbery of a box car of dynamite at Bay Point.

"IF ADVERTISING WILL NOT SELL THAT REAL ESTATE, IT CAN'T BE SOLD."

Whether literally true or not, this assertion is measurably true. For good advertising always has found buyers for good real estate—is doing it today, and will do it tomorrow. Advertising does not make real estate valuable or desirable. It simply brings its value and desirability to the notice of prospective buyers. Can you afford to have the thousands of persons who consult the Post-Dispatch Big House, Home and Real Estate Directory miss your offer by not having it listed?

DEATHS

In Memoriam.

In loving memory of our dear parents, John and Mary Bruegge, who departed this life four years ago today, Oct. 4, 1910.

Four sad years have passed away,
And time brings no relief;
Father and mother, we miss you more
With sad and bitter grief.
How dark and lonesome is our home
Since you have left us all alone;
How hard it was we alone can tell
To part with ones we loved so well.
Peaceful be your sleep, dear parents,
'Tis sweet to breathe your names;
In life we loved you dearly,
In death we do the same.
And consolation to us is given,
We part on earth to meet in heaven.

Sadly missed by
THEIR CHILDREN. (c)

$5000 PER YEAR

Men wanted to manage St. Louis and Kansas City branches of New York corporation; a new economic necessity for the most universally used domestic, commercial and public utility.

Reduces cost of commodity, 25 to 40 per cent.
Reduces labor, 40 to 50 per cent.
Increases efficiency, 25 to 50 per cent.

Saves more than enough money to pay for itself the first year. Lasts a lifetime without attention, renewal or repair.

Men who can qualify as to ability to do things and evidence their faith and responsibility by making a moderate investment can form a desirable connection. Don't confuse this as a stock-selling scheme as our only purpose is to secure the persistent and permanent efforts that a financial interest insures; furthermore the yearly returns are much more than amount of investment required. Our vice-president will be in St. Louis Oct. 8 to 15. Address or call,

E. B. OVERSHINER,
Planters Hotel. St. Louis. (c1)

INVESTMENT WITH SERVICES.

A corporation controlling the manufacture and sale of a new 5c product has a number of Missouri openings for men who are qualified to act as branch managers; each position carries a worth-while fixed salary plus a commission that will more than equal the salary. The work is pleasant. The business is clean and strictly legitimate. The man who comes in can do so with the assurance that he is settled for the rest of his business life.

The cities in which these branches will be located are: St. Louis, Hannibal, Kirksville, Macon, Moberly, Columbia, Mexico, Jefferson City, Marshall, Chillicothe, Trenton, Sedalia, Lebanon, Springfield, Joplin, Carthage, Nevada, Clinton, St. Joe and Kansas City. The investment required ranges from $5000 for the smaller cities on up to $10,000 for St. Louis. The returns on the investment and services will range from $5000 a year for the same smaller cities on up as high as $15,000 to $25,000 a year in St. Louis.

This is absolutely an open and above-board proposition. The men back of the company have never been engaged in a promotion proposition in their lives. Their standing is high, their record unimpeachable. The business is open to and welcomes every investigation. There is no risk to take and the investment is absolutely secured. I have no time for curiosity seekers, but I am ready to give every attention to the serious man who knows business and means business. I will be in St. Louis until Friday of this week and will meet and give full particulars to any man who is really interested. Also full particulars will be sent anyone who will write me and a meeting will be arranged for a later date. Appointments can be made either in person or by telephone, but no particulars of the business will be given over the phone. If writing tell me a little something of who you are and what you have done. F. K. Gardner, Rooms 304-6 Marquette Hotel, St. Louis, Mo.

"Half Doing Is Many a Man's Undoing" in Advertising

For, as common sense will suggest, many for sale advertisements ought to be REPEATED—perhaps many times—if the result seems hard to get. And thus, sometimes, a property owner, with a place to sell or to lease, concludes that, if one insertion of an ad fails to find a buyer or a tenant, further effort in this direction is useless. And in that respect "half doing is undoing," as it diverts a property owner from the only sure and inexpensive way of solving his selling and leasing problem. Tell your agent to advertise, not once, but frequently, if necessary—and to keep your property listed in the Post-Dispatch Big House, Home and Real Estate Guide.

GRIT CANNOT TAKE PLACE OF MINERAL IN FEEDING FOWLS

Widely Known Authority Tells Why Both Are Essential to Healthy, Paying Birds.

Grit cannot take the place of mineral matter in poultry feeding, although many poultry raisers believe that when a flock has access to plenty of grit there is no need of other mineral matter. But there is a great difference between the two. The grit has no food value and the mineral matter cannot replace grit in the crop to grind the food.

Another erroneous belief is that the term "mineral matter" applies only to such substances as lime, oyster shells, mortar, etc. These all contain large amounts of mineral matter, it is true, but some of the best sources of mineral elements are certain grains and green feed.

The difference between grit and mineral matter, and their respective functions, is very clearly explained by James E. Rice of Cornell University, known throughout the country as an authority on poultry feeding. He says:

"Grit enables the gizzard to prepare the food for digestion. It is a fowl's false teeth. When grit becomes worn out, it is expelled. If new, sharp material cannot be obtained, the food must remain unground in the gizzard until it softens and falls to pieces. This makes slow, imperfect digestion. The hardest grit is best. Always keep it before the fowls.

"Fowls do not really begin to satisfy their hunger until the food has been ground and expelled by the gizzard. Fowls have been known to starve to death with a crop full of food, merely because it could not pass to the gizzard and thence on to be digested.

"They need more lime than is furnished in the ordinary ration. Wheat, bran, clover and turnips are particularly rich in mineral matter. This is one reason why they are so valuable for young, growing animals.

"When the ration lacks mineral matter the egg shells are tender. Hens then become ravenously hungry for lime. They begin to eat their eggs to get more lime for making egg shells. Lack of mineral matter in the food is the principal reason why hens eat eggs. Cracked oyster shells, mortar, bone, etc., should be accessible to the fowls at all times.

How to Feed Alfalfa to Flocks in All Seasons

Alfalfa, whether green or cured for hay, is one of the cheapest and most convenient sources of green food for the flock in any season of the year. During the growing season, flocks allowed to range on an alfalfa field, or if fed on the green clippings, have their wants for green feed well looked after. For winter feeding, bright, green alfalfa hay or alfalfa meal answer the same purpose.

At this time of the year the forehanded farm poultry man sees that a good supply of bright, well-cured alfalfa hay is put away for the special needs of the poultry flock. The city or suburban poultry man will do well to buy alfalfa hay by the bale or alfalfa meal by the bag, to be kept in a dry place where they will be handy for the feeding operations.

A good way to feed alfalfa hay in winter is to cut it up fine and scald well what will be needed at a feed, letting it steam by covering it with old bags or a carpet. It is a good plan to mix it in with bran and corn meal or other ground grain

When filling a silo the heavy material like corn, ears and heavy butts of the stalks fall to one side of the silo and the light tops and dry leaves fall to the other side. If this material is left where it falls the side with the heavy material will settle well but the other side will not settle well and will be likely to be drawn away from the wall of the silo.

Thus an air space is left which will cause large quantities of this light material to spoil. There should be plenty of good reliable help in the silo to attend to the proper mixing of these materials and to distribute them. The center of the silage should be kept considerably higher than the edges, and the whole mass should be thoroughly trampled. One man should keep the edges thoroughly packed and crowded down against the wall all around.

In feeding from a silo one should be careful to remove a layer from the top of the whole mass every day to prevent decomposition which takes place very rapidly after the silo is opened. As the stock will need some dry feed along with the silage and some protein feed to balance the ration, it is best to feed a mature animal about 20 pounds of good corn cane or kafir silage, morning and evening, and all the clover or alfalfa they will eat at noon.

Jamestown, N. Y., to Install a Municipal Milk Plant.

The city authorities of Jamestown, N. Y., have decided to install and operate a municipal milk plant. Bonds to the amount of $25,000 are to be issued to cover the cost of the new plant. Those backing the scheme count on buying milk at 4 cents a quart and selling it at 8 cents and figure that the profits of the business will amount to some $50,000 annually. The city consumes 17,000 quarts of milk daily. The experiment will be watched by the residents of other cities with a good deal of interest.

ROUP—Nearly every poultryman has had experience with this most dreaded disease. The ravages of roup often amount to an epidemic; generally gets its start with a cold which may be contracted in various ways; the first symptom is that of a slight cold, the bird sneezing, gasping or wheezing, and repeatedly rubbing its head on its plumage; the fowl loses appetite and shows a disposition to keep away from its fellows. Poultry Problems Solved

Ration for Yarded Fowls.

I have read what you say about closely yarded fowls, also what you say about balanced feeding. I should like to have you give me a balanced grain ration and a balanced dry mash ration. What amount of grain should be fed at one time to 10 or 12 White Rocks?—J. W. McC., Norfolk, Neb.

The ration to be fed depends on the age of the birds, the purpose for which you are feeding, etc. Here is a good dry mash ration for laying hens: Two parts bran, two of middlings, one of ground oats, one of cornmeal, one of gluten meal or oilmeal, one of beef scraps, one of alfalfa meal. This is a good ration to keep in feed hoppers before the hens. Then at night feed two parts cracked corn, one oats, one wheat, one buckwheat. In the morning feed a moderate amount of wheat and oats in deep litter. In general it may be said that a quart of grain is a fair meal for a dozen fowls of average size. If the feed is oats, give more than of wheat or corn. The mixed grain feeds sold by most supply and feed houses are well balanced.

I have a R. I. red pullet that eats well, but she has a bad odor from mouth and nostrils. There is a discharge from the nostrils. What is a cure?—F. M., East St. Louis, Ill.

This is a case of roup, almost the most common ailment of fowls. This case may or may not be serious. Press the matter out of the nostrils. Put some crystals of permanganate of potash in luke warm water, enough to color it dark. Take a common "dropper" and put this solution into the nostrils from the dropper. Do this work thoroughly. Immerse the whole head in the water for a moment. Repeat two or three times. Try this treatment daily. Put also some permanganate, not so much as above suggested, in the drinking water for all the fowls, enough to make the water a claret color. Some breeders use this in the water every day in the year. I do not, but I use it quite often at this season of the year.

I have not been able to find answers to the following questions in any book. Some of them may strike you as funny, but as a reader of your poultry page, I should like to have you answer them. I have confidence in your answers because you have nothing to sell.—R. I. P. McD., St. Louis.

1. How much profit a year do you think there is in a hen, when one has to buy feed?

2. How much does it cost to feed a hen per year?

3. How many eggs do you think one could average per hen a year if one has 500 hens? Would 10 dozen a year per hen be safe to figure with White Leghorns under ordinary care?

4. How much do you think it would cost to raise a broiler to two pounds?

5. Do you think a man could make a fair living on 10 acres with chickens, some fruit and a few hogs?

6. How many chickens can one man take care of himself and do it properly? A. H.

The questions are not amusing. They are all sensible questions. One does not know these things by intuition and can only learn them by experience or from some one else.

1. I regard $1 to $1.50 as a fair profit per hen. Some do considerably better than this.

2. The cost varies, with location and the variety of fowls one keeps. I believe the cost with you would not be far from $1.50 per hen.

3. Ten dozen, under ordinary care, with so large a number, is doing quite well. But you ought to endeavor to get at least 150 per hen.

4. Around 15 cents.

5. Yes, I think so. Of course the man himself is the main factor. I assume that he has enough capital to swing the proposition, equip his plant with stock, houses, yards, etc., that he does not depend on the plant for a living wholly the first year. Such a proposition as you outline is a very good one for the right man. I should add a cow or two to the stock equipment, and, of course, a sufficient garden to supply the home table with vegetables.

6. One thousand to 1500. It is important that the plant be arranged so that the work may be done with the smallest possible output of time and labor.

Bumble Foot.

I have White Leghorns and Brahmas, some of which have been troubled with sores or boils between the first and second toes. They get very large. I have used flaxseed to draw the core and then opened. There is a foul smell. I use a solution of carbolic acid to cleanse and vaseline to heal, wrapping the wound and every third day I repeat the treatment. What is a good treatment for the roup? I have tried different cures without success.

I think your treatment is very good. I think the flaxseed has no value, however, but I may be wrong. I believe the value of such poultices is imaginary. I suppose the difficulty is bumble foot, but I am surprised that more than one or two fowls should be troubled with it. Have you something about your yard or house that causes injury to the feet? See treatment suggested above for roup. After it is considerably advanced roup is very difficult to cure, but if taken in time, in the common cold stage, it usually yields to the permanganate treatment. Fowls will drink water with permanganate in it if you do not use too much.

THE "STIRRUP CHARGE" AT ST. QUENTIN

Painted by R. Caton Woodville, the Noted English Illustrator

The most dramatic battle incident at Waterloo, the subject of Lady Butler's world-famous picture, "Scotland for Ever," is stated to have repeated itself, practically in all its details, in the battle at St. Quentin. There, exactly as the Highlanders did at Waterloo, a Highland regiment joined in the charges on the Germans made by the Scots Greys, and did remarkable service at close quarters. The Highland infantrymen burst into the thick of the enemy holding on to the stirrups of the Greys as the horsemen galloped, and attacked hand to hand.

BY ARTHUR CHRISTOPHER BENSON

The distinguished English essayist, son of the late Archbishop of Canterbury, deplores the habit of magnifying pin pricks and propounds a golden rule for becoming indispensable.

I HAVE been much surprised since I began, some years ago, to receive letters from all sorts of unknown people, to realize how many persons there are in the world who think themselves unappreciated. Such are not generally people who have tried and failed—an honest failure very often brings a wholesome sense of incompetence—but they are generally persons who think that they have never had a chance of showing what is in them, speakers who have found their audiences unresponsive, writers who have been discouraged by finding their amateur efforts unsalable, men who lament the unsuitability of their profession to their abilities, women who find themselves living in what they call a thoroughly unsympathetic circle.

There is nothing in the world which so differentiates men and women as the tendency to suspect and perceive affronts, and to nurture grievances. It is so fatally easy to think that one has been inconsiderately treated, and to mistake susceptibility for courage. Let us boldly face the fact that we get in this world very much what we earn and deserve, and there is no surer way of being excluded and left out from whatever is going forward than a habit of claiming more respect and deference than is due one. If we are snubbed and humiliated, it is generally because we have put ourselves forward and taken more than our share. Whereas, if we have been content to bear a hand, take trouble, and to desire useful work rather than credit, our influence grows silently and we become indispensable.

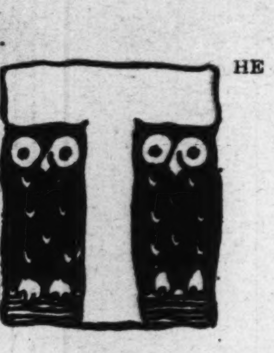
A man who does not notice petty grumbling, who laughs away sharp comments, who does not brood over imagined insults, who forgets irritable passages, who makes allowances for impatience and fatigue, is singularly invulnerable. The power of forgetting is infinitely more valuable than the power of forgiving in many conjunctions of life.

In nine cases out of ten the wounds which our sensibilities receive are the merest pin pricks, enlarged and fretted by our own hands; we work the little thorn about in the puncture till it festers, instead of drawing it out and casting it away.

Very few of the prizes of life that we covet are worth winning if we scheme to get them; it is the honor or task that comes to us unexpectedly that we deserve. I have heard discontented men say that they never get the particular work they desire and for which they feel themselves to be suited; and meanwhile life flies swiftly, while we are picturing ourselves in all sorts of coveted situations, and slighting the peaceful happiness, the beautiful joys which lie all around us, as we go forward in our greedy reverie.

"STAND OUT OF MY LIGHT."

By Gerald Stanley Lee



THE following letter speaks for itself:

> My Dear Sir: I have read the editorial in which you say that the best way for common working people in this country to keep from being held under and kept back is to stop hurrying and think. You say that the best way for a man to think is to put himself in the place of others.
>
> Supposing all this is true about thinking of others? What of it? What is there anybody can do about it?
>
> What it all amounts to is that a man must have imagination. A man is either born with an imagination or he is not. Other people have more imagination about a workman's life than he has. So they take advantage of him. The very things you tell the factory hand to do are things he can't do, because he is in a factory.
>
> To say nothing of thinking of others, he is too tired even to think of himself.
>
> It is a kind of mockery to tell a factory hand he must have an imagination. He can't. That's just it. Sincerely yours,

I have never known a man who was born without an imagination. A little child always has one. Every man starts with one. Then everybody piles on him for the first few years of his life and keeps him from using it. Schools, parents, machines and factories are all hateful to a boy if he makes things up in his mind and works things out for himself.

They say: "Look here, boy! WE are shaping you. We have got a three-eighths of an inch hole in this world for you to fill, and here you are shaping yourself for a hole you haven't got! Where is your hole? Do you know any hole the shape you are getting to be?"

This scares the boy, naturally. He doesn't really know the exact hole he is for, so early. He can't say anything or prove anything. So he stows his imagination away in the cellar of his mind and gives it up. Civilization thinks of Holes first—all of its dear, beautiful, precious Holes—and of boys afterward. Then it begins paring the boys down. Schools, parents, clergymen, all pare. And when the boys grow up, factories pare.

This is my first answer to this letter. The writer puts the blame on the way human nature is made. Human nature is the way we make it, and we are making it look and act in a way that is not natural to it.

When a boy's parents and teachers have been paring on him for 10 years it is unfair to look at the boy and say that this is he. And when a factory has pared on a man for 10 years, it is unfair to look at the man and say that that is he. That is what is left of him, and it is not fair to the man to regard him or to legislate for him or plan factories and institutions for him without thinking of what he latently is and of what could be done with him if he were allowed to have his parings on.

As long as we judge human nature by the way it looks or even by the way it acts we will never get out of our difficulties. The decisive fact in dealing with people is not what they look like—that is: what other people by the way they treat them have made them look like—but what they really are and what they were meant to look like and what they are going to be, the moment schools, factories and parents stop mussing them up so that nobody would know them.

This disagreeable fact about parents and factories is a very encouraging one to see and to believe. It rids us of our first bugaboo, namely: that there isn't anything we can do. It fixes the blame on parents and teachers and factories and not on the Creator, where of course nobody could hope to do anything. It brings us plump against our real question:

What is there that can be done toward getting parents and teachers and factories to behave?

This question is already being answered very fast, beginning with the factories. One can go about the country every day and see factories in which workmen are not only allowed but begged to think. This very imagination which we have tried to keep under in a man, is getting to be the thing that the efficient factories are hunting for most.

It is the typical American workman's power to think—particularly his power to think of others—and his power to co-operate with others, which everybody around him values in him the most and pays him for the most. The factories that have this policy are driving the others off the face of the earth.

But not yet. Thousands of workmen are being employed today in factories that are still too scared to allow their workmen to think. What is there that the workmen who have to work in them can do to think anyway? What can they do to usurp the right to think? If a workman is in a factory where he is being browbeaten with machines and crushed and jammed down into merely thinking of himself, i. e.: into using only a small per cent of the possible energy he could bring to bear on the ambitions of his life—what can he do about it?

Some say that the only way a factory can stove a hole through the top or get the right to think enough of others to see how to stove it, is to make a fight for higher wages first!

It seems to me it would be more practical to turn this around and make a fight for the right to think first. Then the right to higher wages will take care of itself.

The law of higher wages is that the workman who is able to think of something besides his wages and who is able to think of his work earns more.

The most stupendous indictment that can be made against our modern factory owners and managers is that all that they can get most of the men in their factories to think of is their wages. The majority of our factories (fortunately of the going-by type) won't give a workman a chance to think of a single thing, if they can help it, except getting enough to eat. Of course if a workman is kept so that all he has time to think of is his wages, and of getting bigger wages, he cannot get them.

The average going-by factory fixes things so that all that interests an intelligent man in it is getting his wages raised. Then after practically ordering him, by the way they treat him, not to be interested in his work—not to be interested in anything, except his wages—they cut his wages down because he is not interested in his work.

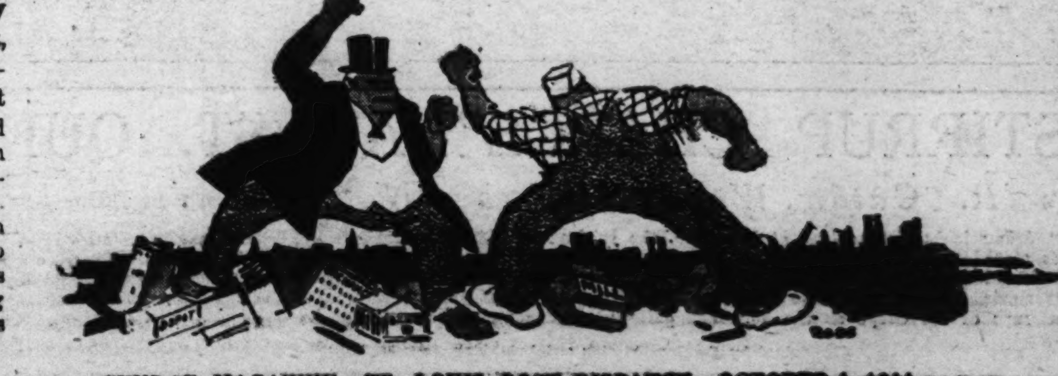
The less men are interested in their work, the less money they can earn; and in the long run the less money they earn the less money there will be for them to get. The fight to keep wages down and the fight to get wages up is a weak, a foolish fight. There is no end to it. The only thing to fight for that can get anywhere is a fight for the right to think.

The fight Labor is going to conduct next in our factories for the right to think will have as its leaders naturally the men who can already think the best. The type of labor leader that will lead in this fight to think is the man who already thinks so much that he thinks of others. The campaign is going to be waged on the general platform that, for real practical, hard work in getting things out of employers, the more disinterested a labor leader is the more things he will be able to get.

The man who gets things out of people does it by seeing what the people are like. The laboring man who cannot think of anything besides his wages or himself is going to pick out and elect laboring men he knows who can do it for him.

Laboring men will usurp their right to think of others first. Then they will see the way to get their other rights. For I am not overlooking the other rights. I am merely speaking of the best strategic order in which they can be got. All the world will help if Labor tries it in this order. And the great employers will help.

There are those who tell me I am putting too high an estimate on the American laboring man. But I cannot believe less of him than this: that the right the laboring man is going to fight for in his factory and his union is the right to think of others, the right to add to the resources of his own mind and the ideas that other classes have and to use them as his own. He will no longer let himself be cheated out of the dignity and the rewards of thinking of others.



THE COBRA OF THE NAVY

How the vicious submarine slips silently and unobserved to where the battleship, its giant enemy, waits in fancied security, strikes with its venomous fangs and steals safely away again, leaving the adversary to writhe in the death agony

WHILE it is premature to say that events verified the pronouncement of Sir Percy Scott, Admiral in the British navy, that "As the motor vehicle has driven the horse from the road, so has the submarine driven the battleship from the sea," the present European conflict has proved that the submarine has more than held its own with the battleship.

When the U-9, single German submarine, which cost $500,000 and carried a crew of 20, stole out into the North Sea a few days ago and, within twenty minutes of fighting, sent $12,000,000 worth of armored cruisers and hundreds of men to the bottom, there was scarcely a German who did not feel that all of his country's expenditures for submarines had been amply repaid.

In trying to discount the moral effect of that affair, the British authorities announced that the lost cruisers, the Aboukir, the Hogue and the Cressy, were of antiquated class, built 14 years before, at a cost of $4,000,000 each. But what happened to these three ships might have happened to three of the largest and most expensive of Britain's warships if they, instead of the Aboukir, the Hogue and the Cressy, had been in the right place. That is to say, $500,000 invested in one submarine would have destroyed battleships representing an outlay of between $36,000,000 and $40,000,000.

The most expensive submarine costs about $600,000. Twenty of them can be built for the cost of one of the most modern big warships. And any one of the 20, if it got into proper contact, could account for the warship.

In spite of all this, however, the general superiority of the submarine over the big battleship lacks a great deal of being proved. When the first motor-driven torpedo was perfected men predicted the finish of the big battleship. They predicted it again when the torpedo boat was invented and again when the torpedo-boat destroyer came into being. Each of these was and is a perpetual menace to even the largest ironclad and yet the ironclads have always found some means of adequate defense against them.

Whether they can do so against the submarine remains to be seen. Already they have certain advantages such as superior speed and mobility. Yet the venomous little craft, sneaking up below the surface of the water and launching a death blow at its most vulnerable part, is apparently the deadliest enemy the big man-o'-war has yet encountered.

If the warship stays out in the open sea and keeps moving, the chances of effective action against it by a submarine appear to be reduced to an almost inconsiderable minimum. But when the warship cruises about languidly in a close blockade line or takes refuge in a harbor or assails land fortifications, it subjects itself perpetually to an attack for which it at the present time is the poorest prepared. There is not even any assurance that it will much longer be safe out at sea, for the submarines are beginning to solve the problems of long submergence and rapid movements. Certainly any fleet with a shoal of hostile submarines hanging on its flanks and continually harassing it will find much of its own effectiveness impaired. Admiral Dewey is said to have declared that if the Spanish had had one or two modern submarines at Manila Bay his great victory over Montejo's fleet would have been impossible. If the Russians had had modern submarines the Japanese fleet might never have been able to bombard Port Arthur.

Summing it all up, the submarine seems to have proved very clearly that it has added a new and revolutionary aspect to marine fighting. It seems to have demonstrated fully its ability to do the things for which it was designed and to have made it extremely probable that naval grand tactics will have to be completely revised.

Many theorists predicted that this would come to pass. Seven years ago, Capt. A. T. Mahan, the greatest living authority on naval matters, gave the following appraisal of the value of the under-water craft, which, in the light of recent events, seems to have been prophetic:

"The submarine boat, if unmolested and unwatched, can travel out of port until she gets sight of a distant enemy. She then takes his compass bearing, dives, and, completely submerged, steers the compass course for such distance as seems advisable, estimating progress by speed and timepiece, exactly like steamers in a fog.

"Having run her time, she rises, but only so far as necessary for renewed observation. This process of alternate diving and observing will be repeated as necessary, the last rise being within torpedo range of the target.

"The torpedo when ready for discharge, lies in line of the boat's keel. It is aimed, therefore, by turning directly towards the target, and is fired when so heading. The period required for aiming will depend upon the amount of this turning, but that for rising, firing and rediving is stated by experts at 10 seconds. These operations measure the time of exposure to gunfire, if the small surface shown be at once detected by the enemy.

"These ascertained qualities present a very formidable aggregate, constituting the submarine an imposing personality. These are her offensive powers, always most important in an instrument of war. Defensively, she possesses invisibility approaching totality when actually submerged; and when rising can be caught only by a lucky glance, which cannot follow at any great depth under the water. When but slightly immersed, the sea compasses her around as a shield, impenetrable to even large projectiles. When these strike at small angles, as from a vessel they usually will, they glance from water as from armor, rising harmless in the air.

"In sum, then, the submarine possesses in high degree armored protection, invisibility and the power to strike a blow as deadly as the rattlesnake or cobra, and of as little warning. In practice, if performance rise to the level of promise, her deeds may resemble the freaks of those personages of fairy tales, who possess an invisible cloak and deal blows alike unexpected and unaccountable."

Roughly speaking, submarines are of two general types, the Holland and the Lane. In the former the vessel actually dives, slanting downwards through the water, bow first. In the second it sinks steadily on an even keel, as an elevator. Most Governments, including the American, seem to prefer the former as more rapid, although generally smaller. Each nation, each inventor, it might be said, has worked out numerous variations. The present war has been expected to put the different types to a thorough test.

In outline, every submarine must be able to sink and rise at will, must be

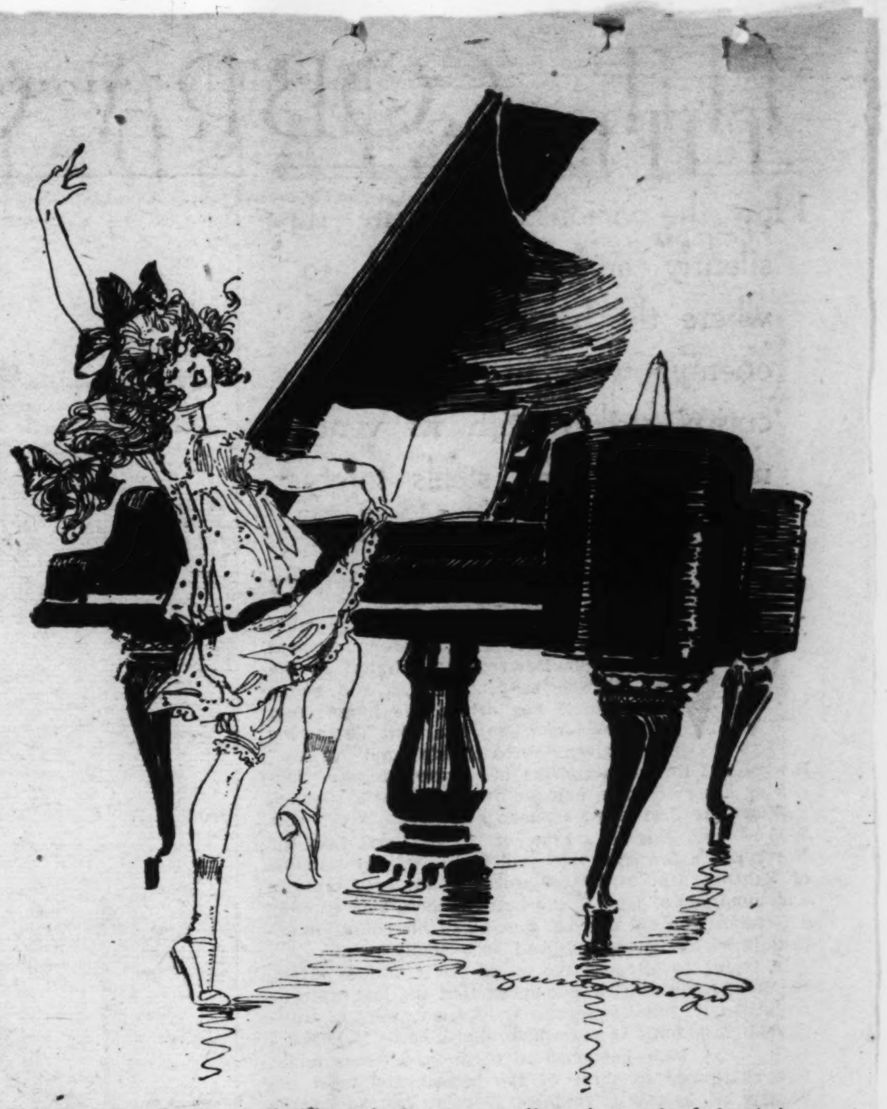
Eurhythmics Has Come to Town

Don't Be Alarmed, for It Is Only a New Name for Dancing, and Covers a Multitude of Sins Charged to the Tango and Trot—Even Y. W. C. A. in St. Louis Adds It to Courses in Fundamentals Like Cooking and Domestic Science. : : : : : : :



Children should dance their music lessons at first, instead of drudging at dull five-finger exercises, according to Dalcroze.

By Marguerite Martyn

AND now young music students are told to take their lessons home and DANCE them instead of playing them on the piano!

You send your daughter to your most modern music teacher. You buy a grand piano and fit up a music room. You set aside a period for overseeing her practicing and you listen dreadingly, but dutifully, for the familiar, monotonous five-finger exercises that were the torment of your own youth.

But you wait and listen in vain. Finally you peep in to see why your program is not being carried out. You find your daughter skipping and hopping and pirouetting about the room—her eyes intent upon the music notes, perhaps, but her fingers never touching the keys.

Do not be alarmed. Do not be angry. Daughter is merely being taught music by the latest approved system, namely Eurhythmics.

"Is this only another phase of the world's dance madness?" one is moved to exclaim. "Oh, no," comes the answer; "we are not dance mad, but Eurhythmics mad, now."

And you are requested not to confuse Eurhythmics with dancing. On the contrary, Eurhythmics is designed, say the reformers, to do away with the objectionable, the despised, the vulgar modern dances, to cure us of our taste for them.

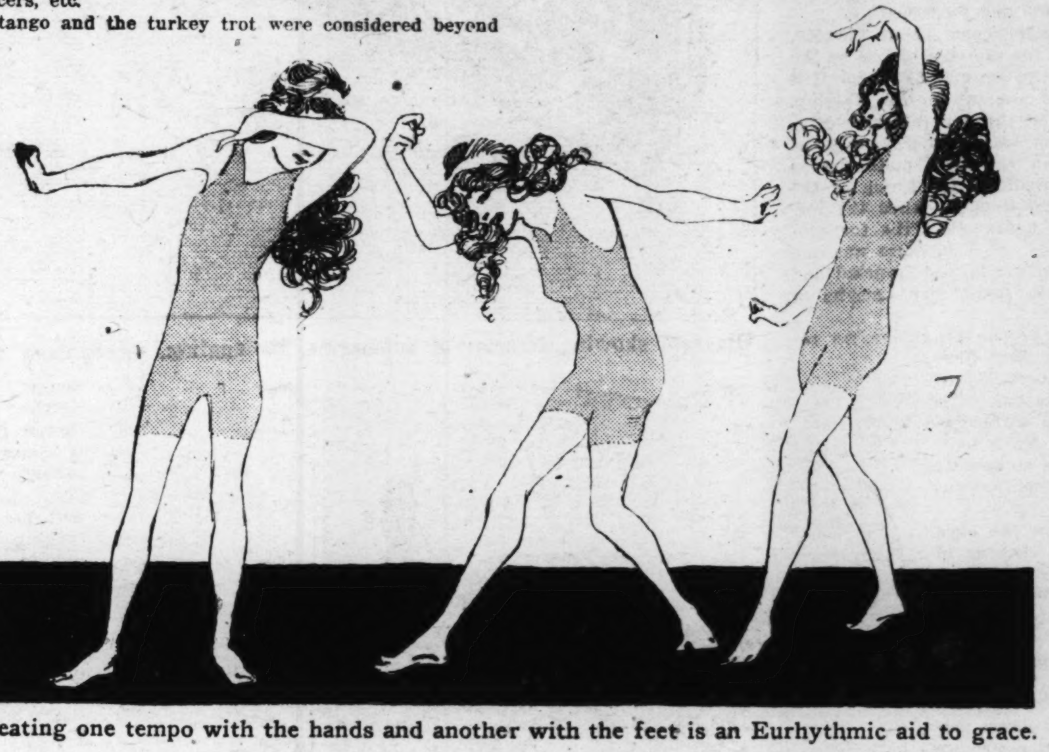
Other means of elevating the public taste for dancing have been attempted. Earnest and well-meaning physical culturists, bent upon propitiating the proprieties, while serving the dance enthusiasts, have attested the worthiness and righteousness of their purpose by calling themselves esthetic dancers, gymnastic dancers, folk dancers, interpretative dancers, etc.

In some circles where the tango and the turkey trot were considered beyond the pale morally, young women lightly clad, in utmost abandon, have successfully "put over" their performances in the name of esthetic or intellectual endeavor.

There have remained in yet other circles those who refused to be converted. To them Terpsicore was a heathen goddess, no matter how artistic or intellectual she had become. These beautiful athletic exercises were attuned to rhythm, yet were dances.

It said so on the program. Their children should be taken right out of school if any teacher dared teach them dance steps at gym period.

Now, one public school physical director confided to me that she had given her pupils many Gertrude Hoffman and Ruth St. Denis arrangements of steps under the subject "Rhythm," and there had come no objections. Plainly it is the word "dance" that offends. Remedy? Amputate the word dance. Substitute? Eurhythmics. Why not?



Beating one tempo with the hands and another with the feet is an Eurhythmic aid to grace.

Remembering all the arguments for and against, all the crusades—aye, and pitched battles—fought over the "new dances," is it any wonder that having reached a common ground of understanding, with a truce in sight, the warring factions should gladly lay down arms? As it is, a peaceful surrender seems to have been effected and both sides seem to be advancing under a banner inscribed "Eurhythmics." The printed matter of both parties is given over to praise and commendation of Eurhythmics. Fashionable dancing masters are advertising Eurhythmics in their programs. Likewise the Young Women's Christian Association of St. Louis will have a course in Eurhythmics.

I doubt if Mr. Jacques Dalcroze, the inventor or discoverer and head disseminator of this very pliable "science, philosophy or bitter experience," as it is described—over there in Dresden has any idea of the "multitude of sins" Eurhythmics is being made to cover in this country. But to read his book on the subject, the field of education, the reforms in art, music, acting, health and morals to be accomplished by Eurhythmics are limitless.

We cannot attempt to expound it all. A four-year course at the school, Hellerau, a suburb of Dresden, is necessary, it seems, for complete knowledge, or, as the Eurhythmatists say, "experience." At Hellerau, disciples and admirers of the master have caused to be erected vast buildings of classic architecture, and here, to the Palace of Rhythm, come students from all over the world. 'Tis a new institution and there are no actual graduates in St. Louis as yet, that I know of, and only a few students—among them Miss Nina Lamkin, physical director of the Young Women's Christian Association, who has imbibed the method secondhand.

All of which is somewhat discouraging as a definition. Throughout the volume, one gathers, however, that the first object of the student is the cultivation of the sense of rhythm. And this, it seems, is quite a study. Some persons, one is told, are so deficient in the sense of rhythm that it amounts almost to a disease. Many nervous disorders and many mental peculiarities, such as timidity and self-consciousness, are attributable to the want of rhythm in one's composition.' The book is freely interspersed with illustrations; youths and maidens, men and women, each wearing a single garment like a knitted bathing suit, disporting themselves in various graceful attitudes—some in groups, some singly. And the lines of the printed page are broken by music signs and symbols. One elementary lesson recommended is to keep different kinds of time with feet and hands. That is, mark three-four time with your feet and at the same moment six-eight time with your hands, and then still another time with your head. A more simple exercise consists of marking the time of a bar of music with the arms and the number of notes with the foot. One series of six exercises is devoted to the gestures and movements of each set of appendages of the body—the feet, the hands, the head, the eyes, and then altogether.

"Music with running and skipping and singing, and

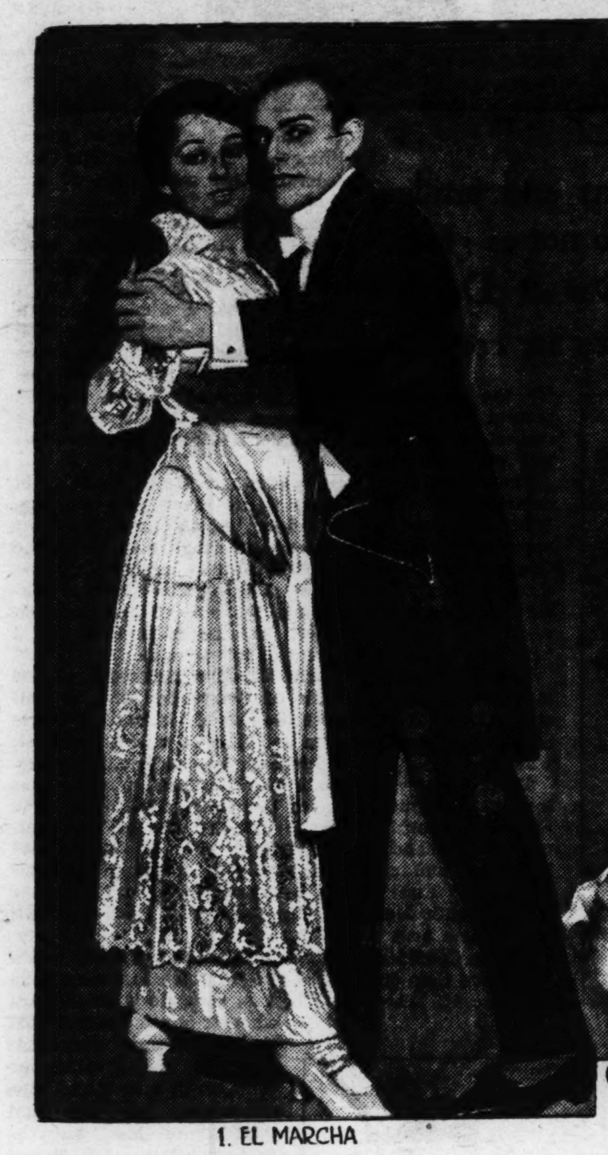
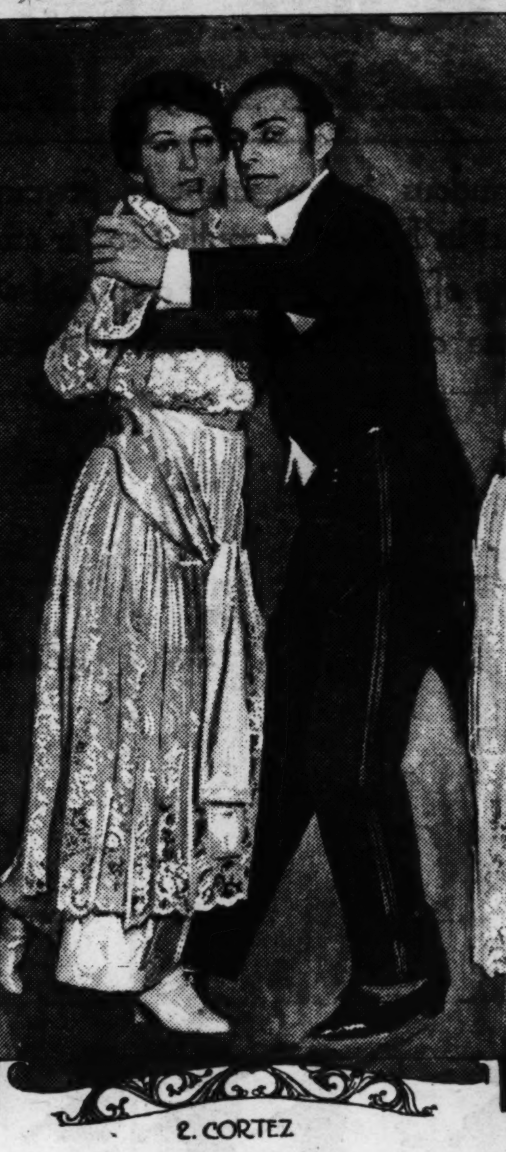
MAURICE SHOWS HOW TO DANCE

THE STANDARDIZED TANGO

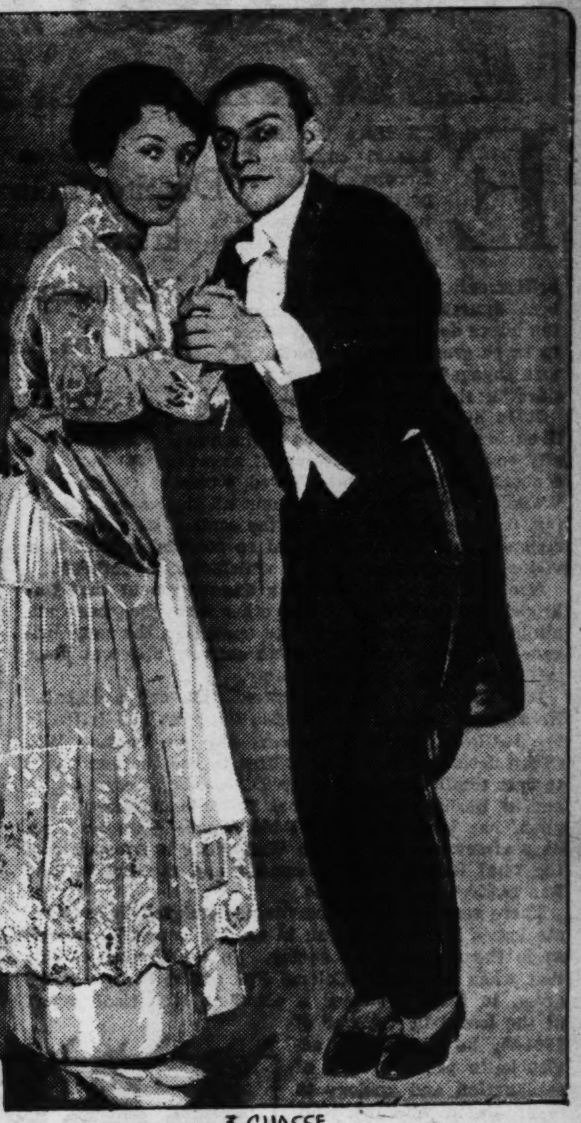
These six steps of the standardized tango were posed especially for this Magazine by Maurice and Miss Florence Walton



1. EL MARCHA



2. CORTEZ



3. CHASSE

By ADOLPH NEWBERGER,

Member of the Advisory Board, New York Society of Teachers of Dancing.

WE have the tango standardized at last and have saved it from oblivion. The difficulty of this beautiful dance, and the variety of its steps, keep it in a place apart, and so much so that it has been in imminent danger of perishing. Now we have culled the wheat from the chaff, picked out the easiest and most graceful of the many steps and put it on a permanent basis where the tango deserves to stay, along with the one-step, hesitation and maxixe. As now standardized it is simple and dignified and should find its place on every ball room floor.

We have cut the tango down to six steps and four figures, all of them easy and graceful. By following the directions given, any person who has learned the rudiments of dancing may pick up the standardized tango by holding a copy of this Magazine in the hand and working out the steps, which are given for each distinct movement.

Following are the four figures and the six steps which in various combinations make up the dance:

I. EL MARCHA (four times),
EL MEDIO CORTEZ (twice),
II. PAS CHASSE (four times),
EL MEDIO CORTEZ (once),
III. EL MARCHA (four times),
EL MEDIO LUNA (twice),
EL MEDIO CORTEZ (once),
IV. CORTEZ (twice),
CHASSE (four times),
EL MEDIO CORTEZ (once).

The tango is danced in two-four time, with a peculiar rhythm all its own. There are eight measures and 16 counts to each figure. The waltz position is the accepted manner of beginning the dance, the man's left hand extended with the palm partly turned upward and the woman's hand resting lightly in it. The arms are always curved. The man's right arm is around his partner's waist, supporting her lightly. The tango is the exception to the rule that all dances begin with the left foot for the man. In the tango he starts on the right.

Fig. I. El Marcha—The man walks forward four steps, beginning with his right foot; the woman walks backward four steps, beginning with the left.

WAR'S TOLL OF DEAD

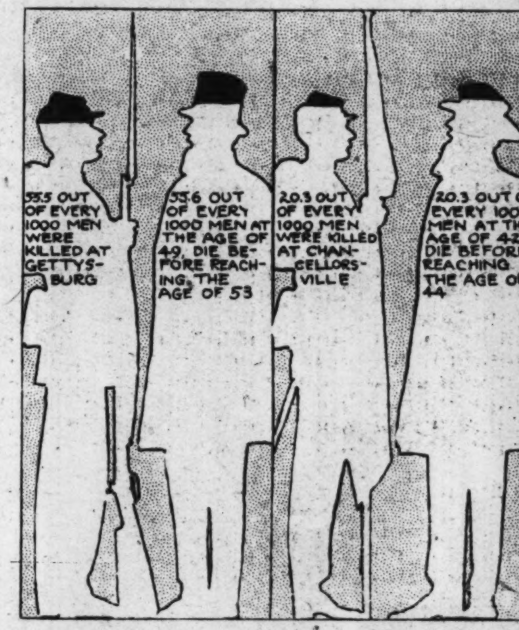
Despite tremendous improvement in firearms and artillery, known losses in European conflict so far are not as great in percentage of killed as in our own civil war ☙ Death rates in time of peace half that of armies in combat

EVER since the monumental conflicts in Europe began reports from the front have been describing enormous casualties among the belligerents, and yet, from the best figures thus far available, the losses do not appear anywhere to be so great, for the number of men engaged, as the losses on both sides in the American Civil War.

It is at present almost impossible to get anything like adequate information as to the number of men actually engaged, to say nothing of ascertaining what percentage of them has been killed, wounded or captured. While this is the case throughout all the zones of fighting, it is particularly true in the eastern theater, where claims are so extravagant and so conflicting that it is virtually impossible to form a satisfactory hypothesis.

One day comes the startling announcement that this brigade or that corps or the other army has been annihilated. The next day comes news that the same brigade or corps or army is at an entirely different place inflicting losses upon the enemy.

It is almost as bad in France. One day a dispatch from Paris declared that 150,000 Germans had fallen in the battle of Marne. The next day the German War Office declared that all casualties in the German ranks to date totalled less than 46,000. One day a correspondent in Berlin announced that 40,000 men, mostly English, has been captured at Maubeuge. Two or three days afterwards the British War Office announced that the total British killed, wounded and missing to date was 19,000. And so it goes.



55.5 OUT OF EVERY 1000 MEN WERE KILLED AT GETTYSBURG
55.6 OUT OF EVERY 1000 MEN AT THE AGE OF 49, DIE BEFORE REACHING, THE AGE OF 53
20.3 OUT OF EVERY 1000 MEN WERE KILLED AT CHANCELLORSVILLE

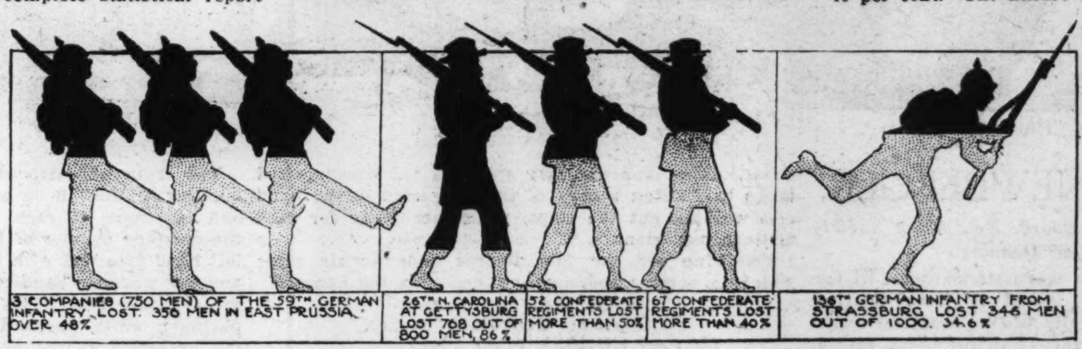
There seems to be an inevitable tendency to exaggerate losses in warfare, even in one's own ranks, as well as in the ranks of the enemy. So well known is this that when Lieutenant-Colonel Fox of the United States army, in 1898, published a complete statistical report of the losses in the war of 1861-65, he thought it advisable to print a word of explanation and apology to many Union veterans, who, he said, would be inclined to think their own losses much greater than the figures actually showed them to be.



3 COMPANIES (750 MEN) OF THE 59TH GERMAN INFANTRY LOST 356 MEN IN EAST PRUSSIA. OVER 48%
52 CONFEDERATE REGIMENTS LOST MORE THAN 50%
67 CONFEDERATE REGIMENTS LOST MORE THAN 40%

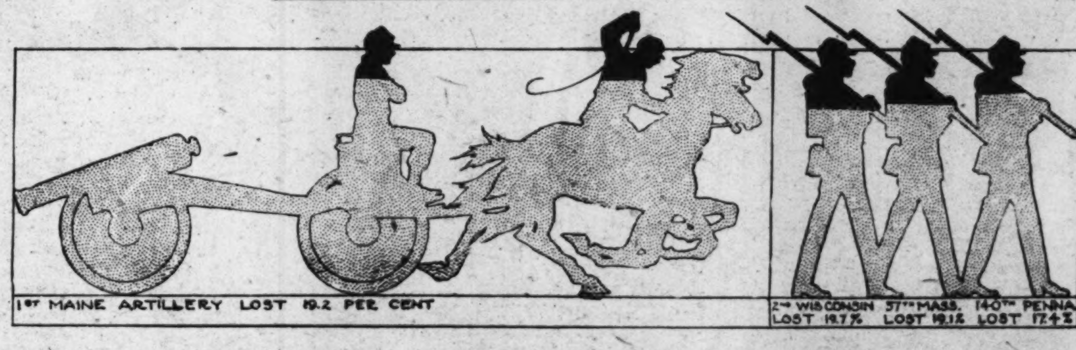
It is to be suspected in the present struggle that the war offices of all the countries are trying to minimize their losses as much as possible. The purpose is two-fold: to withhold valuable information from the opposition and to prevent discouragement at home. It may be assumed, also, that the casualties actually reported are in point of time far behind any given day on which the information is revealed. Thus, the German War Office reported a total loss on one day which was not mathematically consistent with a statement of the following day that the diurnal losses for the week had averaged 3200.

Sept. 11 the British War Office announced an aggregate casualty list of 19,000. Sept. 14 Berlin put the total German losses at 25,239. Yet on Sept. 12 the French War Office announced that their own losses had been greater than and out of all proportion to the British losses, yet still inferior to the German losses! And only three days after the Sept. 14 announcement—days when there had been a comparative lull in the fighting—Berlin gave the total German losses as 45,967. On the face of things it doesn't appear plausible that the Germans could have lost almost as many men in those three quiet days as they had lost in all of the rest of the war in all localities. Six days afterwards Germany put its total losses at 63,000.

Now, if one concedes the correctness of the French estimate of 150,000 German losses at the battle of the Marne—and certainly the French couldn't be expected, in this instance, to be trying to minimize the German casualties, the fact remains that even then the loss would not have been out of a reasonable proportion to the number of men engaged. It would not be more than 15 per cent. In other words, the percentage would have been less than that of the losses to the Union army in the Wilderness campaign and much less than the average Confederate percentage of losses throughout the entire Civil War.



If, on the other hand, the German War Office estimate of the losses were doubled, the percentage, of course, would be far less than the Civil War percentages. A fair attempt to strike a balance between the French claims on one hand and the German admissions on the other would indicate that the actual losses in killed, wounded and missing on the German side would not exceed 10 per cent.

In declaring the Germans had lost 150,000, the French also admitted 50,000 casualties to the allies. If it be supposed that the allies were in a slight numerical superiority, as has been asserted, and if the French estimate of 50,000 be doubled, as was done with the German official statement, the percentage on the side of the allies was somewhat under 10 per cent.

In the entire American Civil War about 2,700,000 troops were enrolled under the banners of the Union, while the Confederates had about 750,000. By no means all of the Union soldiers were actually in real fighting, so that a fair estimate of the proportion of Union losses to men engaged would be something near 15 per cent. The Confederates lost more than 30 per cent.

All of this does not show, however, that there has not been terrific and sanguinary fighting in Europe. Percentages for a whole war or a whole campaign can scarcely be applied to individual struggles, where the losses will far exceed the percentages for the campaigns. Yet, from what figures are at present available it does not appear that even in this respect is the present conflict bloodier than was the war of the States.

There have been reports of wholesale annihilation of detachments of troops, yet figures have been wanting. What, however, has been described as one of the most appalling slaughters happened in a battle in which the One Hundred and Thirty-first German Infantry lost 1141 men, including six officers. A German regiment is considerably more than double the size of an American regiment, being about 3300. This regiment, then, lost a little more than 34 per cent of its strength.

The Twenty-sixth North Carolina Regiment of 800 men went into the battle of Gettysburg with its full strength. It emerged with the loss of 768 men. A single company of three officers and 84 men was represented, when the struggle was finished, by one private soldier.

There were 20 regiments which suffered a 15 per cent loss on the Union side for the entire Civil War. The Second Wisconsin had the greatest loss of any regimental command on the Northern side. It went in with 1203 men and came out with 965, a loss of 19.7 per cent. The First Maine, heavy artillery, lost 19.2; the Fifty-seventh Massachusetts 19.1. The 140th Pennsylvania came next with 17.4.

On the Confederate side there were 52 regiments which lost more than 50 per cent and 67 which lost more than 40 per cent. The nature of that struggle is emphasized when it is remembered that the Confederate commands generally lost greater percentages of men than Union commands, yet the total Confederate loss for the war was between 60,000 and 100,000 under the Union losses. This is explained in part by the fact that Confederate regiments were smaller numerically than the Union.

Another thing must be remembered: That of all items listed under the general term "casualties," the soldiers actually killed are much fewer than those wounded and captured. It seems fair to assume that, with modern hospital arrangements, the percentage of deaths among the wounded will be smaller than it was in the Civil War. Col. Fox, in the book above mentioned, gives some interesting figures to show the relation of killed to wounded in the Civil War.

The highest percentage on the Union side was at the battle of Arkansas Post, a relatively minor engagement, where 6.7 per cent of the soldiers hit died. The next was at Missionary Ridge, where the percentage was 6.2. Petersburg came next with 5.6; the Wilderness and Cedar Creek next with 5.3; Iuka, 5.1; Cold Harbor, 4.9; Spottsylvania, 4.9; Chaplin Hills, 4.8; Fort Donelson, 4.8; Shiloh, 4.7, followed in the order named.

The largest number of Union soldiers killed in one regiment in one battle was at Gettysburg, where the First Minnesota Regiment lost 224 men out of 262. The First New Jersey lost 116 out of 432 men at Spotsylvania, and the Twenty-fifth Massachusetts lost 220 out of 310 at Cold Harbor. The First Maine lost 210 men at Petersburg.

These figures are illuminating when compared with official German admissions of recent losses. Three companies (750 men) of the Fifty-ninth Infantry lost 356 men in East Prussia. The 136th Infantry from Strasburg lost 346 out of a battalion of 1000 men. These are the greatest individual regimental losses thus far bulletined by the German War Office.

From these analyses of the available returns, the conclusion must be forced that while the losses of life in the recent struggle bid to aggregate by far more than the losses in any previous war, the struggle thus far has not proved relatively more sanguinary than previous great wars.

Chances of Life in War and in Times of Peace

FIGURES illuminating the actual war cost in life as compared with mortality in ordinary human experience recently were published. They showed that at the battle of Gettysburg the death rate to 1000 was 55.5, the highest in 21 Civil War battles. Life insurance figures show that for every 1000 men living at the age of 49, the number of those who die before reaching the age of 53, will be 55.6. That is to say, the chance of a man getting killed at Gettysburg was about the same as the chance of a man of 49 not living to see his fifty-third birthday.

The death percentage to the thousand at Chancellorsville was 20.3. That is, the chance of a man getting killed at that sanguinary struggle was the same as the chance of a man of 42 not living to see his forty-fourth birthday.

Similarly, the chance every man had of getting killed at the battle of Shiloh was the chance a man of 30 has of not reaching his thirty-fifth birthday.

Death Rates in War and Peace

The average death rate in Germany is probably 20 per 1000, or 1,200,000 a year. Kill 1,000,000 soldiers and you have only doubled for one year the normal outflow. In four years, if the normal rate were lessened from 20 per cent to 15 per cent, the loss would be numerically made up. The loss of life, the loss of time, the loss of property in a six-months' war is after all insignificant compared to the great enduring life of a nation.

Heaviest Losses in Civil War

THE present European war has revealed nothing more sanguinary in losses to individual commands than the American Civil War furnished. The largest single regimental loss happened to the First Minnesota Regiment, at Gettysburg, when, out of 262 men engaged, 224 were killed or wounded.

In that same battle the Twenty-sixth South Carolina (Southern) out of a total force of 800, lost 768 killed, wounded and missing.

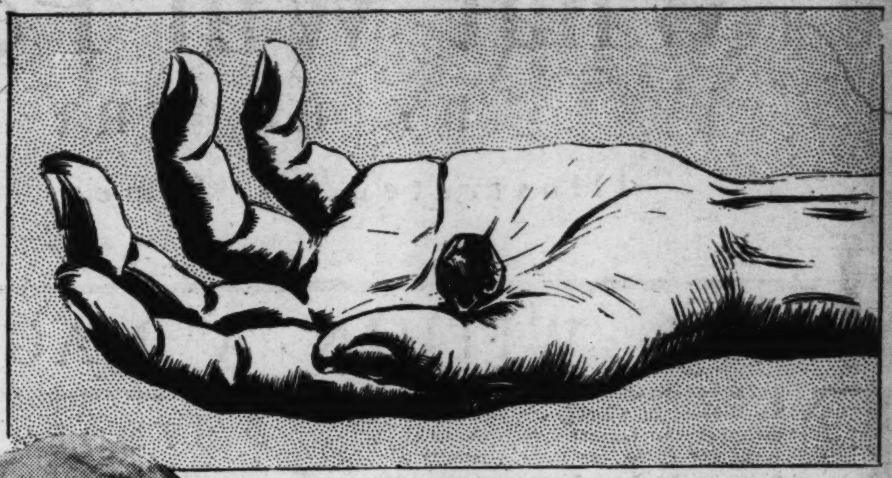
NEW WAY TO MAKE DIAMONDS

French scientist perfects electrical process which, if it could be continued for seventy-two hours, would produce a brilliant weighing from fifty to sixty carats . .



An actual diamond, enlarged fifteen times; produced by new electrical process.

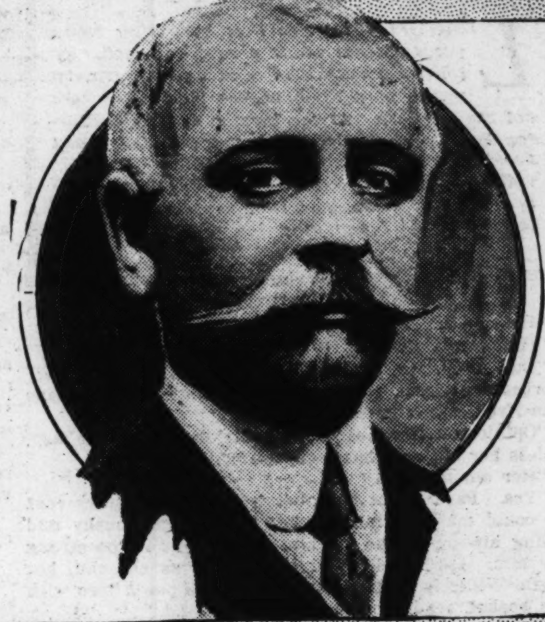
ARTIFICIAL diamonds are thought to be a possibility, at least, diamonds that can in no degree be told from pure natural stones. A French scientist, E. de Boismenu, has announced a new process of making them, and stones produced by his method have been pronounced genuine by disinterested experts.

Many years ago Moissan, another scientist, announced that he had created diamonds, but his stones were so infinitesimal in size and produced at such enormous expenditures of time, labor and money that the process did not appear generally practicable. If what De Boismenu claims for his method is true, it is not improbable that the future will see the manufacture of diamonds on a large scale.

It was considerably more than a century ago that Lavoisier discovered that the diamond, hardest, brightest, most brilliant of earth's jewels, was a first cousin to the commonest lump of coal. The basis of both of them was the substance known as carbon. But in the slow evolution of countless centuries by different processes, one of them became an aristocratic gem and the other merely inflammable dirt.

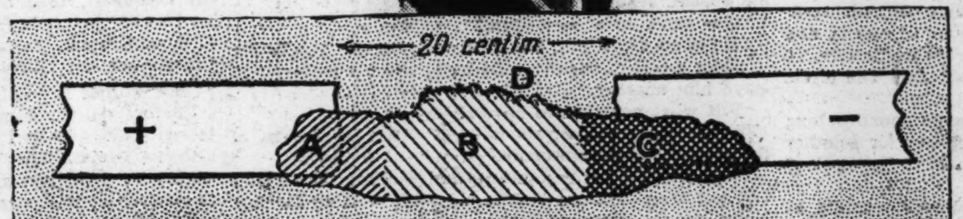
No sooner had this been discovered than savants began trying to find out the secret of the different developments of the same thing. With something of a show of reason they argued that all they had to discover was the method of doing in a brief time what nature had required thousands of years to accomplish.

They remembered that diamonds are found only in certain earth formations in South Africa, India, and Brazil. They deduced that, from its appearance, the diamond must have been a liquid carbon before it became a solid carbon and their first problem was to learn how to liquify carbon.



E. de Boismenu.

Now there is a chemical peculiarity in all forms of carbon and that is what is called its affinity for oxygen. That is, whenever free carbon meets oxygen, it instantly combines with it. For this reason it has been found well-nigh impossible to make a liquid out of any form of carbon. Heat a lump of coal and, instead of melting it as you melt a lump of iron, you set it ablaze and the carbon passes instantly from a solid form into a gaseous one.



A—Effect of electrolysis on calcium carbide. The cooled carbide is a compact mass of the positive pole. At B it preserves its primitive state. At C it is freely decomposed and at D are superficial traces of the electrical action.

But carbon, when heated, will also combine with certain other minerals, such as iron, manganese, silver, potassiums, sodiums, lithiums, bariums, calciums, etc. Thus, a molten mass of iron at a temperature of 1600 degrees will dissolve and absorb 3 per cent of carbon. Raise the temperature to 2000 degrees and it will absorb 4 per cent, but when the temperature is again reduced to 1600 it will discharge the extra 1 per cent.

Now it is evident that the combination at 2000 degrees is liquid and that the carbon part of it therefore must also be liquid. The scientists believed that in the cooling process the disgorged 1 per cent of carbon would be a solid reproduced from liquid carbon—in other words a diamond.

The problem then was how to keep it intact without letting oxygen into it in the cooling process. It came to be believed that some such thing has happened in nature when liquid carbon, through some accidental formation of the earth's crust which prevented the almost universal admission of oxygen. Wherever this had happened a diamond had been produced.

Moissan believed this could be done by exerting tremendous pressure on the liquid iron-carbon combination. He inclosed within a steel cube all the liquid it would contain. This was heated a tremendous degree, and then cooled as rapidly as possible. Because of the pressure thus created he actually produced microscopic diamond crystals. The cost of this, however, showed that the method had no commercial value.

De Boismenu declares he has found a way of doing the same thing which does not in any way depend upon pressure. It is based on the employment of an electric furnace to heat his metal combination to the desired temperature and then to separate the solidified carbon from the other substances by electrolysis. In a recent French periodical he described his process as follows:

"We chose a substance very rich in carbon, calcium carbide, in which there is a relation of 62.5 of calcium and 37.5 of carbon. Thus in a kilogram of carbide one ought theoretically to isolate 375 grams of carbon, whereas in the treatment of carbureted melted irons as above described one can only isolate the carbon in excess of the saturation.

"The carbide to be treated was placed on a bed of quicklime in an electric resistance furnace and through it was passed a current of low voltage and high amperage. When a temperature of 2700 degrees was reached the carbide liquified. The electrolysis action from the dynamos under a continuous current separated the elements of the mixture. Conforming to the rules of electrolysis, the calcium was drawn towards the negative pole. There it burned, producing the characteristic rose flame. On the other hand, the carbon, liberated at the positive pole, crystallized in the form of a diamond, within the clinker coming from the decomposition of the carbide. Such, in outline, is the method we applied with success to achieve the synthesis of the diamond.

"Installed within the laboratory for this work were two dynamos, each capable of from 800 to 1200 amperes, under a tension of between fifteen and twenty volts. They were driven by a motor. It required fifty or so kilowatts.

"As for the furnace, following the lines of the Atcheson furnace with horizontal electrodes used for the preparation of carborundum, it consisted of a rectangular trough of fireproof material, about three-fourths full of quicklime dust, forming a protecting and isolated base. Two cylindrical electrodes, 156 millimeters in diameter, passed through the center and were arranged in such a way as to be easily moved back and forth by the hand. The customary accessories, tables, rheostats, measuring implements, etc., completed the outfit.

"After 10 fruitless essays, in which we learned the essential details of operation, we obtained the first definite, favorable result. On that day the furnace had worked correctly and regularly for six hours, at the constant rate of 800 amperes under a pressure of 32 volts and the liquid compound has been freely decomposed by electrolysis.

"Palpable results appeared next day when we examined the mass formed by the cooled carbide. Its general appearance was characteristic. At the positive pole, the carbide seemed, in its color and the size of its crystallization, to be even richer than when it was put into the furnace. At the negative pole, however, there was nothing which bore the characteristic marks of calcium carbide. It was a sort of black cinder, light, friable, lamellated in spots, which, at the greater distances from the heat, took on a glassy consistency of gray-blue color. It was pierced by holes like a sponge. This cinder had totally lost power of reaction in water, proving it contained no calcium carbide.

"All of this cinder was broken up and subjected to a careful examination. After it had been pulverized and dried, we obtained a gray powder, in the midst of which we finally had the keen satisfaction of seeing the flash of little crystals. A simple manipulation permitted us to isolate about forty of these, varying in size from a millimeter to a millimeter and a half, with a large number of still smaller size.

"Examined under the micrscope, at an enlargement of 20 diameters, these crystals showed all the exterior appearances of true diamonds. Some of them revealed the characteristic facets of the diamond and reflected lights just as diamonds do. Extremely hard, they scratched glass and steel. Plunged into iodide of methylene, they showed a density of about 3:5 and sank slowly to the bottom. The diamond alone of known transparent crystals will sink in this dense liquid. We were able then, in advance of the official examinations which were to confirm our conclusions later, to declare that at last we had realized the synthesis of the diamonds.

"Another experiment the next day, under the same conditions, except that the exposure in the furnace lasted half an hour longer, confirmed these results. Encouraged, we pursued the series of experiments, learning better methods of operation and prolonging the time of exposure. From the moment when it became merely a matter of crystallization, it seemed apparent that increase in size of the stones was a matter of prolonging the exposure.

"Later we had startling confirmation of this theory. April 20 and 24 the operation was continued for nine hours and we got diamonds of appreciably larger size. We followed with other experiments lasting 11 and 12 hours, always at the average power of 800 amperes and from 28 to 32 volts, getting crystals larger and larger. Unfortunately, we were unable to get enough current during the hours when the public lighting made heavy demands on the power, so that we were unable to prolong the experiments beyond 12 consecutive hours.

"From April 13 to June 5 we made 17 experiments, of which four were unsuccess-

III. WITHIN A MAGIC INCLOSURE.

SYNOPSIS

LIEUT. FORBES sees New York after many years absence and it goes to his head. He follows a lady, who is in a motor car, by means of a Fifth avenue stage; but does not see her face. At the theater that night Murray Ten Eyck introduces him to Persis Cabot and her friends. They invite him to go "trotting" with them and he accepts. Persis Cabot apparently snubs him in the park next morning; but he is invited to meet her at a tea in the afternoon.

FORBES had planned to visit the Army and Navy Club, in which he held a membership, but now he preferred to lunch alone—yet not alone, for he was entertaining a guest—the ghost of Persis Cabot was nestling at his elbow and conspiring with him to devise a still newer thing than the dancing tea or the tango luncheon—a before-breakfast one-step. In fancy he was now threading the maze between the tables with her

But he paid for only one luncheon. The bill, however, shocked him into a realization that he could not long afford such fodder as he had been buying for himself. He decided to get his savings deposited somewhere before thay had slipped through his fingers.

On his way to New York he had asked advice on this important question of a bank, and had been recommended to an institution of fabulous strength. He found at the bank that there was a minimum, below which an account was not welcome. His painful self-denials had enabled him just to clear that minimum with no more interval than a skillful hurdler leaves as he grazes the bar.

He felt poorer than ever for this reminder of his penury, and he almost slunk from the bank. Just outside he stumbled upon Ten Eyck, who greeted him with a surprised:

"Do you bank here?"

"I was just opening an account," Forbes answered.

"Pardon my not lifting my hat before," said Ten Eyck. "I didn't know your middle name was Croesus."

Forbes could only shrug his shoulders with deprecation. He had no desire to pose as a man of means, and yet he had too much pride to publish his mediocrity.

"I'll call for you at 4, Mr. Rothschild," said Ten Eyck. "Got a date at Sherry's here. Good-by!"

The afternoon promised to be unconscionably long in reaching 4 o'clock, and Forbes set out for another saunter down the avenue. There was a mysterious change.

He did not explain it so easily to himself, nor did he understand why the shop windows had become immediately so interesting. Yesterday a spadeful of diamonds dumped upon a velvet cloth was only a spadeful of diamonds to him, and it was nothing more. This afternoon, however, he kept saying: "What would she think if I gave her that crown of rubies and emeralds? Does she like sapphires, I wonder?"

HE found himself standing in front of the jewelers' windows and trying to read the prices on the the little tags. He had already selected one ring as an engagement ring, when he managed by much craning to make out the price. He fell back as if a fist had reached through the glass to smite him. If he could have drawn out his bank account twice he could not have paid for it.

He gave up looking at diamonds and solaced himself by the thought that before he bankrupted the United States army with buying her an engagement ring, he had better get her in love with him a little.

This train of thought impelled him to pause now before the windows of haberdashers. Without being at all a fop, he had a soldier's love of splendor, and he saw nothing effeminate in the bolts of rainbow clippings which men were invited to use for shirts. He looked amorously at great squares of silk meant to be knotted into neckscarves, of which all but a narrow inch or two would be concealed. And he saw socks that were as scandalously brilliant as spun turquoises or knitted opals.

From one window a hand seemed to reach out, not to smite, but to seize him by his overworked scarf and hale him within. He departed $5 the poorer and one piece of silk the richer, and hurried back to his room, ashamed of his vanity.

On his way thither he remembered that he was still an officer in the regular establishment, and the first thing he did on his return to his room was to compose a formal report of his arrival in New York City. He sent it to the post at Governor's Island, so that in case a war broke out unexpectedly, an anxious nation might know where to find him.

But that was for next week. For a few days more he was exempt; he was a free man. And she wanted to dance with him again! She would not even wait for night to fall. She would dance with him in the daylight—with tea as an excuse!

He began feverishly to robe himself for this festival. Luckily for him and his sort, men's fashions are a republic, and Forbes' well-shaped, though last year's black morning coat, the pin his mother gave him years ago skewering the scarf he had just bought, his waistcoat with the little white edging, his heavily iron striped trousers, and his last night's top hat freshly pressed, clothed him as smartly as the richest fop in town.

FORBES had devoted such passionate attention to the proper knotting of that square of silk that he was hardly ready when the room telephone announced that Mr. Ten Eyck was calling for Mr. Forbes.

But his pains had been so well spent that Ten Eyck, meeting him in the lobby, lifted his hat with mock servility again, and murmured:

"Oh, you millionaire! Will you deign to have a drink with a hick like me?"

Forbes pleasantly requested him not to be a fool, but the flattery was irresistible.

"It's Persis' own party," Ten Eyck explained; "but I have sad news for you: Little Willie isn't invited. He's being punished for being so naughty last night."

"He acted as if he owned Miss Cabot," said Forbes.

"He usually does."

"But he doesn't, does he?—doesn't own her, I mean?" Forbes demanded, with an anxiety that did not escape Ten Eyck, who answered:

"Opinions differ. He'll probably get her some day, unless her old man has a change of luck."

"Her old man?"

"Yes. Papa Cabot has always lived up to every cent he could make or inherit; but he's getting mushy and losing his grip. The draft in Wall street is too strong for him. Persis will hold on as long as she can, but Little Willie is waiting right under the peach tree with his basket, ready for the first high wind."

"She can't love a—a—him?"

"He is an awful pill, but he's well coated. His father left him a pile of sugar a mile high, and his mother will leave him another."

"But what has that to do with love?"

"Who said anything about love? This is the era of the modern business woman."

They reached the restaurant, and, finding that Persis had not arrived, stood on the sidewalk waiting for her. Many people were coming up in taxicabs, or private cars, or on foot. They were all in a hurry to be dancing.

"It's a healthier sport than sitting round watching somebody else play baseball—or Ibsen," Ten Eyck observed, answering an imaginary critic; and then he exclaimed:

"Here she is!" as a landaulet with the top lowered sped down the street. The traffic rules compelled it to go beyond and come up with the curb on its right. As it passed Forbes caught a glimpse of three hats. One of them was a man's derby, one of them had a sheaf of goura, one of them was a straw flower pot, with a white feather like a question mark stuck in it. His heart buzzed with reminiscent anxiety. He turned quickly and noted the number of the car, "48150, N. Y. 1913." The woman he had followed up the avenue was one of those two.

THE chauffeur turned sharply, stopped, backed, and brought the landaulet around with the awkwardness of an alligator. A footman opened the door to Bob Fielding, Winifred Mather and Persis Cabot.

The answer to the query-plume was Persis. Forbes saw a kind of mystic significance in it.

Winifred, as she put out her hand to him, turned to Persis:

"You didn't tell me our li'l snojer man was coming."

"I wasn't sure we could get him," said Persis, and gave Forbes her hand, her smile and a cordial word. "Terribly nice of you to come."

He seized her hand to wring it with ardor, but its pressure was so lax that he refrained. His eyes, however, were so fervid that she looked away. For lack of support his hopes dropped like a flying machine that meets a "hole in the air." She was talking the most indifferent nothing as they went up the stairs to the dancing room, a largish space with an encircling gallery. As usual, the dancing floor was a clearing in a thicket of tables. It was swarming already with couples engaged in the same jig as the night before.

When Forbes arrived a certain couple whirled madly off the dancing floor straight into the midst of Persis' guests, with the havoc of a strike in a game of tenpins.

The young man's heel ground one of the buttons of Forbes' shoe deep into his instep, and the young girl's flying hand smote him in the nose. He needed all his self-control to repress a yowl of pain and dismay. Persis must have suffered equal battery, but she quietly straightened out the dizzy girl and smiled.

The girl under whose feet the floor still eddied clung to Persis and stared at her a second, then gasped:

"Oh, Miss Cabot, is it you? I must have nearly killed you. Can you ever, ever forgive me?"

Persis patted her hand and turned her round to Forbes: "You'd better ask Mr. Forbes. You gave him a lovely black eye."

The girl acknowledge the introduction with a duck and a prayer of wild appeal:

"Oh, Mr. Forbes, what a ghastly, ghastly shame! Can you ever, ever forgive me?"

FORBES smiled at her melodramatic agitation: "It's nothing at all, Miss—Miss—I never liked this nose, anyway. I only wish you had hit it harder, Miss"——

"Miss Neff," Persis prompted. "You met her mother last night. Were you expecting to meet your mother here this afternoon, Alice?"

"Good Lord, I should say not! Why?"

"I just wondered. She is to meet us here."

"When? In heaven's name! When?"

"She ought to be here now."

Alice thrust backward a palsied hand and, clutching the young man she had danced with, dragged him forward. He was shaking hands with Ten Eyck, and brought him along.

"Stowe! Stowe!" Alice exclaimed, with a tragic fire that did not greatly alarm the young man; he was apparently used to little else from her.

"Yes, dear," he answered, with a lofty sweetness; and she cried:

"Oh, honey, what do you suppose?"

"What, dear?"

"That awful mother of mine is expected here any moment!"

"She'll kill us if she finds us together; isn't there some other way out?"

"I could go down the stairs the waiters come up," said Stowe; "but how will you get home?"

"Oh, mother will get me home all right, never fear," said Alice. "Run for your life, honey. I'll have my maid call you on the phone later."

The young man gave her one long, sad look, fairly reeking with desperate kisses and embraces. Then he vanished into the crowd.

Alice must have remarked the comments in Forbes' eyes, for she turned to him:

"You mustn't misunderstand the poor boy, Mr. Forbes. Mr. Webb is as brave as a lion, but he runs away on my account. He knows that my mother will give me no rest if she finds it out."

"I understand perfectly," said Forbes. "There are times when the better a soldier is the faster he runs!"

"Mr. Forbes is a soldier," Persis explained.

"Before mother comes we must rehearse what we're to say. She thinks I went to one of those lectures on Current Topics. They're so very improving that mother can't bear to go herself. She sends me and then forgets to ask me what it was all about. So I sneaked it today and met Stowe."

Persis shook her head and turned to Forbes: "Doesn't it sound old-fashioned, a young girl afraid of her parents?"

"Quite medieval," Forbes agreed.

"Oh, she did till his father's will was probated. His insurance was immense, but his debts were immenser. So poor Stowe is dumped upon the world with hardly a cent. I wouldn't mind starving with Stowe, but mother is so materialistic! She wants to marry me off to that old Senator Tait."

"Dreadful?" snorted Winifred, who had listened in silence. "Old? Senator Tait is neither dreadful nor old. He is a cavalier, and in the prime of his powers."

"You can have him!" snapped Alice, with a flare of temper that she regretted instantly, and the more sincerely since she knew that Winifred had long been angling vainly and desperately for the Senator. There was a bitterer sarcasm in her retort than she meant, but Winifred knew what Alice was thinking, and canceled it by meeting it frankly:

"I wish I could have him. God knows I'd prefer him to any of these half-baked whippersnappers that"——

"Winifred!" Persis murmured, subduingly.

Forbes spoke very solemnly: "Pardon my asking, but do you really mean that Senator Tait is—is proposing for your hand?"

"So my awful mother says."

"It doesn't sound like the Senator Tait I used to know."

"You knew him well?" Persis asked, with a quick eagerness that did not quite conceal a note of surprise.

Forbes caught it, and answered somewhat icily: "I had that privilege. He and my father used to ride to the hounds together. In fact, they were together when my father's horse threw him and fell on him and crushed him to death. Senator Tait brought the body home to my poor mother. He was very dear to us all."

Persis looked what sympathy she could for such remote suffering. And Forbes was something less of a stranger. Also he had moved one step closer to her degree.

He had appeared first under the auspices of Murray Ten Eyck, who guaranteed him as an officer in the army. He had demonstrated his own dignity and magnetism. And now his family was sponsored by an old-time friendship with Senator Tait, a very Warwick of American royalty.

UNCONSCIOUSLY Ten Eyck gave him another diploma also, though his motive was rather one of rebuke to Persis for her little tang of surprise.

"You needn't raise you brows, Persis, because Forbsey knows Senators and things," he said. "He's a plutocrat, too. I caught him depositing a million dollars in one of our best little banks today."

Forbes had no desire to obtain the reputation of money under false pretenses. Yet he could not delicately discuss his exact poverty.

"Is anybody at home?" Mrs. Neff spoke into the stillness as if she had materialized from nothing. Nobody had noticed her approach, and everyone was startled. To Forbes her sharp voice came as a rescue from incantation.

"I'm mad and I'm hungry as the devil—oh, pardon me! I didn't see my angel child. Alice, darling, how on earth did you get here?"

"Ten Eyck was quietly dipping his fingers into his own glass and flicking water on Persis' face."

"But, mother dear, I was just"——

"Don't tell it, my child! I know what you're going to say: that Persis picked you up and dragged you here by the hair of your head, and Persis will back you up, of course, like the dear little liar she is. But I'll save you the trouble, darlings. Where is he? Is he still here or did he learn of my approach and flit?"

"He! Who?" said everyone zealously, with a stare of innocence sadly overdone.

"He—who?" Mrs. Neff mocked. "He—haw! Oh, but you're a putrid lot of actors. So he has been here. Well, I mention no names, but if a certain young person whose initials are Stowe Webb wants to meet a little old lady named Trouble, let him come out from under the table."

The waiter brought a tiny flask, a tall glass and a siphon, and offered to mix her a potion; but she motioned him aside and arranged it to her own taste. The band struck up, and she sipped hastily as she talked.

"That's the most insulting music I ever heard, and I'm just mad enough to dance well. If nobody has a prior claim on this young soldier man, he's mine. Mr. Forbes, would you mind supporting your grandmother around the room once or twice?"

The blare of the band was as effectual as a Gabriel's trumpet opening graves. From the tables the dead came to life and took on stilts if not wings.

But Alice could not smile. She folded her hands and sighed. "It's awful to be a widow when they play that tango."

Alice protested: "But we can't leave you alone."

PERSIS beckoned to a lonesome-looking acquaintance at another table, and he came to her with wings outstretched. She locked pinions with him and they were away.

As Persis was twirled past Forbes now and again her eyes would meet his with a gaze of deep inquiry.

And he was thinking so earnestly of her that at some indefinitely later period he was almost surprised to find that Mrs. Neff was in his arms, and that they were footing it intricately through a restless maze. He realized, also, that he had not spoken to her yet.

He hardly knew what to say, so he danced a little harder and swept her off her feet, till she was gasping for breath and pleading:

"Stop, stop! I'm afraid I'm only an old woman after all. And I didn't want you to know."

He led her to a chair, where she sank exhausted and panting hard. By the time the dance was over and the rest had returned, she was herself again.

"My new friend is the love of a tangoist," she babbled across her highball. "If that infernal committee meeting hadn't kept me so late I could have had more. Are you all going to the Tuesday tonight?"

They all were.

"I was to have taken Alice, but I'm going to put her to bed without any supper. I'll take Mr. Forbes instead. Will you come? That's right. Sorry I can't accept your invitation to dinner, but I'm booked. What about the opera tonight? It's 'Tristan and Isolde' with Fremstad. Senator Tait was to have taken us, but he can't go, so Alice won't care to go. He sent me his box and I have all those empty chairs to fill. Mr. Forbes can fill one. You can, can't you?" He nodded helplessly, and she handed him a ticket out of a handbag as ridiculously crowded as a boy's first pocket. "It begins at a quarter to 8. I can't possibly be there before 9. You can go when you want to. Who else can come?"

Persis said that she was dining at Winifred's with Willie, and added: "He hates the opera, but if I can drag him along I'll come. And if I can't I'll come anyway."

Winifred accepted for Bob. Ten Eyck "had a dinner job on," but promised to drop in when he could.

Having completed her quorum, and distributed her tickets, Mrs. Neff made ready to depart by attacking her highball again. The music began before she had finished it, and Forbes rose before Persis with an old-time formula:

"May I have the honor?"

"Traitress! It's my turn with the li'l snojer man."

She was his again in the brief mock-marriage of the dance. His very muscles welcomed her with such exultance that he must forcibly restrain them from too ardent a clasp. The whole mood of the music was triumph, overweening boastfulness, and irresistible arrogance. It was difficult to be afraid of anything in that baronial walkaround.

But Forbes was afraid of silence. It gave imagination too loose a rein. To keep himself from loving her too well, and offending her again after she had forgiven him once, he had recourse to language, the old concealer of thought.

He astonished Persis and himself by his first words:

"Don't you ever sleep, Miss Cabot?"

She threw him a startled glance. "Do I look so jaded as all that?"

He was so upset that he lost step and regained it with awkwardness of foot and word. "No, no, it's be—because you look—you look as if you slept for—forever. I don't mean that exact—exactly, either."

"Then what do you mean, Mr. Forbes?"

"I mean: I left you this morning about 4 o'clock in one costume, and I saw you at 8 in another."

"At 8 this morning? Oh, yes. I was riding with my father. Were you riding, too? I didn't see you."

"Oh, yes, you did. I stood on the bridge at daybreak. And you looked at me and cut me dead."

"Did I really? I must have been asleep."

"Far from it. Your eyes were as bright as—as"——

"Oh, I had to get up. It is poor dad's only chance nowadays. He's awfully busy in the street, and he's so worried. And he needs the exercise. He won't take it unless I go along."

There was an interlude of tenderness in the music. He responded to it.

"That's very beautiful and self-sacrificing of you. But how can you keep up the pace?"

"I can't much longer. I'm almost all in. The season is nearly over, though."

"You must be made of iron," he said.

"Am I so heavy as all that?"

"Oh, no, no; you are—you are"—— But he could not say anything without saying too much.

Again he lost the rhythm, and suffered agonies of confusion in recovering it. But the tango music put him on his feet again. How could he be humble to that uppish, vainglorious tune, that toreador pomposity?

PERSIS herself was like a pouter pigeon strutting and preening her high breast. All the dancers on the floor were proclaiming their grandeur, playing the peacock.

Forbes grew consequential, too, as he and Persis marched haughtily forward shoulder to shoulder, and outer hands clasped, then paused for a kick, whirled on their heels and retraced their steps with the high knee-action of thoroughbreds winning a blue ribbon.

Then each hopped awhile on one foot, the other foot kicking between the partner's knees. Then they dipped to the floor. As he swept her back to her full height, the music turned sly and sarcastic. It gave an unreal color to his words:

"Will you pardon me one question?"

"Probably not. What is it?"

"Didn't you wear this same hat yesterday?"

Her head came up with a glare. "Isn't that rather catty remark for a man to make?"

"No hat is beautiful two days in succession. Its unkind of you, though, to notice it, and rub it in."

"For heaven's sake don't take it that way. I—I followed this hat of yours for miles and miles yesterday."

"You followed this hat?"

"Yes."

Persis could not but be pleased, though she tried to disguise her delight by saying:

"It must have been a shock to you when you saw what was really under this hat."

"If you could only know how I—how you—how beautiful you—how—I wish you'd let me say it!"

"You've said it," she murmured. His confusion revealed an ardor too profound to be rebuked or resisted. She luxuriated in it, and rather sighed than smiled: "I'm glad you like me."

IT was a more girlish speech than she usually made. Unwittingly she crept a trifle closer to him, and breathed so deeply that he felt her bosom swell against him with a strangely gentle power. By immeasurably subtle degrees the barrier between them dissolved, or rather shifted until it surrounded them. They were no longer strangers. They were together within a magic inclosure.

He understood the new communion, and an impulse swept him to crush her against him. He fought it so hard that his arm quivered. She felt the battle in his muscles and rejoiced in the duel of his two selves, both her's. She knew that she had a lover as well as a guardian in his heart.

The light burned about them like a flaming rose. The other couples had paused and retreated, staring at them; but they did not heed their isolation. They swooped and careened and twirled till they were blurred like a spinning top, till they were exhausted and wavering in their flight.

At length he found that she was breathless, pale, squandered. She hung all her weight on his arm, and grew so heavy that it ached.

Just in time the music came to an abrupt end, and the danse macabre was done. But the floor still wheeled beneath his feet, and he staggered as he held her limp and swaying body.

She shook the dizziness from her eyes, and put away his arm, but seized it again. He supported her to the table and guided her to a seat. Then he caught up a glass and put it to her wan mouth.

TEN EYCK, who had been watching them from his place, shoved a chair against Forbes' relaxing knees and set a tall glass in his hand, saying:

"Gad, old man, you need a drink!"

Forbes took a gulp of a highball and sat staring at Persis. Ten Eyck was quietly dipping his fingers into his own glass and flicking water on Persis' face. She regained her self-control wonderingly. Her lips tried pluckily to smile, though her eyes studied Forbes with a kind of terrified anger—more at herself than at him. He met them with a gaze of adoration and dread. Persis Cabot was the wonder of her world for being at the same time so cordial and so cold, so lightly amused, so extravagant and yet apparently so immune to the follies of passion. She was thought to be incapable of losing either her head or her heart. Mrs. Neff called her "fireproof."

Willie Enslee was universally accepted as her fiance, simply because his wealth and his family prestige were greater than anybody's else in her circle. This made him the logical candidate. Everybody knew that he was mad about Persis in his petty way. But nobody expected Persis to fall madly in love with Willie, or to let that failure keep her from marrying him.

And now Forbes appeared from the wilderness and strange influences began to work upon her. She began to study the man with increasing interest. She resented his effect upon her, and could not resist it. He was like a sharp knife, or a loaded revolver, or the edge of a cliff, quiet and unpursuing, yet latent with danger, terrifying and therefore fascinating.

Scores of men had embraced her as she danced with them and some of them had muttered burning love into her ear. But they left her cold. This man said little or less, and he held her almost shyly; yet she felt a strange kindling in his touch, saw in his eye a smoldering.

She was afraid to dance with him again. When she had regained her self-control she made a pretext to escape out of the lateness of the hour and the necessity of dressing for dinner and the opera.

She offered to drop Forbes and Ten Eyck at their destinations, and they clambered into her car with Winifred and Bob. Forbes was all too soon deposited at his hotel, where the footman and the starter hailed Persis with affectionate homage and Forbes with a new courtesy because of her. Forbes lingered at the curb to watch her away. As the landaulet sped toward Fifth avenue all he saw of her was the fluttering white interrogation mark.

Chapter IV of this most engrossing romance, in which the "fireproof" Persis Cabot loses both her head and her heart, will appear in the Sunday Post-Dispatch Magazine next Sunday.

THE TERRIFYING CHARGE OF THE TURCOS

THE famous Turcos, native regiments from Algeria and Tunis under the command of French officers, prefer to come to hand-to-hand grips with the enemy. In trenches taken by them the Germans show few bullet wounds, but are killed with the bayonet or the rifle butt. "They are as lean as starved wolves," wrote Richard Harding Davis. "Man for man, no white man, drugged for years with meat and alcohol, is a physical match for one of these Turcos, who eat dates and drink water."

UHLANS AMBUSHED IN A VILLAGE STREET

A TROOP of Uhlans, riding in close formation into a French frontier town, dashed into the mouth of a machine gun ambuscade. On the back of the sketch from which the drawing on this page was elaborated, Frederic Villiers, an artist at the front, wrote: "Over 600 horsemen were mowed down by our machine guns. The street was simply yards deep with dead." The guns, two o which swept the street, were screened behind barricades of timber and barrels.

THE FADELESS TINTS

Human interest motives, for the most part amiable, furnish the key to the disentaglement of this unique case. The famous "Fadeless Tints," of dyestuff commerce, suddenly begin to fade, no one knows why, on the precise date predicted by a person who committed suicide from some motive likewise unfathomable. The panic and disaster caused by the deterioration of Blench's dyes brings one of its victims, a young gentleman named Spencer, to the casual attention of Dollops, who appeals on his behalf to Cleek, as to one infallible. Their confidence proves not misplaced, for the detective practically solves the riddle while his client is stating it to him; and a well-deserved reward fittingly crowns this brilliant tour de force.

IT was the one and only instance in which Dollops brought "the case."

Warm as were Cleek's feelings towards Narkom, he had not taken the superintendent into his confidence to the extent of either writing or cabling just when he might be expected to arrive in England again after he had successfully concluded the affair of the smuggling of the Amsterdam diamonds past the United States Customs; he wanted a holiday. So he wrote only to Dollops, who packed up what was required and hurried down to Liverpool a good three days earlier than was necessary. That was how he came to get in touch with the persons concerned in the case in question.

"Gov'ner, I ain't a sayin' how glad I am to see you again, sir, because there aren't words enough in the English language to do it," was the way in which he prefaced the matter while helping Cleek to make such preparations as were necessary for the proposed holiday. "But sometimes a body has two kinds of gladness over seein' of another body after they've been away, which is glad to see 'em for themselves, sir, and glad to see 'em for the sake of other parties."

"Hulloa!" ejaculated Cleek, glancing up from the business of tying a shoe lace. "Been promising my services to somebody, you young vagabond?"

"Not exactly a promisin' of 'em, sir—I wouldn't never go so far as that, gov'ner. But—I've made so bold as to say, sir, that if the gent will be at a certain place at a certain time this evenin', which place is here, sir, and will send up his name to me"——

"Well done, Master Precaution," interrupted Cleek with a laugh. "So there's no fear of anybody in this hotel suspecting that Mr. George Headland on the guest-book is other than what he appears?"

"No, sir. But the gent himself knows."

"So I suppose. Well, what is it all about, and how did you come to get mixed up with it?"

"Through a party, sir, wot I met at the theater the first night as I come here. He was sittin' next to me in the pit, sir, and a readin' summink in a newspaper whilst we was all a waitin' for the show to begin. I takes a peep at it; and when I ses wot it was—well, so 'elp me, gov'ner, I was faired bowled. It was about n, sir—about how you found out who'd murdered d Duchess of Heatherlands, sir. I give such a n I see that that the feller as was readin' of und and see me a starin' at the paper. 'Fair caution, that Cleek, ain't he?' says he. 'Do you think he's got second sight?' 'No,' says I. 'He ain't lost his first yet—he ain't old enough!'

"'How do you know that?' says he, sharp like. 'You ain't never met him, have you?' 'A deal o' times,' says I. 'There ain't no mystery as he can't get to the bottom of,' I says. 'Ain't there?' says he, half laughin', half dismal like. 'Lay you a tanner I could fetch him to someone wot'd give him a teaser. Silk dyer I am by trade, but on account of business a fallin' off, Blench's has laid me off with a hundred and twenty others. You know Blench's don't you?' he says. 'Big silk spinners and manufacturers over Crowe way—"Blench's fadeless tints, warranted to stand all chemical actions, resist sunlight, defy water and to retain their original delicacy undiminished and unfaded until worn to rags." Well, they did once, but they don't no more, and that's why business has fell off. On account of that, glad I was to earn an honest penny by doin' of odd jobs for a young gent, who'd give this 'ere Cleek enough to keep him guessin'. And he would, too, only he aren't got the money to pay no such a high flyer as him!'

"At that, sir, I got ruffled a bit. 'Money don't never count with him,' says I. 'And if you take me to see the young gentleman as needs him,' I says, 'and I'll pretty soon show him, and you, too, as there aren't nuffink wot can keep Mr. Cleek a guessin' when once he puts his mind on the subject.' 'Oh, aren't there?' says he, laughing sarcastic like. 'Well, maybe he'll be able to tell wot made "Blench's Fadeless Tints" begin to fade from the eleventh day of last March, just because a dead man said they would. Maybe he'll be able to tell who a chap spent the evenin' with when he called at an empty house to see a gent who was 500 miles away at the time. And maybe it'll be jist child's play for him to tell what became of a man who turned a summersault in the sight of three people and then vanished clean out of the world two weeks ago.'"

"What's that?" said Cleek. "A man turned"—— Then stopped suddenly, for a gentle tap had sounded at the door.

"Come in!" he called out, and in obedience to that a hall porter appeared upon the threshhold.

"Gentleman in the coffee room—name of Mr. Arthur Spencer, sir—asking to see Mr. Dollops," he announced deferentially.

"Oh, all right," said Cleek. "Show him up, please, at once." Then, as the door closed: "This Mr. Arthur Spencer is the young gentleman in question, is he not, Dollops?"

"Yes, sir. The gentleman as lived with the other gentleman—him as summersaulted of himself into nothin, sir. He's come a long way—from close to Rugby, sir—where him and his sister and his brother John lives in the house where the summersaultin' was done. Father was a gentleman farmer in Cheshire, sir, but lost all his money before he died, and the farm bein' mortgaged and them not bein' able to pay it off, the Spencers lost it, sir, and and are as poor as a church mouse."

Another tap sounded at the door, and in response to Cleek's composed "Come in!" the knob turned and Arthur Spencer stepped into the room.

Cleek's quick-moving eyes flashed him a searching glance and then rested upon him—satisfied. Dollops had alluded to him as "a young gentleman." Cleek's first look assured him that description was merited. There was birth and there was breeding stamped upon that fresh-colored face, with its fine, firm mouth and its clear, straight-looking eyes

"How' are yer, sir?' said Dollops. "I've spoke to the gov'ner; and it's all right, Mr. Spencer—jist as I told yer I knowed it would be. Sir, Mr. Cleek—this 'ere is Mr. Arthur Spencer, the gentleman I was a tellin' you of." –

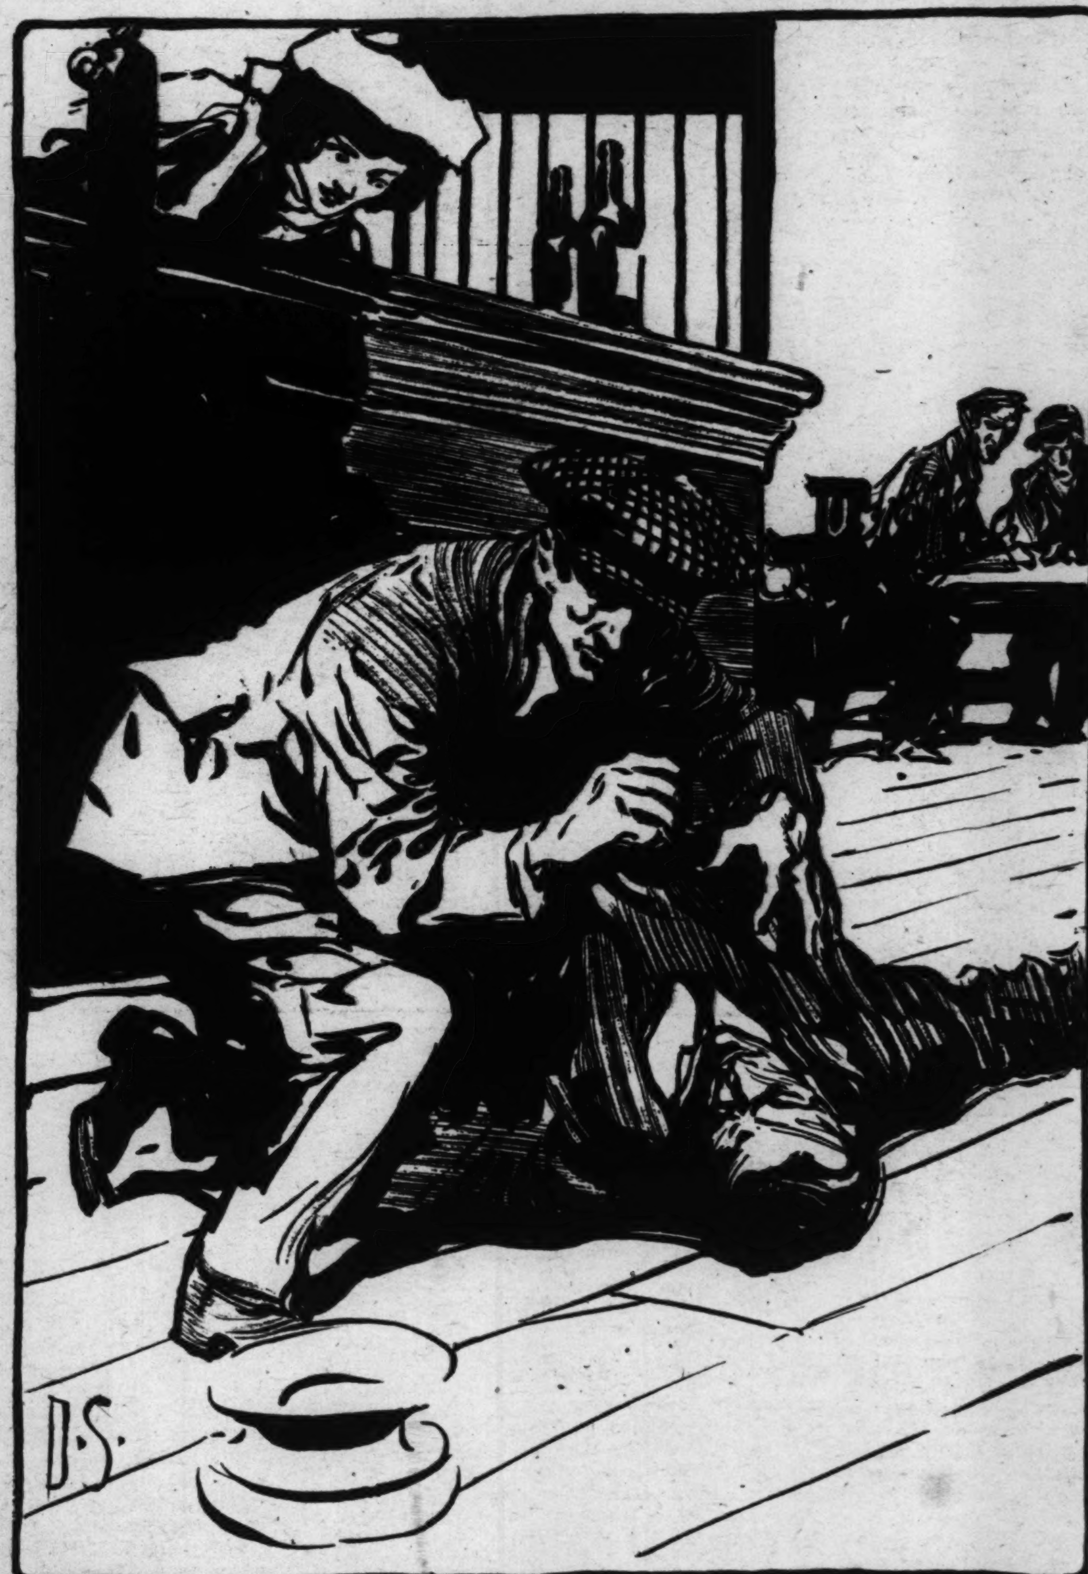
"Pleased to meet you, Mr. Spencer," said Cleek, giving him his hand.

"I have read so much about you," replied young Spencer, returning warmly the firm handshake, "that I must confess to a certain amount of awe as I knocked at the door, but you are so little like what I expected to see that you put me at my ease at once."

"Oh, we are not so terrible, we 'Limbs of the Law,' when you come to meet us at close quarters, Mr. Spencer, especially when you come to engage our services rather than our attention."

"O, I can imagine that as being very likely, Mr. Cleek. But—may I be very frank? I am in no position to tender a sum such services from you both command and merit, and I would not insult you by offering the little I can afford—though, perhaps, if the mystery of the thing can be cleared up, and it is found that Mr. Scarlet has lived up to his often-repeated promise to my sister, my brother John and me, I may one day be able"——

"We won't talk about that," cut in Cleek. "The question of money doesn't enter into everything in this life, Mr. Spencer—although, from what you have just said, I fancy it enters into this affair of yours. Now, then,



"And blew out his brains with a revolver."

"'THE fadeless dyes. By George!" rapped in Cleek excitedly. 'You needn't tell me. I know him. He was a silly, sentimental old ninny, who might have made millions, but who, like a dog, didn't know any better than to be faithful and to remember a kindly act of Harmon Blench—the Sir Harmon Blench who owns his racing stud and sports his yacht and his tinsel title today.'" who is this Mr. Scarlet? Any relation to the luckless individual who somersaulted himself out of existence?"

"He is the actual person. But it was not ready money he promised, Mr. Cleek—for, indeed, I doubt if he has so much as a hundred pounds in the world at this minute."

"'At this minute?' You speak as if he were still in the world, Mr. Spencer. I thought he was supposed to have somersaulted himself out of it."

"So did we up to last night. Then, as mysteriously as he disappeared, he came back again—we don't know from where; all that we do know is that, from going away almost in a state of imbecility, he has come back a dumb man who has lost not only the power of speech but the power of hearing as well, and who seems to have no desire but to huddle away in his own bedroom with all light and all air excluded, and his head sunk dejectedly between his hands."

"Hum-m-m!" said Cleek, screwing up his lips. "That's peculiar. Possibly the result of some shock experienced during his period of absence. However, suppose you begin at the beginning, Mr. Spencer, and let me have the facts in their proper order. Should I be right or wrong in supposing that the man is related to you?"

"Quite wrong, sir. There is not even the remotest connection between his family and ours. As a matter of fact, none of us ever saw or heard of him until nine of ten months ago. He came into our lives quite accidentally. Possibly you may have been told, Mr. Cleek, that the foreclosure of a mortgage caused my sister, brother and myself to turn out of the house in which we had been born and reared, to find other quarters for ourselves, and to put what little talents we possess to the task of keeping a roof over our heads. Between us we make enough to rub along comfortably, and we were fortunate enough to stumble over a little old house with a couple of acres of land that we got for a song. I tell you all this, Mr. Cleek, because it has a distinct bearing on the case, for the house is isolated, is a good four miles from the outskirts of Rugby; the nearest other house is quite a mile away and there's a belt of woodland between that shuts each from all view of the other.

"It was in the depths of that bit of woodland that we first met Mr. Scarlet. My sister going there one day, found him lying quite unconscious and with a broken leg, and we ourselves took turns nursing him. We didn't know who or what he was until long after he was able to get up. Then he surprised us all by counting up the weeks he had been with us and insisting on paying for them at the rate of a guinea a week, and declaring that he wanted to live with us for ever on the same terms, if we'd have him. Of course we did, for, in spite of his being a bit dotty at time, we'd got to like the old chap; and, besides, it would help on a bit with the expenses. He got the money and paid us—wrote to a Liverpool bank and had it sent out to him in cash by a messenger. And then—well, then we got to know from that messenger who he was.

"He hadn't much money—a couple of hundred pounds or so—left in the bank, the messenger said, but he had had more than a thousand at the time his son put that curse on Blench's and shot himself. But that seemed to turn his head, for he drew most of it out and started off wandering about like a stray dog. The rest reads like a page from a romance, Mr. Cleek.

"AFTER the messenger had gone we told the old man what we had heard. Instead of being angered, he clapped his hands and laughed like a little child. 'That's true—that's true!' he said. 'And you took me in and cared for me, not knowing and not caring. Well, I've no son, now, no son! He that should have been a friend killed him just as much as if he'd shot the boy with his own hand. No, I've no son now; but you that have been as sons to me—you and your dear sister—you shall have it when I die, just as he should had he lived.' That was the promise he gave, Mr. Cleek; that was what I alluded to when I spoke of possibly being able to offer a fitting reward in the future."

"Hum-m-m! Yes! I see!" said Cleek reflectively. "Then not having anything to leave in the way of actual money, he promised you something which would bring money? I see! I see! May I ask what that something is?"

The young man flushed, paled, flushed again; glanced nervously at Dollops and then significantly at Cleek.

"Dollops, toddle downstairs and see what's the next train to Rugby," he said. "And if there isn't one inside the next hour, find out where there's a garage and engage a motor car for me." Then, when Dollops had gone and the two men stood alone together, he added: "It is something that Dollops does not know?"

"It is something that nobody knows, but my brother, my sister and myself," said young Spencer agitatedly. "The man we have called John Scarlet, Mr. Cleek—is in reality James Redd, and he is the chemist who discovered the secret of"——

"THE fadeless dyes. By George!" rapped in Cleek excitedly. "You needn't tell me. I know him—I've seen him, years ago, when—no matter! He was a silly, sentimental old ninny, who might have made millions, but who, like a dog, didn't know any better than to be faithful and to remember a kindly act. Harmon Blench—the Sir Harmon Blench who owns his racing stud and sports his yacht and his tinsel title today—and helped him when his wife was ill and his little chemist's shop failed to pay its way, and Old Fidelity never forgot. Redd, the chemist, shut up his shop and vanished, and presently out came 'Blench's Fadeless Tints'—prosperity, riches, honors! You need not tell me what was promised you—I guess it now. It was the secret formula of those fadeless tints!"

"Yes," admitted Spencer. "Out of gratitude to the man who is now Sir Harmon Blench, James Redd effaced himself, prepared in secret the fluid to be poured into the contents of the vats, and was content—even happy—in the growing greatness of his former benefactor, with the sum of twenty pounds a week and the seeming favor of the 'great man' whom his own arts had created. Some guardian angel must have watched over Redd, however, Mr. Cleek, for he took no one—not even Blench—into his confidence regarding that formula. He made it in secret, and added it to the vats with his own hand. But Blench must ever have been hopeful of getting it, for he made much of his old friend and his old friend's only son. He had them constantly at his house; used the beauty of his daughter as a snare to enslave the son, and the wiles of his wife as a lure to trick the secret from the father. The result he must have foreseen. Young Ernest Redd fell hopelessly in love with Gladys Blench. She played him as a skillful angler plays a game fish, and, 'landed' him at last with a proposal. The answer was 'Yes,' of course, because she meant in a little time to ask for the secret formula; but just then came a great public gift upon her own father's part, a blare of newspaper trumpets, a Royal command, and afterward a baronetcy. There could be no chemist's son after that for this newly gilt effigy of nobility and his elated wife and daughter, and when young Ernest Redd went to the brand-new baronet to announce his engagement, the daughter openly repudiated him, and the father all but kicked him from the house."

"A bad move!" commented Cleek. A very bad move, considering his position with the father. But no doubt he relied upon his fidelity and gratitude, and fancied he could talk the old man around."

"As undoubtedly he would have been able to do, Mr. Cleek, but for the awful thing which happened. Instead of going home, young Ernest flew to a public house, wrote and dispatched to his father a letter telling him how he had been lured on and to what purpose, and charging him, as a duty to the dead—'a duty to the son those two have murdered,' were the exact words in which he put it — never again to add the secret fluid to the Blench dye vats. Then he rushed into the crowded barroom, yelled out, 'Blench's Fadeless Tints, gentlemen, and a curse on them! They shall begin to fade on the eleventh of March, and they shall fade forevermore!' And while the crowd was laughing and wondering what he knew about the matter, he whipped out a revolver and blew out his brains. That was why James Redd never could be talked around by Sir Harmon Blench, and why his reason tottered and he began to wander."

"AND with the secret of that precious formula locked up in a brain that was tottering! No wonder you were in despair when the old man disappeared. If he did not reduce the thing to writing before his mysterious vanishment you may even yet lose it."

"But he did do so, Mr. Cleek. On the very day he made that promise to us he sent my brother to Rugby for a quill pen, a bottle of indelible ink and a square of parchment. That night he sat up for hours in the seclusion of his own room; in the morning he told us he had made a copy of the formula as fadeless as the dyes themselves. But he never gave it to us; nor do we know where it is. A few nights after that it suddenly entered his mind that he had not seen Sir Harmon Blench for months, and nothing could dissuade him from setting forth to see him. He did not return until daybreak."

"And did he see the man?"

"He says he did—says that he spent the night with him, laughing while the man was on his knees begging him to forgive and to come back to the old fealty, as ruin was every day drawing nearer. Afterward, however, Mr. Cleek, we heard that Sir Harmon Blench had gone in his yacht to America weeks before, and that his house was shut up and empty!"

"Who told you that?"

"Sir Harmon's lodge keeper. He wrote to say that he had heard our friend Mr. Scarlet was boasting everywhere that he had spent the night there in company with Sir Harmon, and he wrote to tell us that it was impossible."

"And had 'Mr. Scarlet'

been boasting that, as charged?"

"Not that we ever heard, sir, or—I beg pardon—did you speak?"

"Fish!" repeated Cleek, pinching up his chin. "Very bad fish—they smell!" Then he twisted around on his heel, walked to the window and looked thoughtfully out into the gathering autumnal darkness.

After a minute or so he again turned and looked back at Arthur Spencer.

"And now about this absurd 'somersaulting' business?" he inquired abruptly. "When and how did that come into the affair? Was it immediately after his reputed evening with Sir Harmon Blench?"

"Oh, it was a long time after that. We had begun to think that the fancy—or whatever it was—had faded entirely from his mind when that occurred. He was always whimsical, Mr. Cleek. Indeed, at one time he took an odd dislike to blue—the color in which the upper passage and all the rooms opening upon it, his own included, were painted and papered—and insisted on having them done in pink and gray, because, he said, it was more restful to the eye. Of course, such a change would run into a lot of money and we couldn't afford it; but when he asserted his intention to pay for the paint and paper himself we could no longer object. We let him have his way, and an awful mess he made of it. It quite broke my sister's heart to see how hideous he had made the pretty hall and rooms by his unskillful efforts."

"His efforts! Did he paint and paper the place himself, then?"

"Yes. We tried to reason him out of it, but he had one of his extra dotty periods on, and it was no use. Poor old chap! He may have been a marvel as a chemist, Mr. Cleek, but as a painter and paper hanger he was something appalling! He laid the paint on in streaks and daubs and the paper in one mass of bubbles and wrinkles everywhere. It had been up about a month and we were wondering what turn his next mad whim would take, when, without hint or warning, it came on, and took the most amazing form of ducking his head to the floor and somersaulting like a tumbling doll."

"Poor old chap!" said Cleek sympathetically. "His mental balance was quite gone at last, then?"

"YES, quite. We tried to reason him out of his folly, but he simply went on somersaulting about and laughing like a little child. Then a fortnight ago this mad mania culminated in the mysterious thing of which you have heard. It was a bright moonlit night, and very warm; my brother, my sister and I were sitting on the veranda watching him tumble about, when all of a moment he sprang erect and shouted out: 'Blench wants to know, does he, Ernie, my boy? Well, this is the trick of it. He'll get it when he can do this!' Then, to our amazement and fright, he rushed across the bit of open in front of the house, made headlong toward the woodland of which I have spoken, turned a somersault before our very eyes and vanished completely."

"Humph! Shall I be right in hazarding the guess that he fell into some hole or pitfall, Mr. Spencer, and that when you reached the spot there was no trace of him?"

"Quite right, Mr. Cleek. In the shadow cast by the trees he may not have noticed it, but at the time he made that somersault he was within a foot of the brink of a ravine, at whose bottom we originally found him. It was down that he must have plunged with the first turn, but although we ran to the place as fast as we could, and searched everywhere, we could find no trace of him."

"Is the ravine long?"

"Yes; about a mile and three-quarters. It commences a little below the plateau upon which our house is situated; it ends at the slate quarry on the road leading to Castle Blench."

"Hum-m-m! Did it occur to you to go to Castle Blench and make inquiries?"

"Katherine thought of that the next morning, and we went then, of course."

"And saw the lodge keeper, no doubt, who told you the same old story as before; Sir Harmon was in America; the place was shut up and nobody had called there — nobody could without his knowledge."

"Yes; that is exactly what happened. Then we scoured the country for miles about, inquired at every house—the result was the same; he had not been seen. Such was the state of affairs when, last night, after two weeks' absence, he as suddenly reappeared, Mr. Cleek. It was just as we were going to bed that my sister, hearing a scraping sound at the front door, opened it, and almost fell over him. He was kneeling on the veranda—not much changed in outward appearance from what he was when he left us so mysteriously, but horribly changed otherwise, for his hearing seemed to be wholly impaired, and he was stricken with complete dumbness. Indeed, it is a marvel how he found his way back, Mr. Cleek, for he seemed hardly to know us, and could make us understand nothing but that he had an antipathy to light. However, we got him upstairs to his room, and there he has huddled ever since, refusing to come out even to take his meals, refusing to have either the curtain drawn or the door opened, and doing nothing but crouch there and hold his head between his hands. There, that's the case, Mr. Cleek; but it can't interest you now that we have found him and"——

"To the contrary," interrupted Cleek. "I have a burning desire to learn where that fortnight was spent and to what his muteness and deafness is directly traceable. Hulloa! here's Dollops back again. Well, my lad, what news?"

"No train for three hours yet, gov'ner; so I hopped it around to a garage and there's a motor a-waitin' at the door."

"Well done, Mercury," said Cleek. "Now then, finish up your packing, my lad, and pass me a set of handcuffs from that bag on the chair."

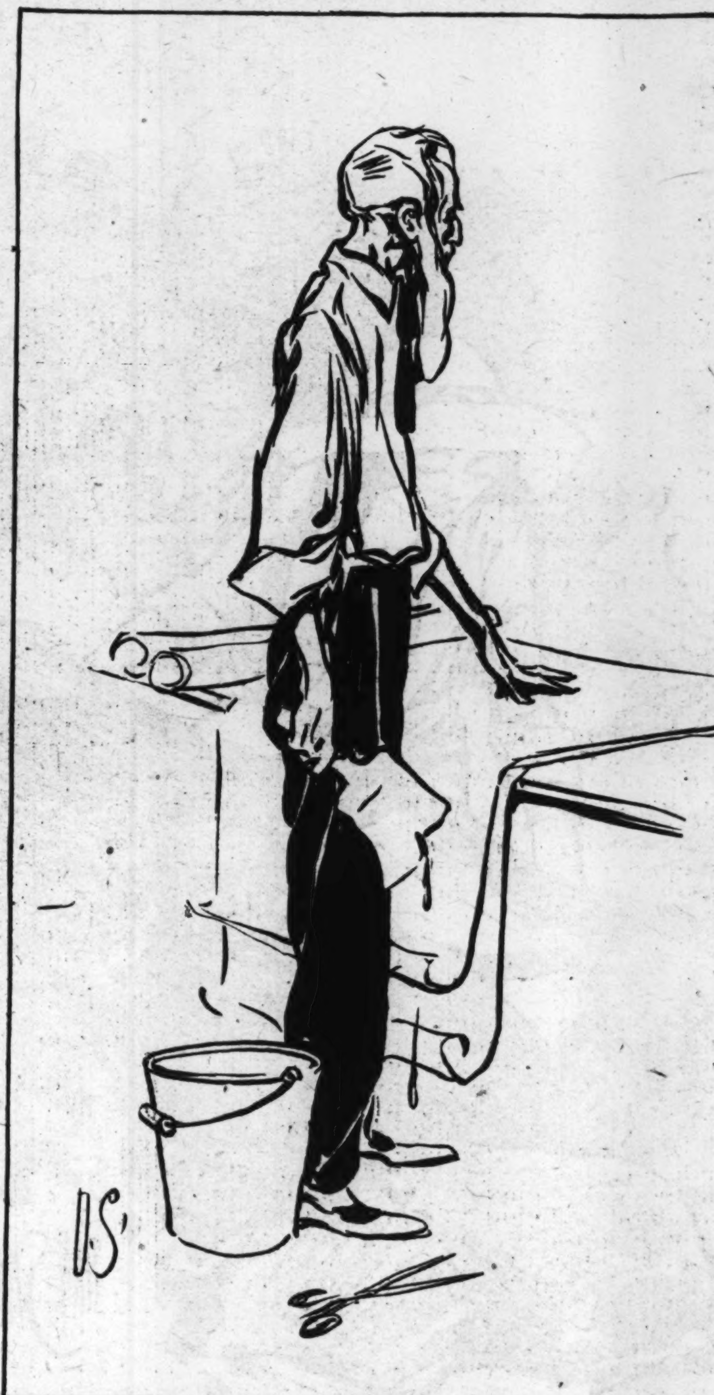
* * * * * * *

THE run to Rugby was made in almost record time; and after stopping at the house of the Justice of the Peace and remaining closted with that gentleman for a period of ten or a dozen minutes, Cleek came out, rejoined Arthur Spencer in the motor, and was off again in the direction which that young man indicated, and which led to the lonely house, the two anxious watchers and the poor, stricken, desolated old man.

Night had shut in when the reached it, and Cleek had his first sight of the two other members of the Spencer household. John—"Jack," as he was familiarly known—happy-go-lucky, cheery Jack, he liked even better than he had liked his brother.

"Get a candle, Mr. Spencer, and let us go in and see how the poor old chap is," he said to him. "Your brother tells me that he has a rooted objection to light, but—well, he will have to stand it for a brief space this time, I fear."

They went to the room together. Cleek's heart gave one big throb of pity as he caught sight of the old fellow sitting, he he had seen other poor old fellows sit in the incurable wards of lunatic asylums, as dead to life and the world as if the coffin lid were shut over them.



"'He may have been a marvel as a chemist but as a paperhanger he was appalling.'"

"Poor old chap!" he said sympathetically; then—his eye caught by a little heap of pinkish scraps lying on the floor—he turned and looked all around the room and moved with a tender sort of step toward the imbecile. "Poor old fellow—poor badly used old fellow!" he said again, as if speaking half to himself and half to the others. "Down to the idiot's final trick—the crumbling up of bits of paper or rags, or anything he can lay his poor old hands upon." Then he stooped and softly patted the bowed head and called him. But neither the name of John Scarlet nor the name of James Redd evoked any response, nor did the touch of that patting hand produce any movement.

"Ah dear! He's got to the last ditch, I'm afraid, Mr. Spencer," he said as he walked back to the two brothers. "If I could get a word from him—just one! But it's useless, you see. The sense of feeling seems to have gone with the others, and—I beg pardon, but isn't that your sister calling?" he added, suddenly, glancing round at Arthur Spencer, for Miss Spencer was calling—calling excitedly: "Arthur! Arthur! Come down quickly, please!" "Go and see what she wants," Cleek said.

Young Spencer wheeled round, shaking with agitation, flashed out of the room, was gone but a minute, and then flashed back again, pale as a dead man.

"Well?" inquired Cleek—just that one single "Well?"

"Yes!" said Arthur Spencer in a voice that was little more than a gasp. "Yes! Yes! My heaven! Are you a wizard?"

BUT Cleek seemed not to hear. He had gone back to the drooping, silent figure, and was bending sympathetically over it.

"Poor old chap!" he said. "Poor, poor old chap!" Then stooped lower and added in an altered tone, as he clicked the handcuffs shut: "Got you, Sir Harmon Blench! Off with you wig, off with your beard, you sneaking cur. We've got your lodge keeper, we've got poor old James Redd's hiding place, and the law wants you!"

The huddled figure started upright with a shriek, the wigless head and beardless face flashed round quickly, the wild eyes caught sight of a blue-coated and helmeted shape entering the room, and, like something lightning-smitten, the shaking body collapsed and went down in a heap at Cleek's feet.

"Fainted," commented he. "They're a weak-nerved lot, those creeping snakes, when you drive them to the wall. Well, constable, you found him where I fancied you would?"

"Yes, sir, in a top room of the lodge, tied hand and foot, sir, and a gag in his mouth."

"Dead?"

"No, sir; but a gibbering idiot. He'll never know another thing, the doctor says, until he dies. And the day for that can't be very far off."

"And idiots being 'dead' in the eyes of the law, their heirs succeed," said Cleek, and he walked across the room to where the shreds of pink stuff lay, looked up the wall and smiled. "You are right, Mr. Spencer—a bad piece of workmanship this," he added, reaching up and tapping the wrinkled paper; "but it was hardly so bad as this in the beginning. Loose, you see—loose, and quite ready for the moment of flight. Old James Redd had his method, you see, gentlemen, as madmen always do. Do you want to know why he papered the room himself? Do you want to know why he wanted parchment and indelible ink? And, last of all, do you want to know why that hound lying there trapped the poor old chap, held him prisoner, and, making himself up like the man he had robbed and cheated in the first place, came here to rob and cheat his heirs, too. If you do, then look!"

With that he plucked at the end of the loose section of wall paper stripped it away, and there on the bared plaster behind, a square of parchment stared back at the Spencers' staring eyes.

"The missing formula of the fadeless tints, gentlemen," said Cleek, "stuck to the wall, you see, and the pink paper pasted loosely over it! A madman's whim to hide it there; a madman's whim to boast of it afterward to Sir Harmon Blench; and"—he reached up, detached the parchment from the wall—"a sane man's whim to dower his benefactor's thus"—and laid the formula in Arthur Spencer's hand. "There are no heirs but you. The secret formula is yours by every right of man. The fadeless tints are 'Spencers' Fadeless Tints' from this time forth; and if you need any money to start you up in manufacturing them, I've brought the sum of $12,500."

* * * * * * *

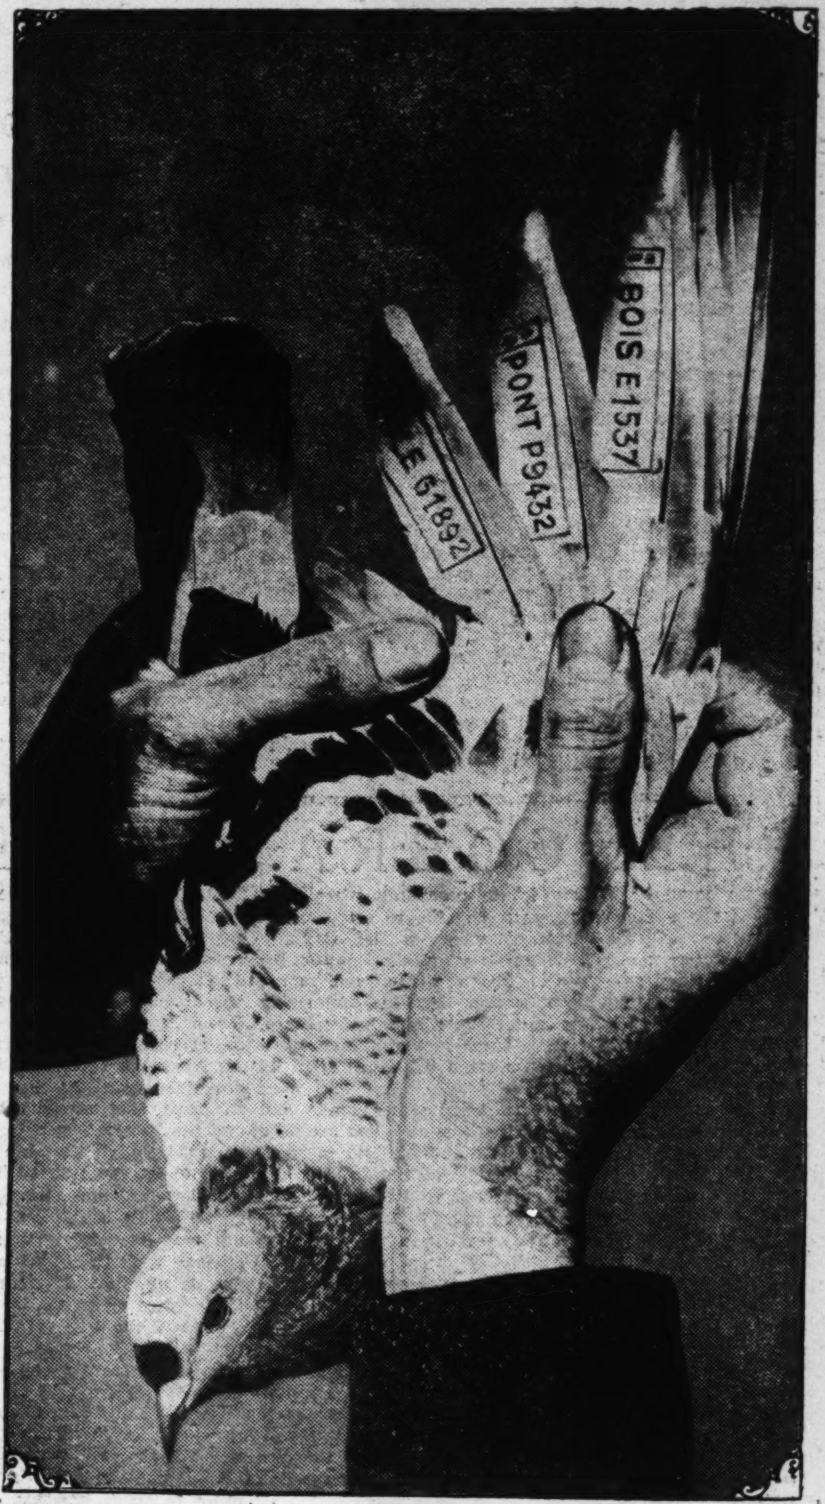
"WELL, to tell you the truth, I think I began to suspect just how the land lay when you told me of the supposed James Redd's peculiar dumbness at the time of his return," said Cleek, answering Arthur Spencer's query, as he stood waiting for the chauffeur to crank up. "I didn't know of anything that would be likely to produce such an effect under such circumstances; and if there was any reason why he should not speak, I said to myself, that reason must be because he did not wish you to hear his voice; and that, of course, suggested that it was another man; and I guessed who that man was likely to be, because I happened to know that Sir Harmon Blench couldn't possibly be aboard his yacht in America, as he sold that yacht just three months ago to a gentleman named Mr. Maverick Narkom. What's that? How did I come to suspect the hiding place of the parchment? Well, the thing that made me suspect that that huddled figure was a humbug put me on the track of the formula at the same time. That was the little heap of pinkish shreds lying on the floor—bits of the wall paper torn off in the search for the particular strip that covered the thing he was after. Oh, all right, chauffeur—ready at last, are you? Well, good night, you bonny pair of boys, and good luck to you. The riddle is solved, gentlemen, and now for my promised holiday."

New Submarines to Be Largest Yet

IN advance of anything yet built for European navies, the new submarines now under construction for the United States will be larger, have a greater cruising radius, and be more powerfully equipped than any yet attempted on either side of the Atlantic. The new craft are 265 feet long, with a beam of 23 feet and a draft of 13 feet. On the surface they are designed to make a speed of from twelve and one-half to eighteen miles an hour, with a capacity for limited periods of 23 miles. Submerged, the best speed will be twelve and one-half miles, and fuel capacity is arranged for from 3500 to 7000 miles' range. The hull is strongly reinforced, with double construction amidships, and the ten compartments bulkheaded off are dished to withstand extreme pressure. There are 10 torpedo tubes and 11 torpedoes, and a 3-inch disappearing gun is also provided. Saftey devices, both automatic and mechanical, free the ballast tanks of water at certain depths, and three escapement compartments, one at either end and one in the middle of the boat, open into air locks, each equipped with a telephone buoy release for communication with the surface when submerged.

MILE-A-MINUTE SPIES ON THE WING

Hundreds of thousands of pigeons scattered through the battling nations are used to carry messages when the telephone, telegraph and even wireless are closed to the transmission of military information



Captured war pigeon showing message in cipher painted upon its feathers.

IN cowl, habit and tonsure that marks the monk, a young man told his beads aboard the train bound for Antwerp. A woman hardly more than a girl kept her eyes fastened on the man of prayer. She studied the devotion with which his fingers slipped from decade to decade of the long, well-worn rosary that hung from the cincture about his waist. Although his lips appeared to move in humble supplication, the woman saw that he had failed to kiss the cross. This lapse was significant to her.

"Spy!" the girl hissed into the face of the alleged ascetic. In an instant two guards had seized the young man and rushed him down the train corridor. The woman examined the small wicker basket left behind in the seat. She lifted the lid and found three pigeons. She recognized the famous war birds of all armed Europe. As a member of the field intelligence staff of the French War Ministry, she knew there were at least three "homers" who would fail to return with military information to the lofts at Cologne, Metz, Coblenz or other German post, and that another son would soon die for the Fatherland.

The war zone is honeycombed with master spies. General staffs demand intimate information of the plans, movements and intentions of the enemy. To get the details of the military forces and resources, strength of defenses, temper and health of troops and people, forage and food supplies, railroads and rolling stock, army officers volunteer to play the spy in the enemy's country.

The case of the supposed monk caught on his way to Antwerp with his messenger birds is lost in a series of startling captures in France, Germany, Austria, Russia and Belgium. Laconic cables advise of arrests of army officers who come within the definition of spy as laid down by The Hague regulations respecting the laws and customs of war on land. Too often in the popular mind no distinction is made between scout and spy. One hears of aviator spies hovering over fortifications and camps. In fact, the aviator is not classed as a spy. He is a scout upon scout duty. If he is brought down, his punishment is death swifter than the end of a spy, but his death is traced to the crash of his machine to earth.

Article 29 of The Hague regulations, referred to above, makes it plain that it is essential to the character of a spy that he should act clandestinely, under false pretenses, and that he should be apprehended within the zone of operations of the hostile, belligerent forces, and that his object should be to obtain information against them. The Hague rules that once a spy regains his own army he must be treated as an ordinary prisoner of war in the event of his capture. Further, it is laid down that a soldier in uniform, even when captured within the enemy's lines, shall be regarded as an ordinary prisoner of war.

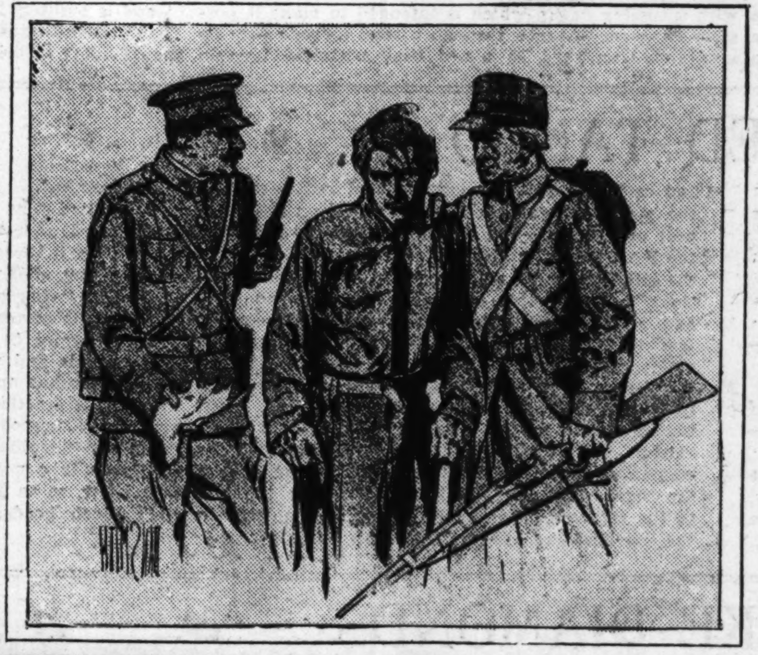
In a word, the scout lurks about the enemy to get information, but wears no disguise, although he takes advantage of every concealment. The spy enters the enemy's lines in disguise, and when caught he is shot if not hanged. The Hague ordains that no spy shall be "punished" without trial.

Because of the death penalty no soldier is forced to act the spy against his will. When the war broke out the work of getting advance information of the movements and intentions of the enemy was transferred to what is known as field intelligence departments. The aviators and other scouts learn the plans of today. The spy is relied on to obtain knowledge of value tomorrow as well as today. It is figured that there are 6000 military aeroplanes and dirigibles in this war to discover field plans, reveal movements of armies and hurl bombs.

The difficulty of a spy in a hostile country getting his secret reports back to his chief when fierce battle lines intervene, troops guard frontiers, and telegraph and wireless are shut off, is more apparent than real. War Ministers have clamped the lid down hard on all news dispatches covering military movements. A heavy ban oppresses the publication of facts which have not been examined by the official press bureaus. General staffs have driven the correspondents from the field. Word of a victorious clash developed from a skirmish is passed out to the public as a sop or stimulant. Censors hack copy filed for transmission. All this is enforced to guard against publicity which might furnish aid and comfort to the enemy, yet the spies speed their reports over the frontiers from the heart and vitals of the enemy.

The General Staff and the censors fail to alarm the master spy, who works independent of the telegraph, the post or other human agency. He has in his hands a winged messenger capable of making 80 miles an hour in clear weather, bearing its messages from beleagured towns and forts, gay capitals and panic-stricken villages, and high above siege guns belching hellfire and the crash of battle lines.

This winged messenger is the war pigeon of Europe. Each great Power engaged in this conflict has more than 100,000 trained birds to carry secret reports and dispatches. From the cables telling of spies captured with messenger pigeons in their possession, it is seen that the belligerent nations are keeping the birds on duty which could not safely be performed by man-made flying machines.



The possession of a homing pigeon is regarded as good evidence that the owner may be a spy, and unless he can prove otherwise is liable to be shot. If a message is found on the bird he is certain to meet quick death.

Belgium is known as "the cockpit of Europe." It is also the pigeon loft, or colombier, of Europe. The birds used by spies on the Continent are strains of the famous pigeon voyageur. Millions of racing pigeons cross the Belgian frontier. Nearly every village has its Societe Colombophile. Belgium taught Europe how to train homing pigeons and these are the birds which the spies of the several nations at war are "tossing" in France, Germany, Belgium, Russia, Austria, even Switzerland, Spain and Italy.

Europe woke up to the value of the messenger pigeon in time of war when Paris was cut off from the rest of the world by the Prussians in the campaign of 1870 and 1871. At the height of the siege, fanciers in the French capital went to the authorities and explained that if the birds were sent to Tours in balloons, the winged messengers would return with whatever news was intrusted to them. Accordingly, more than 800 homing pigeons sailed as captives in balloons out over the fortifications, returning with news, which, if put into book form, Parisians say, would make a library of 500 volumes.

Code words and numerals are often written or painted on the tail feathers of the birds, each being full of meaning to knowing eyes. One pigeon was photographed with the two French words, "bois" and "pont," meaning wood and bridge, each followed by figures, which undoubtedly gave the location of troops and their numbers.

An ingenious attempt to make observers out of the pigeons has scarcely proved successful. A tiny camera was strapped to the bird's breast and set to make a snapshot by a time-lock mechanism. Most of the pictures thus obtained have been too vague in outline to be of much value, probably owing to the great height at which the birds fly.

By a process of microphotography, the equivalent of a 16-page newspaper was reproduced on a film, inserted in a quill, and fastened to the middle tail feather of the messenger bird. These films were thrown on a screen much as we might do today at the movies.

As soon as peace was signed, Bismarck ordered military lofts established at the big forts and cities of Germany. The other nations of Europe followed suit, and Belgium taught them how to train the birds.

The great sporting event of Belgium is the concours nationales of 500 miles from Toulouse to Brussels. This famous race gives an idea of the endurance and speed of the remarkable birds, which make the distance faster than a mile a minute. Then there is the record flight of the prize winners from Montargis to Brussels, completing the 270 miles within three hours and a quarter.

There is no flight in the war zone too arduous for these pigeons. "Tossed" by a spy, the winged messenger circles and circles in spirals till it sniffs the right direction, then darts like an arrow for its loft, 50 or 500 miles away.

WALKING AS A COSMETIC

BY A GIRL WITH A PEACH OF A FACE

WOULD you like to have a skin like a lemon-cling peach, you women; never to have headaches, never to be nervous, never to feel exhaustion, never to complain or to droop?

Miss Sarah Uswald says she can teach you. No, she has nothing to sell. She says she is a beauty doctor, but she doesn't charge for her prescriptions.

Miss Uswald is 22. Also she is 5 feet 3. In addition she weighs 118 pounds and believes she is physically in perfect health and condition. Miss Uswald is a stenographer.

Takes a brisk walk of at least five miles in the air each day. (This does not count incidental walking connected with business.)

Accompanies the fast squad of the Men's Walking Club of New York on its thirty and forty mile hikes and has repeatedly outdone many of the men.

Believes almost any woman can have good health and better looks if she will walk consistently, but it must be hard and serious walking, not mere sauntering.

"I walk every day," she said, "and I walk long and hard Sundays and holidays. It has done much for me."

She looked it. Her cheeks were as clear and translucent as any Oregon apple's, and when she moved about the room it was with the certainty of muscular control which we nominate grace.

Costume for the Woman Who Walks

WEAR:

Any loose skirt that gives free use of the legs.

A middy blouse or other loose waist, giving free use of the lungs and a swing to the body.

Underwear sufficiently warm to suit the season, but no corset when hiking.

Strong, loose, low-heeled shoes. Be sure they are comfortable and low heeled. This is the most important part.

A cap or close-fitting hat which the wind cannot take and which rests the head.

A sweater or jersey when the weather demands a wrap.

"I believe my interest in botany has helped me get joy out of my walks, because I have always followed it as a hobby since I learned the rudiments in school and followed them with further study at the Y. W. C. A. Some of my first long rambles in the country were in search of specimens, and, even now, we gather flowers and ferns on our hikes and thus get a double pleasure out of them."

"But most young women would object to giving every Sunday and holiday to walking. It would interfere too much with social diversion," was suggested.

"Not at all," said Miss Uswald. "One can do both. I go to parties and dances. I walk in the morning or afternoon. Any parties must be at night. I prefer walking to parties anyhow."

Miss Uswald indicated that one might prefer walking even to these. For a girl of 22 she is extremely determined to walk.

"And now as to health, Miss Uswald?"

She warmed to this subject like a propagandist.

"If women would walk more; if they would go out as I do and walk hard and long in all weathers there would be less need for physicians and cosmetics and beauty doctors."

"I find," she went on, "that I never have headaches or am nervous like most of the business girls I know. I find my work less a labor. It never drags on me. The old wisdom that a sane mind dwells only in a sound body is certain true. I mean by that that a mind can only work easily and well if the body is strong enough to support the effort.

"The idle woman will find that walking will give her a new interest and a pleasant and beneficial way of putting in lagging and useless hours. She will get a diversion and a condition of health alien to those of her sisters who mope about wondering what to do with their days. Women will find, as I have, that they can walk the country roads anywhere, alone or in groups, in perfect safety. I have yet to be insulted or offended on these rambles of mine. I cannot say as much of walking in the parks or on the streets.

able to supply fresh air to its occupants when submerged for many hours, must be able to see what is going on at the surface when it is virtually under water, must have its own motive power for service below as well as above water, and must be able to move in any direction. Sinking and rising usually are regulated by water tanks and hydroplanes, which are really fins, and course is maintained by a rudder, which is to the ship what a fish's tail is to its body.

It is usually supplied with large water tanks and large compressed air tanks, the latter of which are used both in supplying oxygen to its occupants and in regulating its movements. When it is desired to sink the boat, the water tanks are allowed to fill. When the boat is to rise, water is driven out by compressed air. The degree of buoyancy at any level is regulated in this way.

Its glimpses of the surface when it is several fathoms below surface are obtained by what is known as a periscope. In essentials, this is arranged in the form of a tube on a long slender mast, rising from the top of the vessel. At the top of the mast is a disc about three inches in diameter. By a mirror-and-prism arrangement, anything focused on the disc is revealed on a plate inside the boat. The disc can be rotated in all directions. Usually it is only necessary to elevate the disc a few feet above water to get a view of the surrounding waters.

Above water the boat is usually driven by gasoline power, with a supplementary electrical power for use under sea. Some of the very largest submarines can go 2000 miles on the surface. Their speed ranges as high as 18 knots an hour, as great speed as many battleships are capable of making. Below water, however, an eight-knot speed is about as much as the most powerful can develop.

Ordinarily a submarine progresses beneath the surface at a depth of thirty-five to forty feet. The boats, on emergency, however, can make a much greater depth. An American submarine broke a depth record by going down 286 feet. At that depth the water pressure was so great that streams began pouring through seams and the bottom began to buckle. An officer afterwards declared that if the ship had gone three feet deeper it must have been crushed like an egg shell.

It becomes apparent that almost any submarine can go far below the keel of the heaviest warship. It cannot maneuver freely there, however, and can do little damage with its torpedoes. The most effective torpedo fire is obtained at from twenty to thirty feet below the surface up to sea level. In firing from the depths, the vessel must be pointing upwards for the torpedo to find its mark. Most of the modern submarines have enough reserve air supply to enable the crew to remain under water from 24 to 36 hours if necessary.

Some of the largest boats carry as many as eight torpedoes of the biggest and newest models. These, when discharged, are kept on their course by gyroscopic action and can cover a distance of two and one-half miles in three minutes. On the nose they are armed with a cutting device which is intended to make it possible for them to break through a steel torpedo net. So accurately can they be aimed that a second torpedo can be made to strike the exact spot hit by a first.

It is said that a submarine can creep within 100 feet of its target before delivering its blow, and still be immune from danger of the explosion. If the boat at sea finds itself in the midst of a hostile fleet, it can simply sink to a place of safety, where it can lie in wait for an opportunity to strike or whence it can scuttle out of the danger zone.

Although some of the largest foreign submarines are as much as 120 feet long, these are considered giants of their class. The German U-9, which wrecked the three British vessels, carried a crew of 20 men, an unusually large contingent. The quarters of the men are necessarily much restricted. When under water the men usually subsist on foods that do not require cooking, because fire is such a great consumer of the all-essential oxygen.

The largest boats have torpedo tubes at the bow and stern. Each torpedo has a charge of high explosive that is set off when its nozzle strikes a resistance. In its rear is a propeller, driven by compressed air, to impart both momentum and direction. Such a torpedo striking a warship below the heavy armor line is almost certain to sink it.

The Powers now at war have been building torpedo boats with frenzied rapidity the last few years. Great Britain leads with 69 in operation and 35 building. France comes second, with 50 in operation and 31 under way. Russia has 25 and is building 30. Germany has 24 and is building 31. Austria has 6 and is building 11. The United States has about 30 and has authorized enough more to bring the total up to 50.

Fig. III. (Repeat el marcha four times.) El Medio Luna—The man steps forward on the right foot and forward on the left, drawing the right to the left; count 1 and 2 (three motions to two counts), and backward with the left foot and backward with the right, drawing the left foot to the right. Repeat once more. The woman steps backward with the left foot and backward with the right, drawing the left foot to the right; count 1 and 2 (three motions to two counts) and forward with the right foot and forward with the left, drawing the right foot to the left. Repeat once more. Repeat el medio cortez once more.

Fig. IV. Cortez—The man steps forward with the right foot and points the left diagonally in front, drawing the right to the left; forward with the left, raising the right heel; pause and repeat. The woman steps backward with the left foot and points the right diagonally backward, drawing the left to the right; backward with the right foot, raising the left heel and bending the knees slightly; pause and repeat.

The foregoing is the entire standardized tango, a perfectly simple and wonderfully fascinating dance which anyone who has any sense of rhythm can readily learn with a litle practice. Avoid contortion. Keep the body and knees immobile as possible. Do not raise or shrug the shoulders or wriggle the hips. The body should be in a normal position, partners not touching each other, so as to insure freedom of movement. And don't touch heads, and, above all, do not stamp the feet.

ful and 13 were completed satisfactorily. In experiments which lasted 6 hours, the largest stones were no bigger than 1½ millimeters. At 9 hours we got stones of 2 millimeters and finally stones of 2.7 millimeters in 12 hours.

"In this there seems to be an indication that in 48 hours of operation one might expect to get stones of 9 millimeters, and in 72 hours, or three days, to get gems of 15 millimeters, weighing from 50 to 60 carats. It would be an absurdity, of course, to suppose that such a progression could be regularly maintained for longer operations. Yet there is no absurdity in supposing that the manufacture of fine, large diamonds is possible and relatively easy. It will not be a question of increasing power, but of duration.

"Two scientists, members of the Institute, were kind enough to undertake a chemical and physical analysis of them. They declared that in hardness, density, refraction, the stones were identical with natural diamonds and that their combustion in oxygen was the same.

"This new and extremely simple method of synthesis puts us at the place where we can make diamonds in larger quantities and at desirable prices. Some may think that this discovery will ruin the diamond industry, old, rich and prosperous as it is. There are millions and millions of dollars invested in diamonds and there are thousands of persons deriving a living from the business. Disaster is predicted for all of them.

"I do not think that follows. Evolution of the artificial diamond, if there is any, will be gradual, and it will be many years before the natural diamond will seriously feel the production of the artificial one. More than sixty years have passed since Fremy realized the synthesis of rubies and each year sees new laboratories built for producing them. But the value and the desire for natural rubies has not been sensibly affected thereby. As much might be said for the sapphire, the emerald and all the varieties of alumina so abundantly produced in our days.

"Our electrolysis synthesis therefore has no menace for the jeweler. It should be looked upon simply as a future auxiliary of his industry."

EURHYTHMICS HAS COME TO TOWN!

no dull piano lessons to master as yet," he advises. "And when finally he takes up some instrument to learn to play, he does so out of a love for music, and with an eager curiosity to know how the sounds he has learned to know and love so well are actually produced."

The Dalcroze method, viewed largely, seems to mean: train the body and the brain will take care of itself. Other methods of education are at fault because, to quote:

"As soon as the child is old enough to understand speech, you begin to teach it through words and theories, and fail to connect action and thought. You hurry it along intellectual paths before its physical powers are developed, and try to make it a superman before it is a man. In this way are made creatures who dream but cannot live."

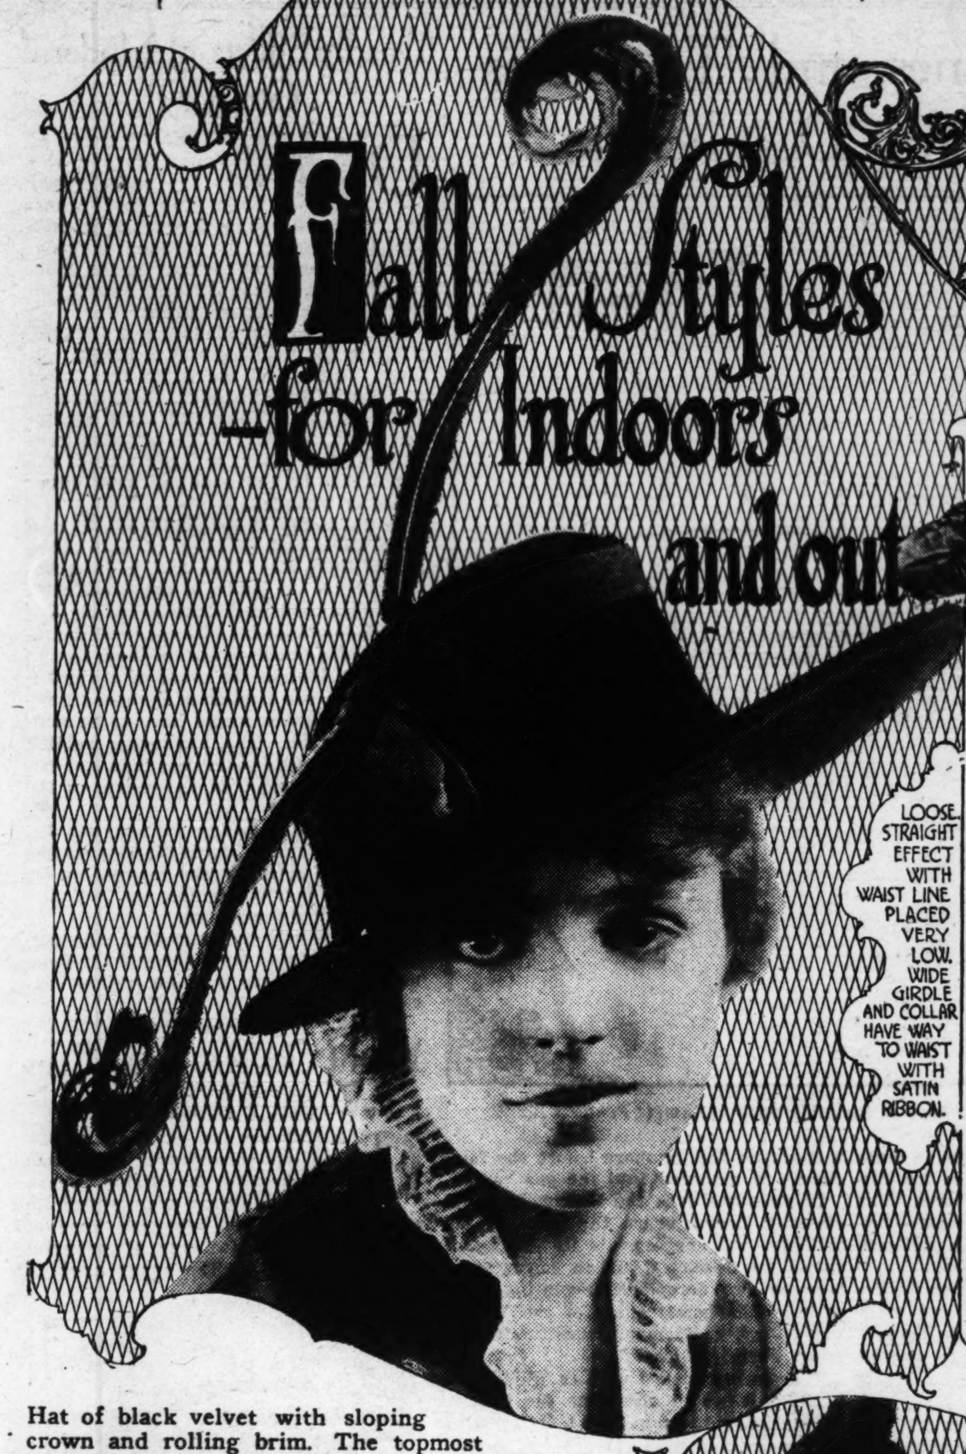
Having mastered the science of Eurhythmics and acquired an educated sense of rhythm—though I don't pretend to grasp how it all comes about—the student is said to have gained the essential foundation for later training in any branch of education.

Though the text is much involved and the course of study long, I found the pictures illustrative of "plastic rhythm" tangible enough. And they differ not at all from other pictures of other graceful barefoot dancers we have seen.

Fall Styles —for Indoors and out

A COMBINATION OF THE UNASSUMING AND THE AUDACIOUS, IS ILLUSTRATED IN THIS SIMPLE TOQUE OF BLACK VELVET WITH A FEATHER FANCY FLAUNTING SO HIGH THAT IT SEEMS IT WOULD NEVER END.

LOOSE. STRAIGHT EFFECT WITH WAIST LINE PLACED VERY LOW. WIDE GIRDLE AND COLLAR HAVE WAY TO WAIST WITH SATIN RIBBON.



Hat of black velvet with sloping crown and rolling brim. The topmost edge of the crown is banded with grosgrain ribbon and long black feather fancies with curled ends extend in opposite directions.

THE smaller the hat the longer the feather. It is the one true, simon pure, unadulterated fad of this terrible season. The hats are either flat or tight—principally tight—and the tighter the higher. No bird provides these lengthy ornaments, only the ingenuity of the feather trade could provide them. They grow at any point on the hat that the wearer's whim or the milliner's liking suggests. Rather than make two hats exactly alike, the milliners will place the feathers at different angles. The result is infinite variety.

As Yale keys are made individual by altering the mortises, and may be made eternally various, so this feather thing protects the milliners against the awful charge: "You made Maymie Jones' hat exactly like mine." Good old feather! Long shall it wave.

What to do in tailored gowns that shall strike the note of novelty is shown in accompanying photographs. The gown with frogs is in the military key, on which all fashion tunes will be written for some time.

Note the triple skirt of the black charmeuse gown—the double tunic and skirt, as dressmakers describe it. This is the nearest that authentic style has come to the pantalette; it is the pantalette effect without the bifurcation, which was thought modest in our grandmother's day—when to speak of a woman's leg was to utter an indecency—and is immodest in this day—when to speak of a woman's limb excites ridicule.

This gown of black charmeuse is handsomely trimmed with white silk embroidery, lines of which are applied to the collar, cuffs and vest. The double tunic and the skirt are each finished with a row of plaited black net. The sash is carried out in black satin ribbon.

Costume of taupe colored tigrine. The tightly fitting bodice has a roll collar of sealskin. Full length set-in sleeves are finished in cuffs of seal.

NOVEL THINGS WORTH KNOWING

How to Hammer a Tack Without Mashing Thumb

WHEN you have to drive a very small nail—a short tack, for instance—it is often difficult to hold it till it has "taken root" from the first blow of the hammer. You are almost certain to start it crooked and you are lucky if you do not smash your finger. Here is the easiest way to avoid any such difficulty: Cut a bit of tin or card in about the shape shown herewith and cut in it a small slot. Fold it in two. When ready to insert the nail put it into the slot in the card or tin, which will hold it by its head. This gives you a sort of handle by means of which you can hold the nail just where you want it and perfectly upright while you hit it with the hammer. You can pull the holder away before the nail has gone all the way into the wood.

Small Flashlights for Army Service

SATISFACTORY results have been attained in experiments made by the signal corps of the German army with an optical night-communicating device consisting of a small electric searchlight mounted with field glasses. The current for the light is supplied by dry batteries strapped to the belt of the operator. The light rays converge slightly so that they are invisible excepting in a certain plane. By the use of code, messages may be transmitted quickly and silently to a distance of between five and six miles. The arrangement also may be used at shorter range during the daytime. Another apparatus, especially designed for the transmission of messages between aerial scouts and land forces stationed at specific points, is composed of a reflector and an electric lamp with a telescope mounted on its upper rim. A push button on the handle provides for the flashing.

Spring Pendulum Electrically Driven

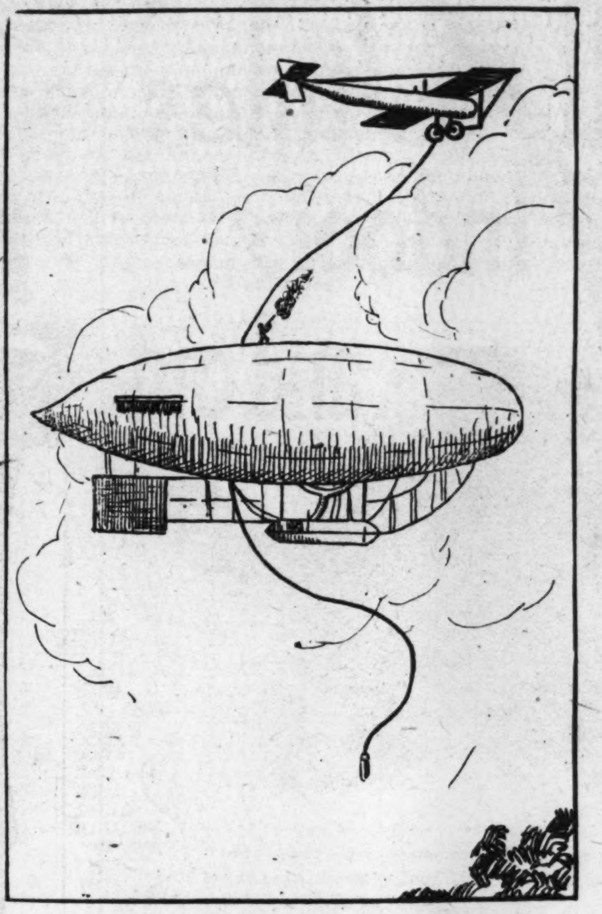
AT a recent conversazione of the Royal Society in London, W. M. Morley exhibited an electrically driven pendulum or balance wheel without any make-and-break commutator, or equivalent device. A simple one-phase alternate current induction motor with a rotor having a short-circuited winding, in the field of a stator excited by alternate current, develops a torque which is always in the direction of motion. If provided with a pendulum, or with a spring in the manner of a balance wheel, the rotor, if set in motion, will continue to oscillate, friction and other losses of any load put on it being made up by energy taken from the circuit.

Flying Mines and Torpedoes for Aerial Destruction

WITH the disastrous bombardment of Antwerp by explosives dropped from Zeppelin dirigible airships, a new factor is definitely brought into action in the warfare of nations. The terrific execution possible by an aerial war fleet operating in the darkness of night, out of the reach of high-angle and machine guns, is no longer a theoretical problem; and the engineer-inventors of the world must meet the emergency with new and highly specialized machines both of offense and defense.

In the Scientific American Joseph A. Steinmetz describes his newly invented and patented method of "mining the air" against attack by aeroplane or dirigible, etc.

He suspends a hand grenade from a small "pilot" balloon held to the ground by a long piano wire When the wind is high he proposes the substitution of a device entirely identical with the meteorological box kite in daily use at aerological observatories for lifting meteorographs to great heights. The handgrenade, somewhat differently suspended, takes the place of the meteorograph.



Attacking a Dirigible with Steinmetz Pendent Bomb.

The offensive action, or attack to destroy, involves problems new and more difficult. The attack, for example, against a Zeppelin would be delivered by several swift aeroplanes directly as the arrow speeds to the mark.

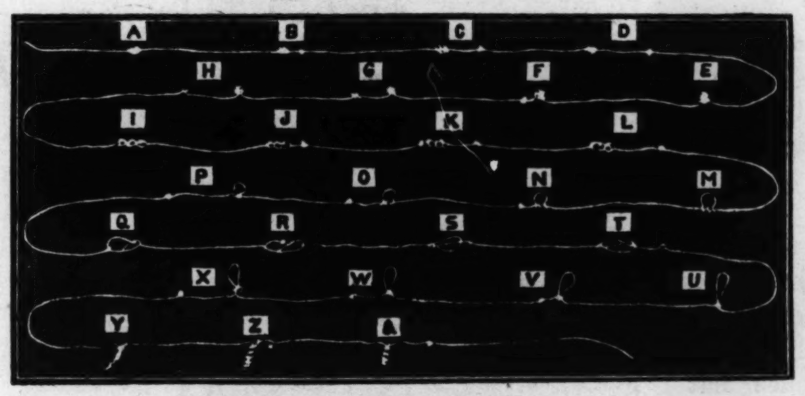
"It is not contemplated," says Mr. Steinmetz, "to maneuver an aeroplane with the pendant bomb hanging free. At the moment before passing over the object to be destroyed, the bomb is reeled out by gravity, and the speeding machine is across and beyond before the feed reel is checked. Using the enemy as the resistance body over which the wire is pulled permits of a run out of a thousand feet or more before the fatal charge is exploded into the gas bag."

In no sense does the Steinmetz aerial offensive device usurp the place of the artillery, but supplements it. This fact would be developed in an engagement between two aeroplanes mounting guns such as the bow mounts of the Voisin, Benet-Mercier, Farman, Deperdussin and other French aircraft.

The plane equipped with the Steinmetz bomb unit would rise over the enemy, disconcerting his range, and, letting slip at the instant of incidence the death-dealing tail, would finish the affair.

The weight of artillery units with ammunition runs into hundreds of pounds, whereas the training bomb and wire reel equipment complete weighs but 25 pounds, and can be used with light weight aeroplanes by inexperienced civilian operators.

Writing in Old Peru Was a Knotty Subject



Alphabet formed by tying knots in a string.

AN adaptation of the knotted string which served the ancient Peruvians as a means of communication, is suggested for the use of the blind, each knot representing, either alone or in combination, a letter of the English alphabet, says London Sketch. In its original form, the Peruvians, before the advent of the Spanish conquistadores, sent cords or thongs, suspended from a central top-band or cross bar, from one village to another as a warning or a call for help. Later, colored cords were introduced, and, as life grew more complex, an elaborate system of knots was devised, by which laws, edicts and historical events could be communicated. Each village had its official, whose duty it was to interpret the message, or quipu, as it was termed, and to prepare and send such answers or other messages as were necessary. When the quipu came from a distant province, an oral explanation was required, to enable the interpreter to correctly translate the knots. In the modern adaptation, the sightless pass the string between their fingers.

Many Lives Saved

OUT of 2500 persons who accepted the free annual medical examination offered by one of the large insurance companies, 40 per cent were found to be more or less out of order, most of the derangements being in the heart, blood vessels and kidneys. Of those impaired, 44 per cent did not suspect it. In every case the family physician was informed of the trouble. At the end of four years the death rate in this group of 2500 was only 50 per cent of that reasonably expected by the actuaries.

Deadly Effects of Modern Gunnery

DR. OCTAVE LAURENT, surgeon of St. John's Hospital, Brussels, who served with the allies right through the war in the Balkans, has just published an account of it from the viewpoint of the military surgeon. From a synopsis of his book in the Journal of the American Medical Association the following facts are taken:

Bulgaria, with a population of 4,300,000, put into the field more than 500,000 soldiers. In the first war 30,000 were killed and about 53,000 wounded. In the second war 16,000 were killed and 62,000 wounded. Thus, one-third of the effective force of the entire army, or 3 per cent of the population of the country, were either killed or wounded.

In the month of July, 1913, 150,000 men were killed and wounded on both sides, and of these more than half, at least 80,000, fell on the banks of the Bregalnitza in the six days from June 30 to July 5.

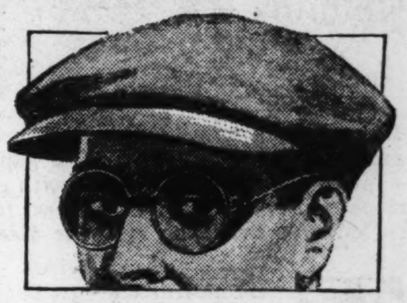
Dr. Laurent quotes with approval the remarks of a commentator on these figures who said that in the event of a war between any two first-class European Powers these figures would have to be multiplied by 10. The proportion holding good there would be not less than 1,500,000 dead and wounded in the course of the first month.

Bulgaria used during the last war 32,000,000 rifle bullets and 27,000,000 shrapnel balls. The artillery was responsible for more than half the deaths, but less than one-fifth of the wounded.

The high velocity of modern rifle bullets is responsible for a surprisingly large number of wounds with no serious consequences.

Night Goggles Save Eyes From Headlights

GOGGLES for use at night to protect the chauffeur's eyes from the dazzling headlights of an approaching car are a recent invention intended to overcome some of the objectionable features of powerful automobile lights. The upper part of the lens is supplied with a segment of dark amber, while the lower two-thirds is of a lighter color suitable for daylight use. When a driver is confronted with a brilliant searchlight glaring in his face, by tilting his head downward to bring his vision through the dark segment, the approaching machine and the roadway may be clearly seen and without discomfort, the glare being eliminated and the source of light sharply defined.



Goggles for night or day.

Would Electrocute Flies

AN electric fly-swatter is the invention of a German manufacturer. It is really a trap, within which is a cylindrical coil of bare wire, wound closely together, connected at the upper end with any source of supply by a socket plug. The lower end is not connected so that ordinarily no current is passing through the coil. Whenever an insect is attracted to the trap and lights on the coil, it completes a circuit and is killed.

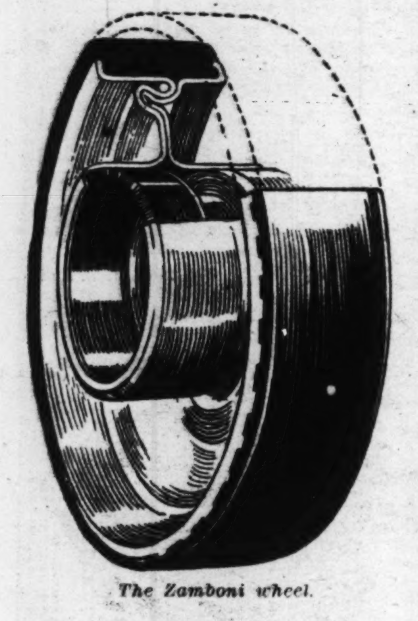
NEW AND ODD THINGS IN SCIENCE

Folding Sheet Metal to Make Strong and Solid Wheels

WHAT looks like an entirely new principle in wheel construction is shown in the accompanying illustration. It is the invention of Lawrence Zamboni, a mechanical engineer who has made a specialty of work in sheet metal. His idea is to make a wheel of any size and for almost any purpose by joining two sheets of metal, stamped in such a way that they will interlock in a double fold.

In the drawing these folds are seen below the tire. The two sides are stamped separately from sheets of steel or brass; a ring of wire is placed upon one of them in the outermost fold; the two sides are placed together and one blow from the stamping press drives the folds into each other, turning down the fold in which the wire ring lies and locking the whole rigidly. The hub can be of any desired form, depending on the work for which the wheel is designed.

The same operation clamps the teeth of the outer rim into the edges of a solid leather tire, shapes them into the curve needed for the rim of a pulley wheel or to hold the tire of an automobile, a freight car or a wagon.



The Zamboni wheel.

The wheel from which the illustration was taken is that of a roller skate to be mounted with ball bearings. A pulley wheel is much thinner at the hub and the rim, but the interlocked folds are exactly the same. For the wheel of a freight or other railroad car the two steel plates are formed into an ogival curve as they approach the hub, thereby giving the wheel the strength of an arch.

Mr. Zamboni claims for his wheel greater strength for the amount of material employed than in any other wheel; also that it can be made more easily than and at only a fraction of the cost of other wheels, and that it holds a rubber or leather tire more firmly. The importance of this last point will be understood best by machinists, for it makes practicable a leather-shod wheel for power shifting. A leather belt turning over a leather-shod wheel will have no slip whatever and therefore will transmit 100 per cent of power. There is a multitude of machines, such as those used for typesetting, printing, weaving, etc., which have many small wheels that cost a dollar or more apiece today through having to be turned from solid steel or brass, but that could be made for a few cents apiece if stamped from steel plates and joined as are those invented by Mr. Zamboni.

Potato Diet for Rheumatism

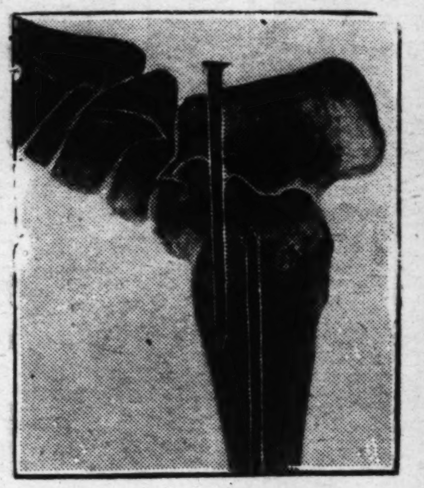
THE potato may prove the most useful solvent, apart from drugs, of the uric acid which is the prime cause of rheumatism in the human system. This is the conclusion of Dr. M. Hildhede, the noted Danish food reformer, whose experiments have shown that a diet of potatoes exclusively is capable of dissolving more than six times the quantity of uric acid resulting from the diet itself.

Two things have to be borne in mind in connection with a diet of potatoes. They require a great deal of mastication, and butter should always be eaten with them to supply the proportion of fat required in our daily food.

How Dr. Murphy Mends Bones by Nailing Them Together

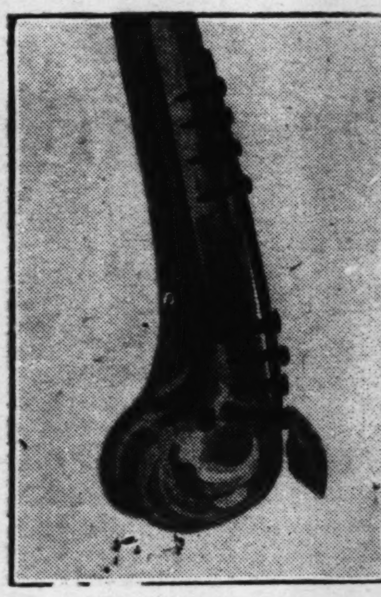
DR. JOHN B. MURPHY'S success in fastening broken bones together with ordinary wire nails is one of the most astonishing feats of modern surgery. It is by no means his only method of healing fractures, for he rarely if ever applies it to the shaft of a bone. In such cases he often cuts a long slot in the bone and inserts a graft of bone from the patient's shin, fastening this with nails or pegs of bone. In breaks close to the ends of long bones, where the bony tissue is spongy, he generally uses nails alone.

The four X-ray pictures reproduced herewith are taken from "The Clinics of John B. Murphy" (Saunders), from which also the text that describes each is condensed. Dr. Murphy operates at the Mercy Hospital, Chicago. While he works he talks, and what he says is so lucid, so dramatic that surgeons go from all over the world to see and hear, and they go home again stimulated and enthusiastic to apply in their own practice the daring surgery they have watched and the illuminating lessons they have learned.

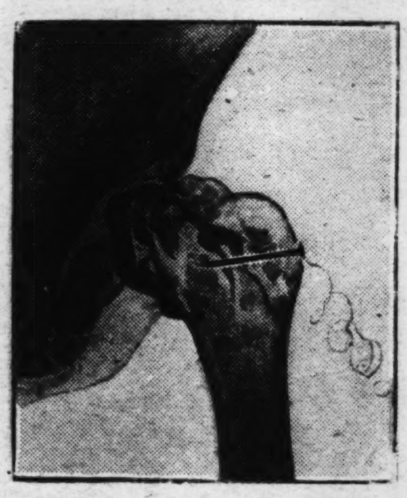


Charcot ankle, that is, a broken ankle that caused no pain, probably because it was due to a disease of the bone itself. This patient's other leg had been amputated. The condition of this ankle made it impossible that he should ever bend it again. "That foot is out of commission," said Dr. Murphy. "What can you do? You can expose the ankle, take off the lower articular surface of the tibia (the principal bone of the lower leg) and the upper articular surface of the astragalus (the ankle bone), freshen the surfaces of these bones, place them in accurate apposition, and then fix them by driving a 14 or 16 penny nail into the sole of the foot through the os calcis (heel bone) and astragalus into the tibia, and you get a bony ankylosis (stiffening of a joint by growth of extra bone). He will have a stiff ankle, but a leg he can walk on without any hazard."

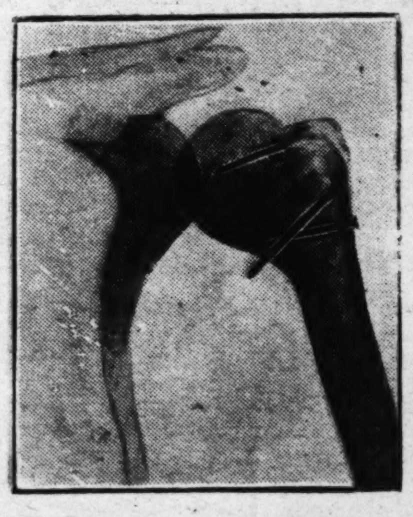
Dr. Murphy cut away an inch and a half of the end of the tibia with a chisel, and removed half an inch of the upper surface of the asthagalus. This gave him two good surfaces for contact; he put the bones together with the foot at right angles to the leg and slightly inverted. To maintain this position he drove two 16-penny nails into the sole of the foot, through the os calcis (heel bone) and astragalus into the tibia, one about one inch behind and slightly internal to the other. The wound was closed with horsehair and the leg was put into a plaster of Paris cast. The editor of "The Clinics of John B. Murphy, M. D.," adds the comment: "The case progressed favorably."



Lower end of femur (upper leg bone) shattered in a railway accident on Jan. 27, 1914. On Feb. 14 Dr. Murphy found the lower end of the upper fragment had been drawn forward and downward till it penetrated the capsule of the knee joint, while the upper end of the lower fragment had been bent backward. The jagged bones cut through the skin. The leg was stretched by traction; the lower fragment was skidded into place; the two parts were fastened together with an eight-screw Lane plate and the leg was put into a plaster cast. In this, as in other operations upon the bones, Dr. Murphy did not touch the wound with his hands, but performed all manipulation by means of instruments. This X-ray picture, taken on May 8, shows perfect union of the bones and the operative wound had healed perfectly.



Head of the femur (thigh bone) in a woman whose hips had become practically motionless as a result of ankylosis, or growth of bone in and around the joint. At a clinic held at Mercy Hospital, Chicago, on April 21, 1914, for the foreign members of the International Surgical Congress, Dr. Murphy removed the head of the femur from its socket, cleaned out the latter, chiselled away the growth of extra bone, inserted a flap of fat and other tissue between the head of the femur and the socket, cleaned up the head of the femur and fastened the trochanter (or outer prominence, to which the great muscles are attached) back into place with a nail. The patient was out of bed in five weeks and left the hospital on June 13, able to walk without a crutch but with a cane and to sit in a chair with perfect comfort.



Head of the humerus (upper arm bone), fractured and dislocated in an automobile accident on Jan. 9, 1914. On Jan. 21 Dr. Murphy opened up the shoulder, put the head of the humerus back into its socket, set the fragments together and fastened them with three nails. The muscles were sutured over the bones. The wound healed by primary union. The patient left the hospital on Feb. 23, wearing his arm in a sling and putting the shoulder through passive movements. The X-ray shows the fragments in excellent position.

Rattlesnake Oil

THERE is a constant demand for rattlesnake oil, so much so that F. B. Armstrong of Brownsville, Tex., is making a living from his rattlesnake farm. He sells the oil for $8 an ounce. It has a reputation for curing rheumatism, but it is the rubbing that drives away pain.

Whooping Cough Is Often Fatal

FIVE hundred children died of whooping cough in New York City last year. In 1906, according to the United States Census, 6324 children under 5 years of age died of whooping cough. The reports of the United States Public Health Service show that in 1910 the death rate per 100,000 population from whooping cough was 11.4.

A recent meeting of the New York Academy of Medicine section in pediatrics was devoted to a discussion of these figures, and an attempt to arouse the medical profession, the health authorities, the hospitals and the public to a greater appreciation of the perilous nature of this common disease of childhood. It was brought out that whooping cough is more dangerous to young children than to older, 96 per cent of the deaths being in children less than 5 years of age. The mortality statistics do not give a proper impression of the ravages of whooping cough, for they do not include the deaths from other causes, such as summer diarrhoea, to which whooping cough makes children especially susceptible and against which it diminishes their power of resistance and lessens their chances of survival.

Whooping cough is directly contagious; it is difficult to limit the spread of the disease because its most infectious period is during the first two weeks, when it is difficult if not impossible to make a definite diagnosis.

Children with whooping cough should live in the open air; their windows must be open at night and they must be kept in bed if their temperature is above 100 degrees Fahrenheit. They should be fed with small quantities and often. When they throw up a meal another should be given to replace the one lost.

Human Telegraph System Greatest

THE greatest network of telegraph wires in the universe is the nervous system of the human body, which most of us instinctively put into daily use as a self-protective agency.

A friend comes up behind you to administer a slap on the back. You instinctively tighten your muscles, hold your breath and become rigid, because in this brief second consciousness has telegraphed to the lower centers in the brain and spinal cord that an enemy is near and that life must be protected. There is an instinctive movement to withdraw the body out of harm's way.

A chemist working in a laboratory was once handling a dangerous fluid when an explosion took place and scattered the caustic matter into his face and over his person. He was greatly alarmed lest his sight had been injured, but an oculist found that only the outer surfaces of the lids were affected, so quick had been the reflex response commanding the lids to close and protect the precious eyesight. This reflex closure of the eyelids was an object of wonder to the ancients, and the Apostle John writing his Revelations in the New Testament declared that he believed the earth would, at Judgment Day, be swallowed up in "the twinkling of an eye." Were he writing in these days he would probably make some reference to electricity, so unpoetic and objective have all our notions of time and space become.

Pulling Teeth for Oral Sepsis

IT SEEMS that in England it is a common practice to pull all the teeth in order to cure pyorrhoea alveolaris or Rigg's disease. Sir James Goodheart, the famous surgeon, has raised an earnest protest against this. Certain dentists defend it, on the ground that oral sepsis is a common cause of rheumatic diseases of the joints and of other diseases. To these Sir James replies in a letter to the Lancet, in which he says:

"To one not an expert it seems more reasonable to hold that so long as teeth are good, firm in their sockets, free from pain and serviceable for easy mastication, there is something to be said on the side of keeping our own rather than taking to others that we know not of. We seem to be far too ready to jump from the latest hypothesis of oral sepsis to the proof thereof. The changes said to occur in the bone in these cases, for example, have they been clearly distinguished from those that must exist in company with retrocession of the gum?—an exceedingly common condition that carries with it usually no sign of sepsis."

The Burning of Louvain

THIS painting, by the noted English illustrator, S. Begg, was made under the supervision of an Oxford University man, A. J. Dawe, who was in the city when the ancient Belgian town was partially destroyed. The famous Hotel de Ville (or city hall) was not harmed. It was surrounded by German baggage wagons as though for the protection of the centuries-old edifice.

"The German officers," writes Mr. Dawe, "dashing about the streets in fine motor cars, made a wonderful sight. They were well dressed, shaven, and contented looking; they might have been assisting at a fashionable race meeting."

Although the city hall was fortunately spared, the university, with its valuable library of rare volumes and manuscripts, the Cathedral and other buildings of beauty and value, were delivered to the flames. Many hundred homes are reported to have been destroyed.

Louvain, according to Belgian tradition, was the site of a camp of Julius Caesar.

Across the square from the city hall was the fine old Church of St. Pierre, in the form of a cross, with a low tower to which the spire had never been added. It was built between 1425 and 1497 on the site of a still older church. It contained seven chapels, in two of which were the celebrated pictures by Diedrich Douts, formerly attributed to Memling.

The four other noteworthy churches were St. Gertrude, St. Quentin, St. Michael and St. Jacques. These were damaged, but doubtless will be restored.

Among the university buildings destroyed was the famous hall of the Cloth Workers' Guild, dating back to 1317, where the university was first founded.
